

WINE PRODUCTION IN SOUTHERN FRANCE

At the session of the International Viticultural Congress, in October 1914, at Montpellier, France, M. St. Pierre, professor in the medical school of that city, by invitation, gave some facts in regard to the fabrication of imitated wines, a branch of business which had of late rapidly developed in Herault, especially at Cette and Meze. The product of this manufacture is mostly exported, the bulk being sent to Russia, Denmark, Holland, England, and North and South America. Cete alone makes nearly 8,000,000 gallons per annum, worth about 15,000,000 francs. Two-thirds of this aggregate are consumed in America. The only wines that can be successfully imitated are those rich in alcohol, such as the wines of Spain and Portugal. It is true that grape juice is the only thing omitted in the composition of these wines, as that is the cheapest ingredient, coloring matter used to a great extent, as the wines to be imitated are white. The Portuguese formerly colored their wines with ellorwood, but abandoned it in 1819, on finding that it injured the wine. The imitation of Spanish wines utilizes a large amount of cheap wines in the south of France, the production of which has been stimulated of late years. These wines show scarcely 11 degrees of alcohol, but with the addition of sirup of mulberry and alcohol the strength is raised to 21 degrees. The professor with great interest discussed the encouragement of this industry. Some difference of opinion was manifested in regard to the use of sulphuric acid in fermentation. It was contended that in very small proportions it could be used to advantage and without danger. Others thought that it should be combined with gypsum, thus securing a double benefit, in which an equivalent of tartaric acid was evolved, which is the natural acid of the wine. It was objected that the sulphuric acid of commerce is too often charged to a dangerous extent with arsenical principles. The members of the congress visited Cette and Meze, and inspected several manufactories. One of the largest of these had their stores over 200,000 gallons in cellars containing from 80,000 to 100,000 gallons each. The total value of the whole deposit is stated at a million francs. The cost of storage, including casks, etc., amounts to 650,000 francs, at 10 francs per hectoliter. Vineland, in the neighborhood, yields 8000 francs per acre in wine, producing a total value of 10,000 francs per acre invested in the soil. If the phylloxera should compel the destruction of these vines, the value of the land will sink to one-fifth of what it is at present. At Meze one establishment astonished the visitors by the vast extent of its cooper-shops, and its steam-engines of great power pumping the wine from great cisterns into the casks. This extensive use of machinery has superseded in a large measure the expensive hand-labor formerly employed. In the south of France six hours is set for a week's work, and a change in the conditions of labor is foreshadowed in this primitive region. Combinations of workmen have at times elevated the day's wages to 20 francs for six hours' work. The congress also inspected the process of imitating Spanish wines.

NOTES FOR THE LADIES.—The new Spring fashions will be of chip. Plaids will be popular among spring dress goods. Feminine drapery is still concentrated at the back. A fashion exchange says hasques will be shorter in spring. The latest ball-dress tints are a silvery ciel blue and the yellow hues. A new kind of table napkins has a small specimen flower glass attached, the ring being generally of silver. A lady fashion writer says: Already our dresses are so tight that we can scarcely get a gutter—and they are to be tighter still. Duchesse lace is the favorite and most fashionable worn. It comes in the most elegant designs, fern leaves and other rich and artistic work. A pretty colifore in a sort of rosette of leaves of Valenciennes, laid over pink silk, holding in their centre a soft petal pink rose and a white alginate. The cluster of flowers used for a corsage bouquet has been worn high on the left shoulder, but the newest French dresses now have it placed on the left breast, just above the waist, and quite to one side.

A NOBLE ACT.—During the recent cold weather, tucked on one of the rawest nights of the weather, there arrived in the town of Dallas, Texas, a number of emigrants on their way to the Lone Star State. Without money and with no place to sleep that cold winter night, they were grouped upon the frozen ground in vacant lots. A girl who, according to the Talmage theory, retains civilization by dancing with dogs for $3 a week at a Dallas theatre, learning of their distress, steps forth from what the Rev. Talmage denominates "the gateway of hell," and procures food and shelter for them. Not satisfied yet, however, she informs the Mayor and others of the city, and her own charity is supplemented by additional victuals and clothing. The starving, freezing mothers, who, with their hungry, half-cold little ones, were on that winter night furnished with warmth and food by this kind-hearted girl, will probably differ somewhat from the Rev. Talmage in their opinion of Nellie Collins, the dog-dancer.
