150 Expected at Pioneer Reunion Here on June 24

Annual Homecoming Event May Attract Largest Crowd in History

Approximately 150 members of pioneer families are expected to attend the annual Pioneer picnic which will be held in the picnic grounds of the Anaheim city park Saturday, June 24. Special invitations have been sent out to many of those who attended the event last year to remind them of the occasion this spring.

The Pioneer Day picnic has grown in the past several years from a small reunion of members of pioneer families to a festival from wherein not only pioneer families, but descendants of other old-time residents are represented. Usually held on the second Saturday in June annually, the event was delayed two weeks this year because of conflicting events.

DINOSAUR NATIONAL MONUMENT, UTAH—To those travelers of a scientific mind, this place is a veritable bonanza. To those others who are not quite so interested in prehistoric reptiles, it would advise waiting five to seven years before making their visit. By that time the government will have completed its project and you will be able to look through glass windows and see the actual skeletons of those monsters that inhabited our country 150 to 200 million years ago.

THE LIVER. Doctors are being constantly requested to give patients something to "move the liver," when, as a matter of fact, no drug you take, for its purging effect, gets any closer to the liver than the food you eat. One of the chief functions of the liver is to manufacture bile, a most important fluid. The cells of the liver produce this bile, store some temporarily in the gall-bladder, while the balance is emptied into the digestive tract. After aiding digestion, most of this bile is reabsorbed by the blood, carried back to the liver to act as a stimulant for further production of bile. Strong purgatives act as a violent irritant, and force waste material through the intestines so fast the bile does not have time to be normally absorbed. The only reason the patient feels better, is because he has freed his system of accumulated waste matter, not because he has "stirred up his liver." Strong purgatives will do no permanent good, and will, when constantly resorted to, weaken the entire digestive system. Your liver is probably perfectly normal, let it alone. If you suffer from symptoms popularly believed to be "sluggish," "torpid" or "inactive" liver, form regular bodily habits. If the symptoms do not clear up, the trouble is probably elsewhere. Consult your doctor. JACKSON DRUG CO. 237 EAST CENTER ST. ANAHEIM-CAL.

FATHER'S DAY

There's something about Father's Day that should give most of us a bit of a guilty feeling. The world's most ardent holiday lovers, Americans almost ran out of dates on the calendar to celebrate this or that, before it was finally agreed to honor Dad for a day. Only five years ago the third Sunday in June was set aside for him.

Well, better late than never—and the date chosen is ideal. Many Dads have just finished a tough struggle of meeting the youngsters' school expenses, with perhaps the extras of graduation dresses and pins and parties. Many have just wangled a loan from the bank to help Junior, fresh out of college, get a start in his profession. And many are worrying over how to finance the family's vacation trip. About now, Dad surely needs a Day of his own!

A program to make him happy must be varied to suit each Dad. In general, though, he should be allowed to do as he pleases from dawn to dusk; golf all day, (and maybe have the evening out with the boys; come home, if he chooses, late for dinner—or late for breakfast. Don't charge any gifts to his account. And don't, if you congratulate him from afar, send telegrams collect or reverse the phone charges on him!

Now that at last Father has a Day, it should be a real one. He'll be back in harness, you know, footing the bills and shouldering the worries, the day after!

TO THE JUNE BRIDE

To a young couple leaving for their honeymoon, breathless after the ordeal of a ceremony punctuated by the scolding of the bride's family (nobody ever sobs for a groom!), there is nothing to be said. They hear no voices but each other's. They are the only inhabitants of an exquisite universe of moonbeams and dream-stuff.

Yet presently, in this realistic old world, the dreaming must give way to practicalities. The wise-bride knows that from now on that gala evenings of chiffon gowns and soft music may come a little less often; that cookbooks and budgets and marketing must also enter her world. And to help her proud young husband get ahead, she learns to stretch the paycheck, to place stability a little ahead of luxury.

Just as first, however, she may not realize how far her new responsibilities extend beyond her home and through the community. It may seem fun to drive to a larger city to shop in huge emporiums. But it isn't wise, for many reasons. First, entreprising hometown merchants, with the advantage of lower rentals than big city shops, fully meet the challenge of metropolitan competition both in quality and price. Second, the value of the newlywed's home, the security of the breadwinner's job, the future of his business, must be determined by community growth and prosperity. From homespender dollars come the taxes that maintain adequate police and fire protection, that keep up parks and playgrounds, improve schools and elevate standards of education.

So, when the bride shops at home, she builds for the future of her own family by contributing to the community welfare.

Every bride, whether she recognizes it or not, has an important role to play in building Anaheim.

AN ACT TO ABOLISH BUSINESS

Red ink inventories are seldom popular. And with most of our citizens in nearly every walk of life, fighting valiantly for a new foothold, perhaps it is bad psychology to publish the stark facts concerning conditions in California business. On the other hand, with the State Legislature seriously debating new tax proposals which would add more than $65,000,000 to the burden on business, industry and individual taxpayers, there are certain facts—unpleasant facts—which both taxpayers and legislators should have before them.

Here are some of them:
Three-fourths of California's business and industrial concerns operated last year at a loss.
797 of the 910 farm corporations in California reported "no net income."
493 of the 500 farm cooperatives in California likewise reported "no net income."
And 3025 of the 3673 real estate and investment corporations in California reported "no net income."

In nearly every line of business, there was more red ink than black—with taxes, in many instances, totalling more than payrolls.

But even that apparently is not enough to stop those who are determined to spend regardless of what happens to those who pay. For among the proposals now pending are A. B. 2652, which would tax business operating at a loss $500 on each million dollars of their book assets, and A. B. 2647, which would prohibit the deduction of interest on debts from taxable income. Either of those acts might well be termed: "An act to abolish business."

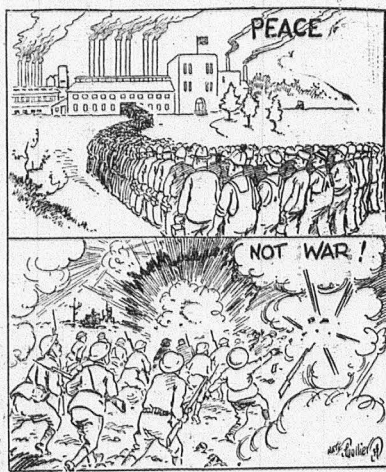

We are glad to note, however, that the economy bloc in the Legislature is still sticking by its guns and doing its utmost to force a return to sanity. We want jobs in California; not doles. And only business can supply them.

The MARCH OF TIME

Prepared by the Editors of TIME The Weekly Newsmagazine

TAX YIELD—
WASHINGTON—Having strangled the plans of John Hanes and Henry Morgenthau to revise corporation taxes this year Franklin Roosevelt last week executed a fast fadeaway which saved the faces (and possibly the resignations) of Hanes and Morgenthau. The face-saving compromise (influenced in part by press and congressional pressure) was effected at a White House luncheon. The president and Tax Revisionist Pat Harrison (who had huffily told Mr. Roosevelt he was going to get a new tax bill whether he liked it or not) were brought together by Jimmy Byrnes, the slickest compromiser in the senate. Giving in to an event almost unknown during the New Deal, Mr. Roosevelt finally told Morgenthau it was all right if he wanted to tell the congressmen to remove certain tax-irritants.
But Mr. Roosevelt did not exactly reverse himself on his tax program last week. He simply surrendered the ball to his opposed advisers on the fourth down to let them see what they could do with it. By his speech to the retailers week before he was still committed personally to more spending and the theory that the New Deal would work economically when an $80-billion dollar income is achieved.
All of which convinced many an observer, expert at noting recent trends and trivia of politics, that if the democratic party was still sponsoring the New Deal in 1940, Franklin Roosevelt was their man. Who but he had the personality to be elected on a spending-lending platform? Harry Hopkins? Harold Ickes? Bob Jackson? Henry Wallace? Nobody else, but Roosevelt, reasoned the observers.
Regardless of Mr. Roosevelt's understandable silence on his successor, his victor upon leaving the White House looked searchingly down the road for the bandwagon. Said New York's playwrighting Representative Sirovich: "He did not say that he should not be a candidate but from my talks with his most intimate advisers, I am convinced of his renomination . . . re-election."
Chicago's Mayor Kelley also doubtless neglected to say he would not. Twenty-four hours before Iowa's ex-Governor Charles L. McNair, the White House avowed "that his state's people would never be satisfied with a presidential candidate except Mr. Roosevelt or someone in harmony with his views."

NO STOMACH FOR WAR

News Item: "I want to make it plain that American industry has no stomach for war."—Howard Cooney, President of the National Association of Manufacturers.

When voices from the rapidly filling battery room screamed: "Keep it open!" Maness let the door fall back, counted five men who struggled through. Then as the water rushed toward the door, he swung it shut, clamped down the water-tight screw and turned his back. He had done his duty, had locked 26 men in the flooded compartments. One of them was Sherman Shirley, who was to have been married the next Sunday, with Minness as best man.

"In the darkness of the unflooded forward compartments the 33 who still lived began to wait. At intervals Lieutenant Naquin fired smoke bombs to ignite on the surface showing where the "Squalus" had sunk. He released a deck buoy containing a telephone. Four hours later the trapped men heard the engines of the "Squalus" sister ship, "Sculpin". Through the telephone buoy Naquin reported to the "Sculpin" what had happened before the line done. Somebody mentioned the 26 men trapped behind the bulkhead door. The commander shut him up. The air in the ship would last for perhaps 48 hours.

Twenty-four hours after the "Squalus" went down the navy had every available expert and rescue device on the scene. Calm weather was a godsend. At 10:15 a. m. Diver Martin Shiley went over the side of the "Falcon" and was lowered to the deck of the "Squalus". Under the terrible pressure in icy water, work was very slow. It took him 20 minutes to aidge a shackle over a ring on the submarine's deck, clip a bolt through, tighten a nut. A cable was attached to the shackle. Before Shiley was back aboard the "Falcon", nearly an hour later, the rescue bell, reeling in the line he had attached, was pulling itself to the deck of the "Squalus".
There, two men working inside the chamber clamped the bell over a hatch like a swollen blister on the rump of the sunken ship. The hatch was opened and Lieut. J. C. Nichols and six seamen climbed into the bell.
At 1:45, just 29 hours after the "Squalus" had made its dive, the seven men were helped aboard the "Falcon". At four o'clock, nine men reached safely. Three hours later a third group of nine came up. Before nine o'clock the last living men aboard the "Squalus", including Lieut. Naquin, were taken into the bell. They had got out just in time. Water in the batteries had begun to generate chlorine gas.
As the rescue chamber came within 150 feet of the surface on its final trip up, the lower cable fouled on its winch. For three hours and 45 minutes Lieutenant Naquin and seven men had to revise their calculations on the probability of death, while around them divers worked desperately in the darkness. Finally the jammed cable was cut and the bell hauled up foot by foot. At 12:38 a. m. of the second day the "S. Naquin" had rescued its living. Below, in the hull of the deep-diving "Squalus", 26 corpses slept.

WHAT TO DO—
WASHINGTON—Administration leaders on Capitol Hill let it be known that they would like congress to adjourn by July 15, a date chosen because by then Mr. Roosevelt will have examined the king and queen in Washington and in Hyde Park, and returned from his annual cross-country survey "to see what the nation is thinking." Until July 15 (at least) congress will sit in Washington over: 1) Neutrality legislation, which had seemed moribund until Secretary Hull pleaded last week for amendments to allow sale of arms to (a) nations at war; 2) a tax bill; 3) social security. Mr. Roosevelt could feel relieved that congressional items like further WPA investigation and revision of the Wagner act seemed likely to die of over-sight.

DEAD DOGFISH—
PORTSMOUTH, New Hampshire—Promptly at 7:30 one U. S. submarine last week the U. S. submarine "Squalus" (rhymes with "fall us"), Lieutenant Oliver Naquin commanding, put out from the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., to practice fast dives. Besides her commander she carried four other officers, three civilian observers and 51 enlisted men. Newest and one of the finest of the navy's submarines (she was commissioned in March, cost $5,000,000 to build), the "Squalus" was named for the dogfish, which dives fast and swims deep.
At 8:40, five miles off the tiny Isles of Shoals, the "Squalus", diving ahead on her Dressed engines, dove.
A voice barked through the telephone into Lieutenant Naquin's ear that water was pouring into the engine room. Under the weight of water, resting in stern, the "Squalus" tilted bow up at a 45-degree angle, hesitated, shivered, slowly sank stern-first toward the bottom. The lights went out.
Control and after-battery rooms stood Electrician's Mate Lloyd Maness, whom his shipmates called "a swell little guy". As the "Squalus" sank Maness tugged at the heavy door, which, because of the ship's angle, had to be swung uphill. His job was to shut that door. He had it almost closed

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

A week ago it was canned beef (from the Argentine) that had the politicians talking. This week it is "canned talk" (from Washington) that has them "beating."

The canned talk in this instance is a new series of radio programs just inaugurated by the National Emergency Council. It works this way: Various government officials make speeches into radio transcription recording machines. The records are then sent to radio stations for broadcasting.

Purpose of the canned speech series, according to the official NEC pronouncement, is to give small stations which do not have chain hookups a chance to broadcast the pronouncements of the Administration dignitaries. The series, said the NEC announcement, would be confined to factual discussion of the operations of each department of the government.

First to take the air was the President, and in his "canned fireside" Washington observers say the apparent real purpose of the program showed through, to wit: A rehearsed attack on the press, at which the Brain Trust has been pointing an accusing finger of bias for many months.

For example, in that inaugurating broadcast, the Chief Executive declared: "In some communities it is the unhappy fact that ONLY through the radio is it possible to overtake loudly proclaimed untruths or greatly exaggerated half-truths."

So it is that canned talk is almost as sore a subject around the Capitol as canned beef. A good many of the Congressmen are irritated by the radio series and when and if the more important matters of state are ironed out at the Capitol, there may be some fireworks over this matter.

Meanwhile, it is not likely that the canned beef argument will die for a long time. Cattle raisers and the public in general, have known their wrath pretty well made in Washington and Congress is in no mood to see the issue smoothed over with any facile explanations.

London's balloon network, which the Britishers hope will protect that city from air raids, was the subject of conversation at a National Press Club luncheon table the other day.
During debate over the effectiveness of such a protective screen, one correspondent dryly observed:

"Well, Washington is pretty well protected these days, too. The sky around here is filled with political trial balloons."
If the alphabetical agencies confuse you, take comfort in the knowledge that they also confuse even the people who work for the government.
On a recent radio question-and-answer program, six government clerks were asked to identify the following: FDIC, FTC, FHLBB, FPC, and FAA. Not one of the clerks could give a correct answer, although each of the five agencies named are important cogs in the administration machine.

Careless Smokers Destroy Forests

With fire hazards increased because of the light seasonal rainfall, motorists are urged by the Automobile Club of Southern California to observe the "no smoking" rule in posted areas and to obey the provision of the vehicle code which prohibits the throwing of lighted matches or tobacco from a vehicle outside a business or residential district.

Forest fires can be kept at a minimum if campers and motorists will abide by regulations of the United States forest service. Campfire permits must be secured before building any fire on national forest land. This applies to fires in stoves burning wood, kerosene, or gasoline and also to stoves in trailers. Permits may be obtained without charge at all district offices of the automobile club upon the signed agreement to abide by the required rules.

All parties camping in national forests must carry a shovel and axe of specified size suitable for fire fighting purposes. Shovels must be 36 inches overall length, with a blade eight inches wide, and axes not less than 26 inches long with a head weighing two pounds or more.

The seriousness of fire hazard this year is evidenced by the fact that the forest service has closed several areas in southern California to public use for the duration of the season.

Drunk Driver Wins Stay of Judgment. Melvin G. Musick of Long Beach, convicted Monday by Justice of the Peace Charles Kuehn, of a charge of driving while intoxicated was given a stay of judgment until June 19.

YOUR HOME AND MINE. BY ANNE WILSON. Both mace and nutmeg come from the same African tree.

Light conditioning. You may have read in recent months about "light conditioning," but its exact meaning may have evaded you. You may be wondering, "What is light conditioning? Why is it desirable in my home?" The term, light conditioning, evolved, as is evident from the term, "conditioning," in an air conditioned building, the temperature, humidity, freshness and cleanliness of the air is electrically controlled and the building is more pleasant because of this appointment. Similarly, light conditioning means careful control of artificial light. A light conditioned home is attractive and cheerful. But light conditioning's advantages do not stop at beauty. They extend into the important realm of eyesight protection—a vital factor for grown-ups and children alike. You can light condition your home by providing plenty of glareless light at every point where close fitting is done. Using bulbs of adequate size takes care of the matter of quantity of light. Quality is insured by shading all bulbs, using shades of light color or ones that have light filters. Shades should also be wide on the top. Lamp shades should be diffusing glass bowls to provide that important guardian against eyestrain—general room illumination. Light conditioning your home, then, simply means providing good light throughout its rooms—a measure which is desirable because of beauty, convenience and protection of vision.

California Gains in Total of Cars

Although 1938 motor vehicle registrations for the nation declined 7 per cent below the 1937 figure, California registrations were up 1.1 per cent for the same period, according to official bureau of public roads statistics received by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

California had a total motor vehicle registration of 2,510,987 which was exceeded only by New York with a total registration of 2,584,123 motor vehicles. National registration figures revealed a total of 23,201,649 passenger vehicles and 4,224,051 trucks. These figures do not include 108,761 federally owned vehicles and 257,469 vehicles operated by local governmental agencies.

Gasoline consumption showed a slight increase. During 1938 California collected $47,117,000 from the three-cent gasoline tax and $23,830,000 from registration receipts and miscellaneous fees. The traveler's tree of Madagascar grows fan-shaped, with the broad sides facing north and south, and its edges facing east and west, since it catches and holds more moisture this way.

Farms of the United States have a total of 400,000,000 chickens, with more than 1,400,000,000 chicks being hatched annually.
