In a Pretzel Factory.

[Cincinnati Times-Star]

The reporter descended a pair of steps under a saloon and entered a small, hot room, with a row of furnaces in the wall and a row of white-aproned Germans working at a table.

"This is where they make pretzels."

"You see, this is a pretzel bakery," said a venerable man, apparently the boss of the establishment. And then the old baker kindly volunteered to explain the process to the writer.

There is nothing strange or mysterious about the baking of a pretzel. In some cities machinery is used, but none has yet been introduced in Cincinnati, although the marvelous number of pretzels made and eaten here would seem to necessitate it. White family flour, water, yeast and a great quantity of salt are the only ingredients used in preparing the pretzel for the oven. The dough is tough and heavy, and after it has been fairly worked, is placed in great heaps on the long tables before the workmen. These grab a handful at a time, roll it out into long, thin strips and twist up into the proper shape. One workman can make a pretzel every two seconds. After the dough has been worked into the form of a pretzel, it is placed on a flat wooden rack in the center of the room. As a rack is filled, another is placed on top of it. Each rack holds 100 pretzels, and the tier ten times as many.

The pretzels are next put into the immense ovens over the furnaces and thoroughly baked. They are then run through a solution of lye water, the purpose of making these look bright and glossy on the "crust." pretzel, after being sprinkled with salt, is ready for sale. Those intended to keep some time, however, undergo one more process. They are put into the steam box, where they remain two or three hours. This renders them capable of being kept many months. A very plausible supposition has gained currency among beer drinkers, that the great quantity of salt which is found in the pretzel serves the clever purpose of promoting thirst, and thus increasing the profits of the saloon keeper. This is a mistake. Salt is very generally used by all pretzel bakers, but it is done for the purpose of keeping the pretzel from becoming stale and giving it a sharp, decided taste.

A Punctuation Puzzle.

The following article forcibly illustrates the necessity of proper punctuation. It can be read in two ways, describing a crippled man or a very good man, the result depending upon the manner in which the point is placed. It is very well worth carefully study, and particularly young people:

He is an old soldier and a man in years and feebleness as he is poor and in want. He is unfortunate in his occupation, failing in supplying the wants of men who have failed in the downfall of his neighbors. He never progresses in the prosperity of his fellow creatures; he is always ready to assist in distributing the misfortunes of others. He takes no pleasure in seeing the birds he has unfortunately disgraced in seeing discord among his friends and acquaintances he takes no pride in laboring to promote the cause of Christianity; he has not been negligent in endeavoring to support all public teachers he makes no effort to soothe his evil passions he strives hard to build up Satan's kingdom he lends no aid to the support of the gospel among the heathen he contributes largely to the evil adversary he pays great heed to the devil he will never go to heaven he must go where he will receive the just recompense of reward.

Perfumes of the Orange.

From the orange flowers, leaves and rind are obtained three valuable and valuable perfumes. 1. The Neroli petale, by distilling the flowers with hard. 2. Oil neroli petale, or oil neroli bigarade, by distilling the leaves of the sweet and bitter orange respectively. 3. Oil neroli petit grain, obtained by distilling the leaves and unripe fruit. 4. Oil essence of Portugal, obtained by rolling the fruit in a metal cup covered with spikes on its inner surface (known as rapé), which wounds the rind, and causes the essence to flow from the oil glands. 5. Commercial oil of orange, obtained by expressing or distilling orange peel.

A Solemn Question

A distinguished Boston divine, of unusually solemn and impressive appearance, went out to a country town not long ago to lecture. He arrived early in the afternoon, and all the town "spotted" him within five minutes as a very great and very saintly man.

He went into a drug store, and, in tones that froze the young blood of the clerk behind the counter, said:

"Young man, do you smoke?"

"Y—yes, sir," said the trembling clerk; "I'm sorry, but I learned the habit young and haven't been able to quit it yet."

"Then," said the great divine, without the movement of a muscle or the abatement of a shade of the awful solemnity of his tone, "can you tell me where I can get a good cigar?"

He Knew His Father.

[From the New York Times.]

"Now, Johnnie," said the teacher, "if your father borrows $100 and promises to pay $10 a week how much will he owe in seven weeks?"

"One hundred dollars," said Johnnie.

"I'm afraid you don't know your lesson very well," remarked the teacher.

"I may not know my lesson very well," Johnnie frankly acknowledged, "but I know my father."

A chapter of calamities is reported to have happened to a colored man in Abbeyville county, S. C., one day recently, and the local paper states them in the following order: "Two of his dogs, his wife and his horse all fell dead."

The Cure of Children.

BOSTON, Mass.—A leading medical journal thinks it is about time mothers should know how seriously the health of children is imperilled by the use of preparations containing morphia and opium, and given for the cure of colds and coughs. The chemist of the Brooklyn Board of Health, Mr. Otto Grothe, Ph. D., a graduate of the University of Kiel, Germany, certifies officially that recently a harmless and yet effective article for such complaints has come to his notice. He refers to the newly discovered Red Star Cough Cure, which he found purely vegetable.

THE LONDON EXHIBIT

Of the Various Kinds of Food, Dress and Dwellings.

Professor Chandler Gives an Idea of Some of the More Notable Features of Health Exhibition.

[New York Sun.]

Professor Charles F. Chandler, of Columbia college, New York city, who was appointed a commissioner to the International health exhibition held in London the last summer, has returned and is now preparing his report. The object of the exhibition was to illustrate as vividly and in as practical a manner as possible, food, dress, the dwelling, the school, and that working, as affecting the conditions of healthful life."

"It was a great fair," said Professor Chandler to a reporter when asked about it after his return. "Dozens in each manufacturers of all kinds of food, of all kinds of dress, and of all kinds of dwellings and houses. Fittings had their exhibits, and covered an immense amount of space. It was, in fact, an exhibition of the products of civilization. There was nothing there absolutely new, but the bringing of all these things together for comparison was new and interesting. One of the most important departments was that of dwellings. The subject of houses for the poor is attracting a good deal of attention in London. The models of American tenement houses were carefully studied and discussed. The English have furnished Americans with the best plumbing devices, there they have nothing to learn from us. The question of treatment of sewage for the purpose of making valuable fertilizer, or at least of saving that might be thrown into the rivers, has been solved theoretically, but the expense of the process is too great for practical purposes. People talk about the city selling its sewage but they do not understand the first principles.

"The American system of supervision of matters pertaining to public health has no exact counterpart in London. There is no board of health, but they accomplish in part the same results in a different and less effective way. Work of such kind is done by districts, and as authorities in different districts sometimes work at cross purposes, just as they used to in New York years ago. Their police reports show that the laws against the adulteration of food are more rigidly enforced there than here. There is a public official that must analyze every parcel of food presented to him charged with being adulterated, and on his report the vendor is prosecuted. These matters were the subject of the several conferences held in Prince Albert hall occasionally.

"The American system of free vaccination was discussed. Over there they have a compulsory system, and one humanized matter. The people object, and strong. They oppose it. They have never adopted cow pox farms as they have in many places in this country. You can have no pure lymph unless it is a good thing. An imperfect attempt to get up an anti-vaccination society in New York failed.

"There were large numbers of books published on health subjects during the exhibition. Health schools, Health societies, Health journals, Health Records and Portfolios, were the titles of three out of more than a score. All were in cheap pamphlet form, and the sale was enormous. Besides that there were the publications of various auxiliary societies of the Kingdom, which sold freely. One of the most successful educational efforts of these societies was the printing of health posters. Handbills containing the most valuable information about the care of children, and of the sick, and of the wounded, and of the homes of rich and poor were distributed and posted on bill boards in public places. To supplement these, or almost circulars, printed in rhyme and in other forms which would attract attention, were distributed. The police could not avoid reading them, and in reading gained valuable information. What, for instance, would be more likely to attract a mother than a neatly printed circular illustrated with a handsome baby, and bearing the title, 'Rules for the Management of Infants?'

"Could the mother understand the circular?"

"She could if she could read. The attendance was wonderful and included every class or condition of people. The cabs on the streets displayed signs which read, 'To the Healtheries.' The exhibition was in every way educational. People went there to be amused, and were not disappointed; they were also educated in spite of themselves."

"Have the English inventors surpassed us in any other way besides closet plumbing?"

"Yes. They have a gas-burner that uses less gas, makes less smoke, and gives more light than any American invention. I brought over samples for use in the college.

"Another exhibit of interest included a lot of models of the recently discovered Roman bathtubs and bathing tanks erected at bath during Roman supremacy. There was a great enough variety to show that the Romans knew all about liquid comfort.

"Another valuable exhibit contained a lot of compressed lime 'cartridges.' They are for use in coal mines in place of gunpowder, which is objected to because of its gases. The lime brings down the coal and leaves the air untainted."

"What was shown in the line of disinfectants?"

"Everything. This exhibit demonstrated that the best disinfectants are those which belong to no one, and on which the profit is so small that the venders cannot afford to advertise them. The best are also without odor. The chief objection to carbolic acid is the smell, which leads people to think they have taken every needed precaution, when in fact they have not used enough to amount to anything."

A Modern Job.

[William Washburn.]

"The most patient man I ever knew lived in San Francisco," said my friend H—. "One day I saw a man, pistol in hand, pursuing a second, who was in his shirt sleeves, down the street. Mr. Shirtsleeves ran sullenly along and out, this way and that. 'Bang! bang!' Six times his pursuer fired, without hitting the mark. Then Mr. Shirtsleeves walked from under the cart, drew a revolver and a bead, and fired. Another one fell dead. At the trial the jury pronounced the prisoner not guilty, and the papers dubbed him the modern Job—the most patient man in California."

ROUNDING THE POINT.

[E. A. Rand.]

"Ha-ha! Be quiet, my men!" he cries,
"The way is rough, the point is long;
And yet beyond, the harbor lies.
Push on, though wind and tide be strong.

"Now tack again! Her canvas loose,
And give her every inch of sail;
The lighthouse past, beyond is home!
A-a-a, alas! We lay—lie, fail!

"Once more, away we dash, away!
Now half a lee, luff round, ho-ho!
Hard, hard-a-lee! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Far round the rugged point we go!

The surging waves around the bow,
The sails above that straining swell,
Each creaking spar and whistling rope,
They seem to cry, All's well! All's well!

Oh souls on board, you may not know
What eyes ashore are watching you,
Who, seeing all yet dare and do,
Will boldly push the waters through.

And yet who breast the gales of life,
What hearts you steer, you never know,
Fail not! Sail on! They follow you
As round the rugged point you go.

"Telepathy," or Spook Investigation.

[New York Cor. Chicago Herald.]

Spooks are among the things which come into high favor with New Yorkers who have the time to cultivate strange hobbies. The subject is made to bear the same burlesque relation to science that crazy-quilt patchwork does to art. Telepathy is the word used to designate those its devotees discuss, in a manner which they think is profound, the question whether dying messages can pass between persons widely separated under some heretofore unsuspected law of nature. A Society for Psychical Research has been formed, and in its meetings the members tell one another of their presentiments which have been verified. Most of these mild and yet wild scientists attribute the phenomena to the intermediation of disembodied spirits, and thus get fairly within the limits of modern spiritualism, but they do not acknowledge that they are at all in sympathy with the movement, and would not think of affiliating with its people. Probably they would also resent the suggestion of any likeness between an afternoon tea, given to a party of their women, and a swapping of ghost stories by old crones over tansy cakes in the golden times.

Countenance is accorded to this movement, however, by genuinely scientific minds, and I could name several college professors who are apparently returning to belief in superstitions of former centuries. An illustration: a lawyer of local renown and a taste for antiquities, owns a lot of Mexican curiosities, which he has loaned to the Metropolitan museum of art. A girl apostle of telepathy picked up one of the objects, an embroidered cap, and put it on her head.

"Oh, I feel actually exalted, "I'd be shot in an hour if I wore this."

She declared that she knew of no reason for the impression, but that it was vivid and startling. That cap was one which Montezuma wore within an hour of his capture. You may take her word for it if you have a mind to, that she did not know or care at the cap's history before the thought flashed into her head with its conduct. The talk of society at present is mostly about such occurrences as proof of the new phase of philosophy.

New and Dangerous Counterfeit.

[San Francisco Bulletin.]

A very dangerous counterfeit of the American $5 pieces was recently taken by the Silver United Flow company and sent to the United States mint in this city for assay. In size and weight and general execution it was a very close resemblance, so much so that several parties in the coiner's department of the mint at first pronounced the coin genuine. The color was like that of gold coins alloyed with silver. The legend, "In God We Trust," on close examination, was not quite as distinct as on the genuine coin; in all other respects the die was perfect, even to the small "s" for San Francisco, under the head.

When broken the coin disclosed the fact that it was a double counterfeit, it having been made to do duty as a counterfeit 4-piastre piece of the Philippine islands. Failing off a plating on both sides, the words "Las Hispanas" and the devices of that coin were distinctly seen. When assayed it was found that the original piece was of native platinum. The plating, to raise the weight from $4 to $5, or to make the difference between the Manila and American coin was an alloy of silver and copper. This had been electrotyped or washed with gold. The whole was so nicely calculated as to make the true specific gravity of gold, and the ring of the coin was perfect.

The probability is, this coin is but one of a large number; that it was manufactured somewhere where labor is cheap, say Hong Kong; that either from detection or some other cause, a quantity of the first counterfeit was left on hand, and was utilized by increasing the size and restamping with an American die. Whatever may be the history, it is a dangerous counterfeit.

Woodchuck Scheme in Connecticut.

[Hartford Dispatch.]

Canton and Avon are adjoining towns in the hitherhill mountains that are infested with woodchucks. The selectmen of each town offered bounties of 50 cents for each woodchuck killed. The Avon selectmen required as proof the woodchuck's tail, while the Canton selectmen demanded the deposit of the ears. For the past year there have been unusually large demands upon the town exchequer for bounties in each of these towns, and, when by accident the Canton selectmen and Avon selectmen met and compared notes, they found by a singular coincidence that the number of tails submitted to the Avon selectmen was precisely the same as the number of pairs of ears shown up to the Canton officers. Investigation showed that when the Avon boys caught a wood chuck they cut off its ears and tail, and the Canton boys did the same thing, and thus they swopped ears for tails. Thus one woodchuck did double duty. The selectmen of both towns, with great dignity, thereupon decided to pay no more bounties for woodchucks, and the farmers are indignant thereat.

Wrestling with the Stove-Pipe.

[The Current.]

"Hello, Smith, what's up?" cried Brown to his friend, who, fresh from a wrestle with a stove pipe which had resisted all efforts to put it in place, stood at the window with soot on his hands and wrath on his brow.

"Nothing's up," snarled Smith. "It's all down and wants putting up."

"I see," said Brown, "these are not piping times of peace; they are times of piecing pipe."

SAVING THEIR WAGES.

Servant Girls' Bank Accounts Aggregating Over $2,500,000.

A Number Reach the $3,000 Limit—A Majority of the Depositors Are Irish and German Working Girls.

[Philadelphia Times.]

On the books of the Philadelphia Saving Fund are the names, residences and occupations of nearly 185,000 depositors. Of this number 27,000 are servant girls, chambermaids and nurses, whose deposits foot up over $2,500,000. Thursday being the traditional servant girls' day out, there are always more depositors on that day than any other. Thirty-seven women stood in line waiting their turn to get to the receiving teller's desk on pay day last week. Each one had a bank book and in one hand tightly clasped was the sum of money that was to be added to the savings already entrusted to the society for safe keeping.

First Teller McKee said that the average number of servant girl depositors on Thursdays was 300, and that three-fourths of the 27,000 had on an average $600 credited opposite their names in the ledgers of the bank. The deposits vary from $5 to $50. Some of the servants save up for a month or two before making a deposit. The rules of the institution only allow a depositor to deposit $500 a year and the final limit is $3,000. Teller Mckee said that a number of the servant girl depositors have reached the limit, which takes ten years.

Twenty-two hundred and sixty-six new depositors, who are servants, opened accounts last year and 1,850 had begun to deposit their savings this year up to Oct. 1. The majority of the girls are Irish and German and a great many draw money and get drafts, send them to the old country and in the course of a month a sister or a mother or a cousin comes to this city on the proceeds of the draft. Of the 27,000 depositors not more than 10,000 can write their names. They are registered in a big book at the rear of the desks, where their names, occupations and residences are registered. Those who can write are requested to write their names and those who cannot simply make a mark under their name written by the clerk.

Every depositor is allowed 3 per cent. per annum on the money deposited. Many depositors have never touched their deposits and a number have had interest accumulating for a quarter of a century without touching either principal or interest. When the servant girl depositor draws out $100 or $200 and sends a draft to the old country and a relative comes to this city, it is not long before the greenback has become a depositor.

The number of Italian depositors is increasing rapidly, Teller Mckee said. Many of them are rag pickers, and a still greater number are laborers who work at building railroads for $1 or less a day. A few organ-grinders are among the depositors of the institution and a few of many beggars and misers have snug little sums stored away in the vaults at Seventh and Walnut streets. The teller said that some of the latter frequently die in the almshouse and after they have been buried in Potter's field the discovery is made that they have deposits in the Philadelphia Saving Fund. Nearly four fifths of the Chinamen in this city are depositors there and several of them have over $400 in bank, but the majority of them have about $200 on interest. They write their signatures in the register in Chinese. Alas and St. Mary streets have many residents who are depositors in a small way. In 1883 there were 135,307 depositors and $6,951,601.42 were received by the tellers.

The Bootblack's Revenge.

[Detroit Free Press.]

He sat with his back to a carpenter shop in the alley, bootblack's kit beside him, knees drawn up, and as the snow squalls came booming along he had to suspend his reading for the moment and shiver.

He was a lad of 13, and he was reading a novel entitled "Bertha's Secret." Some of the words he had to stop and spell out, and others he skipped entirely, but he was deeply interested and even begrudged the time it took to raise his hand to his red nose and wipe away the tear there of it suspended.

A fourth story window in the block on the other side was cautiously raised, and a head showed itself over the sill. It dodged back to reappear in a moment, followed by an arm and a basin of water. All of a sudden the boy awoke to a realizing sense that every drop of that water had hit him somewhere. He sprang up, rushed this way and that for a moment, and then understanding that he had been made the victim of a joke he raised his clenched hand to the open window and exclaimed:

"Beware of my revenge! you have a daughter. I will win her love. The marriage eve shall be set, and you shall have issued invitations, engaged the preacher and ordered a big spread. The bride will be ready and the guests will wait, but all they shall wait in vain! I'll skip the gutter! I won't show up! I'll give you the cold shake, and don't you gulp to gargle that I won't."

He Had a "Good Smoke."

[New York Telegram.]

Where the cigars came from is unknown. They were dark in hue and of vast proportions—at least one inch in diameter. Five of these the mysterious passenger on a New York ferry boat had firmly lashed together with a bit of tape so as to cause a convergence of the lighted ends and a corresponding divergence of the ignited portions. All these were alight, and by dint of that muscular effort known to vocalists as the ore rotundo, the performer was enabled to achieve the hitherto unclassified feat of smoking all five of the cigars at one and the same time. Possessing himself of a deck chair which had been precipitately vacated by a cigarette smoker on his approach, he seated himself near the quarter rail and soon became the center of an awe-stricken circle of observers.

He treated with silent contempt the inquiries of the scientifically curious and the chaff of the irreverent, and all the while a cloud of smoke arose from his lips as from a smoldering volcano, and drifted down to leeward, mingling with similar clouds discharged from the smokestacks of incoming steamers. The captain of the boat came aft and stood at the edge of the hurricane deck, and looked on with manifest apprehension. The deck hands stood uneasily around in safe corners, and furtively provided themselves with such loose spars as they could lay hold of. The illiterate band of ne'er-do-wells, who travel back and forth on the boat, strove bravely to go through their usual programme, but their playing was fitful and spiritless.

And still the big man smoked on. All hands breathed easier when the boat backed into her berth at Tompkinsville, and the big man arose to go ashore. When the gang-plank was thrown ashore he cast the combined ends of his cigars into the sea, which sizzed and sent up a small whiff of steam as they struck its surface. Turning to the expectant crowd, he remarked: "Gentlemen, that was a very good smoke." Then he went ashore and disappeared, walking a trifle unsteadily, no doubt from the effect of the nicotine, but still maintaining the dignified and decorous bearing that had marked his conduct during the entire trip.

Shell-Fish as Food.

[Popular Science News.]

Europeans are more given to the use of shell-fish as food than we Yankees partly, no doubt, as a matter of economy. An English journal says: "The question of the value of shell fish as food is not destitute of importance, from their large daily consumption. The oyster contains as large a percentage of nitrogenous or flesh-forming matter as an egg, each having about 14 per cent., while the mussel follows close upon the oyster in this respect. Even compared with lean beef, the comparison is by no means very unfavorable; the latter having only 5 per cent. more of nitrogenous matter, and 2 per cent. more of fat, than the oyster.

"Different opinions have prevailed as to their digestibility; but, with the proviso that there are certain stomachs which altogether reject them, they do not appear to offer more than the average opposition to the action of the digestive organs. In this matter, however, much depends as in most other foods, on the manner of cooking. However digestible and nutritious shell-fish may be, as a rule, it is an undoubted fact that these are occasionally followed by deleterious effects. Among the many thousands of species of shell-fish there are only two or three known or believed to be poisonous.

"Of the bipple remainder, comparatively few kinds, however, are eaten. Of the shell-fish of commerce, the oyster is more important than all the others put together. Mussels, although largely used as food, are still more important as bait. Cockles, so far as we know, are the only other marine shell-fish cultivated by man. Large numbers are sold as food in towns near coasts where they are found, but they do not appear to bear conveyance to distant markets. In this respect they differ from the periwinkle, which can be carried from one end of the kingdom to the other without danger of spoiling. The trade in these mollusks is very large. It is stated that the supply of periwinkles brought to London averages about 2,000 bushels per week from March to August, and about 500 bushels weekly for the remaining months."

Greek Caricature.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

Pictorial caricature is rarely to be seen on the public monuments of Greece, these being of a much more dignified nature than was usual among ancient peoples, but recent researches have brought to light specimens of Greek pottery, domestic utensils, and household sculptures that abound with the most pronounced specimens. Numbers of these bear evidence of having been transferred from the stage to the pottery, while others are of a character that evidently was the growth of the ordinary accidents and situations of life. The visit of Jupiter to Alcman is parodied on a Greek vase by representing Jupiter as an old and much intoxicated bummer climbing a ladder to a window where sits an abominably fat old woman, while another street loafer, even more ragged and dilapidated than Jupiter, holds a light for the tipsy god to ascend.

In another instance Apollo is represented as an old, bald headed quack doctor, in his favorite temple at Delphi, while Chiron, as a rheumatic, is being boosted up the steps for treatment. The flight of Æneas from Troy has been preserved to us, both in earnest and in caricature. The caricature represents three very funny looking monkeys, the one representing Æneas carrying old Anchises on his back and dragging a sniveling young monkey by the hand. Bacchus is represented as a hog, Venus as a female goat, Mars as a bloodthirsty lion, and Mercury as a fox. Pliny tells us that there were quite a number of painters among the Greeks whose works were altogether of this character and commanded high prices on account of their popularity.

The Coming Winter.

[Lime-Kiln Club.]

The committee on agriculture then submitted its semi-weekly report, in which were given various reasons for believing that the coming winter would be a hard one, as follows:

1. Large numbers of cobs have come to the surface in husk mattresses.

2. Frogs have quit business two weeks earlier than usual, and are using geese feathers to line their nests with.

3. The worms found in chestnuts have burrowed deeper than usual, and cranberries are usually thick-hided.

4. It is a presidential campaign. Every winter succeeding such a campaign sends the frost down four feet and places a chilblain on the heel of every colored person in America.

5. The crows have started for the south two weeks ahead of the usual time. It is a dark day when a crow gets left on cold weather.

THE postoffice department at Washington has adopted "Calif." instead of "Cal." as the abbreviation of California. This is to prevent confounding it with "Col." the abbreviation of Colorado.

ACCORDING to statistics recently gathered there are 350,000 men out of employment in this country. That is an immense number of idlers, even though they are scattered among fifty millions of people.

THE State appropriation of $10,000 for the benefit of the viticultural interest of the State, will be expended in experiments to be made at the University in Berkeley under the direction of Prof. Hilgard. The Board of Regents so decided on Saturday.

THE presence of the seventeen-year locust, or cicada, in some of the States recalls the happy couplet of an ancient author:

"Happy the cicada lives
Since they all have voiceless wives."

The male cicada is noisy enough, but the female is mute.

IT is painful to note that Gen. Bragg of Wisconsin, the author of the famous phrase in the Democratic National Convention—"We love him [Cleveland] best for the enemies he has made"—is still without an office though he has been in Washington since March 4th persistently seeking one. What is his opinion of Cleveland now?

DURING the incumbency of the office of Secretary of State by D. M. Burns, much money was embezzled therefrom. The embezzlement was not known until unearthed by Controller Dunn and then ex-Secretary Burns was arrested therefor and tried. During the trial it was clearly (?) proven that Burns was innocent and that his chief deputy, Reynolds, was guilty, and Burns was acquitted and Reynolds arrested. Reynolds was tried and the jury acquitted him on last Saturday, it being clearly (?) proven that Burns was the thief and Reynolds an innocent lamb! It is incidents like this which bring law and its quibbles into disrepute.

SULLIVAN'S reply to the divorce suit instituted by his wife is satirical, though probably not meant to be. In his formal answer he charges her with cruel and abusive treatment and with gross habits of intoxication. Sullivan has shown a remarkable aptitude heretofore for ability to defend himself from cruel and abusive treatment, and it is not likely that he has suffered grevious bodily harm from the assaults of his 130lb wife. Nor is it likely that the feelings of a confirmed drunkard are irreparably damaged because his consort gets on a jamboree once in a while.

ONE'S faith in the actual loss of the Lost Cause will be rudely shaken by reading a dispatch in a Virginia newspaper describing a public sale of negroes at the court-house in Richmond. The bidding does not appear to have been active, one man bringing $38 for twelve months service, another $14 for three months and a woman 25 cents for a whole year. The record of this curious sale closes with the ominous declaration that the negroes were sold into slavery to the highest bidder. The "renting out" of these negroes is conducted under the vagrant laws of the State, and is only a penny to the pound in comparison with the auction sales of actual slaves before the war.

WE don't know whether Mr. Mackay, the U. S. Consul at Rio Janeiro, is a Democrat, Republican or mugwump, but he ought to be retained in office whatever he is, politically. A blackmailing paper published at Rio Janeiro had long pursued Mackay, and with a boldness born of immunity from counter-attack, it scandalized the Consul's mother. While the Consul was at the theatre on the 16th instant, the offending editor came in and looked at Consul Mackay in an offensive manner, whereupon, after an interchange of compliments, Mackay was struck by a sword stick and he responded by shooting the editor—unfortunately not fatally. As hundreds of the most prominent citizens of the city have complimented Mackay for his action, it is reasonable to infer that he did the correct and proper thing.

THE fact that the Pennsylvania Legislature has passed, and the Governor of that State has approved, a bill prohibiting the sale of oleomargarine suggests the query whether it is not possible to procure the enactment of laws by the several State Legislatures prohibiting, under heavy penalty, the sale or manufacture of adulterated wine. The vile concoctions, destitute of the slightest familiarity with grape juice, sold under the brand of California or French wine, is a thousand fold more harmful to the human stomach than "bull butter." As a matter of fact, the latter is not at all injurious, but its suppression is sought in the interests of the makers of genuine butter and because it is fraudulently sold as the genuine article. The sale of adulterated wine, on the contrary, is positively injurious to the physical well-being of the consumers, and for that reason, as well as because it would protect the vast interests engaged in the production of pure wine, there should be some legislation to stop the immense traffic in adulterated wines.

In view of the alleged prevalence of yellow fever in the northern Mexican States, the Secretary of the Treasury has been requested to appoint sanitary inspectors on the border line of Arizona. He will probably comply with the request.

Miss Nellie Canfield, a niece of the wife of President Lincoln, attempted suicide Monday morning in Mr. DeWitt's seminary for young ladies in Belleville, N. J. Miss Canfield shot herself in the left breast near the heart. A physician pronounces the wound fatal. Miss Canfield is 18 years old.

—San Diego Union: Mr. H. Baecht, proprietor of the Germania Hotel, Oliverhain, was in town yesterday. From Mr. Baecht's words it is clear that the colonists are determined to abandon the lands they now occupy unless the present differences as to price can be settled to their suiting. The lands they consider practically valueless without irrigation facilities and they estimate $50,000 will be required to furnish these. The colonists are doing such work as is necessary to care for the growing crops, but will make no further improvements till the matters at issue are settled.

In a later issue the same paper says:

An agreement has been reached to settle the differences existing between the Olivenhain Colony and the Kimball Bros., by arbitration, the question submitted being the price to be paid by the colonists for the lands. The arbitrators are Messrs. Bryant Howard, Jacob Gruendike, E. W. Morse, J. S. Bard and Judge W. T. McNealy. In case Judge McNealy finds it inconvenient to serve the remaining four arbitrators are to choose a fifth. The arbitrators are to be sworn according to law. They are to visit the lands in question and the parties may appear before them in person or by attorney and present any legal evidence they may have pertinent to the question in arbitrament. The arbitrators are to fix the price the Colony shall pay for the land. This price is to be paid in the same proportions and at the same times as fixed in the original contract. The award is to be made in writing and entered as an order of the Superior Court.

A Murderous Craft.

LONDON, May 25.—The Admiralty at Portsmouth has just been presented, for inspection, with one of the largest and most destructive of what is known as the "spar torpedo" boats ever built. For some time past a Thames shipbuilding firm has been engaged in experimenting on a series of the most murderous little craft that the ingenuity of man could devise, and the boat just turned over for inspection is said to be as near perfection as possible. It is 113 feet long and twelve feet six inches in beam, and it will run at about twenty knots an hour. In the bows are two tubes, each to be charged with a Whitehead torpedo, and in the stern of the boat is another tube for another torpedo, which can be discharged in any direction, while the vessel is going at full speed, and which, it is said, will, with almost absolute certainty, hit a ship at 200 or 300 yards distance. It is also armed with a Nordenfeldt gun, with nearly an all-round fire. They also carry a torpedo about twice the size of a hat, and containing forty pounds of dynamite, which is stuck on the end of a spar thrust outward and downward from the boat, and with which the enemy is to be struck.

Shot-Gun Title.

STOCKTON, May 27.—About three or four miles north of Waterloo, H. H. Thurston held 160 acres of swamp land and overflowed land, his title to which was recently denied by the Interior Department. His son-in-law, George Scott and William Harrington then came to the front as claimants under a pre-emption title. Harrington, with a force of a dozen men, well armed with revolvers, shot-guns and repeating rifles, attempted a few days ago to move a shanty upon the disputed ground. Before the shanty reached the Thurston fence, Scott's men, similarly armed, made their appearance and threatened that if the Thurston fence was disturbed there would be bloodshed. The shanty was therefore allowed to stand near the boundary line. The Scott men then built a fort near by, 14 x 14 feet, of earthwork and heavy timbers fastened with iron. They began building another fort on the opposite side of the land this morning, and a bloody encounter is expected any day.

Mrs Brooks, the Scold.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Mrs. Margaret Brooks was convicted to-day of being a common scold and was sentenced to four months' imprisonment. After her sentence her 18-year-old daughter jumped to her feet and struck one of the witnesses, an aged lady, in the face with her fist. Both mother and daughter then became intensely excited, crying, screaming and striking right and left. After the mother had been remanded to prison, the Judge sentenced the daughter also to four months' imprisonment for contempt of court. At this announcement the girl became frantic and began to scream at the top of her voice and resisted desperately the officers who took hold of her to remove her. Being a strong, robust young woman, it took two officers to remove her from the room.

A Big Failure

MONTREAL, May 27.—The Canada Co-operative Society started here four years ago, modeled after the Civil Service Association of London, England, made an assignment to-day with liabilities of $500,000. The original capital of the company was usurped out, after two years of business, when an issue of preference stock was made. The directors now claim that if another $50,000 is subscribed the concern can be made to pay, but there is not much chance of the public investing any more funds in the enterprise which has already swallowed up over a quarter of a million. An immense business was carried on by the society, the transactions being more than two millions per year, but extravagant management caused the concern to collapse.

A Religious Sensation

EDINBURG, May 26.—A great sensation has been produced in Free Church circles over the alleged apostasy of the distinguished preacher, Dr. Adam Stuart Muir of Trinity Free Church, Leith, whose appeal from his dismissal for papist practices was unsuccessfully heard yesterday here in the General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland. Muir was accused of teaching baptismal regeneration, the worshipping of God in nightly prayer before the representation of Christ on the cross and sanctioning the sale of his own portrait in an attitude indicating the approval of Popish doctrines and practices.

Miss Elizabeth Cleveland, sister of President Cleveland, has written a letter to Dr. Howard Crosby of New York, upon the question of total abstinence, in which she takes exceptions to certain views expressed by Dr. Crosby upon the liquor question. Miss Cleveland argues steadily for total abstinence, and makes a plea for the absolute extinction of intoxicating beverages.

Indians on the War Path.

DENVER, Col., May 26.—Last Saturday the Apaches killed two men at Cantwell & Peterie's ranch, on the Gila, and on Sunday afternoon killed Charles Stevens, foreman of Alley & Ingersoll's ranch, and Harvey Moreland, son of James Moreland, living between Grafton and Fairview. The bodies were found about six miles north of Grafton, still warm. Moreland was shot several times, and when found was lying on his back with an iron rod driven through his head into the ground. Frank Adams, son of George Adams, a ranchman living near Fairview, is supposed to be killed also. His hat was found near the bodies of the two dead men.

A special from Winslow, Arizona, says that about one hundred and sixty Navajoes, Utes and Pintes, all thoroughly armed and with war paint on, were camped near Hardis last night. It is currently rumored that they are making preparations to join Geronimo's band of Apaches. The latest information from the front indicates that they are hostile on Diamond Creek, northeast of Fort Bayard, in the Black range. Colonel Morrow and San Carlos scouts are in that vicinity, and Colonel Biddle, with a battalion of the Sixth Cavalry, is around Hillsboro, and Lieutenant Davis, with fifty mountain Apache scouts, are on their trail.

DEMING, N. M., May 27.—The Indians are scattering in small bands in different parts of southern New Mexico, mostly in the vicinity of Black range. More than thirty citizens are reported killed and many mangled beyond recognition. This evening Indians are reported in the vicinity of Cook's Peak, fifteen miles northwest of Deming. The greatest excitement prevails in the settlements of the Gila. No Indians were killed or captured since the outbreak. General Crook is on the way here to relieve General Bradley. He is expected Saturday morning. The miners and ranchmen are coming in from all directions. Much dissatisfaction is expressed concerning the action of the troops. It is reported from Lake Valley that a band of about forty Indians came in sight of the settlement. The citizens armed themselves and went out to hold them in check. The Indians moved in the direction of Cook's Canyon.

SILVER CITY, May 27.—The Indian scouts are reported deserting to the hostiles. A Fort Bayard special says that the Indians are leaving the reservation daily. The number of Indians doing the killing the last ten days is said by the military authorities to have been only 134—thirty-four bucks, eight half-grown boys and ninety-two squaws. Outside reports indicate that there were many more. The news from the north is that several men were killed in the Black Range country and that there are Indian outbreaks from the Mescalero agency. Capt. Smith, of the Fourth Cavalry, who escorted the Indians from the reservation, passed through Silver City to-day for Fort Bayard. In the fight at Devil's Park one Indian was killed. One soldier and one Indian scout were wounded. Captain Smith routed the Indians, capturing 2,000 pounds of government ammunition and nine ponies. Lieutenant Bradley, now at Fort Bayard, has ordered two troops of the Tenth Cavalry to go after the Indians reported on the Upper Gila river.

LATER.—The Indians are reported breaking into small parties and scattering through the country, coming this way from the Gila. Forty-five armed men left here this evening to protect the families now surrounded. A courier from Juniper Springs, ten miles from here, states that thirty Indians, including squaws and children, camped there. A man just in from a ranch near Negro Creek, four miles from here, reports sighting there. One man and one child were killed and one man was wounded. Parties are organizing to go out. Arms are scarce. A courier from Captain Madden's command is just in with a request for supplies. He reports the finding of the bodies of two more murdered prospectors, and that the troops are hot on the trail.

Thirty-three boxes containing mongooses arrived on the Colima from Panama, en route to the Hawaiian Islands. This is the second consignment sent to the islands, which the animals are expected to free from rats and other vermin destructive to cane.

Dr. N. L. Buck was shot on Sunday night while standing on his doorstep in Oakland by H. F. Prindle, a prominent Grand Army man of that burgh. Buck was killed and his murderer arrested. Prindle claims that Dr. Buck was guilty of improper conduct with Mrs. Prindle, while the doctor's friends claim that the lady is the victim of a hallucination.

A Tucson telegram says that the train on which the Thomas Concert troupe was traveling was stopped by a herd of cowboys at Coolidge station. The cowboys boarded the train and with drawn pistols compelled Madame Materna and Miss Zuch to sing for them. After having done this they jumped from the train and escaped into the woods.

A Frenchman, whose name is unknown, visited the Hibernia bank, San Francisco, Tuesday afternoon to make a deposit of $1,600. He left a sack, containing the money, on a bench for a moment, while he proceeded to the counter to sign the book. When he returned the sack and the money were missing. Much excitement followed on the discovery of the robbery. No trace of the thief has been discovered.

It is asserted by the Temperance Voice that, although the statistics compiled from the United States revenue returns indicate no increase in the consumption of whisky per capita during the last twenty-five years, yet if we take into account "crooked" whiskey—that is, whisky which paid no tax—whisky in bond, and diminution in the use of whisky for certain medical purposes, a great increase of whisky drinking is indicated. The common figuring is that in 1884 55,000,000 people in the United States consumed less spirits than 31,000,000 in 1860.

A Reporter Tarred and Feathered

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Tribune's Toledo, Ohio, special says: Roy S. Hathaway, reporter for the Sunday Democrat and author of scandalous articles reflecting on the best society of Norwalk, a city of 12,000 inhabitants on the Lake Shore Road, was seized yesterday in the St. Charles Hotel by a committee of citizens, whose names are given, taken to a barn in the rear, bound hand and foot, and a thick coat of tar and feathers administered. He was then ornamented with placards bearing the words, "Compliments of the Peek-a-boo Club," and ordered to leave town on the first train. He was told to tell A. J. Beloat, the editor, that if he was ever seen in Norwalk he would be lynched. Hathaway reached Toledo this afternoon nearly dead and will lose the sight of both eyes. No sympathy is wasted on him, as the Democrat has long preyed upon the best people in this part of the State.

Prof. Gilbert says the seventeen-year locusts, whose visit he has predicted, are harmless to the growing crops and do no injury except to leaves of forest and fruit trees. Wherever young orchards have been planted on land which has been cleared during the last seventeen years the trees are liable to suffer somewhat, but it is probable that a kerosene spray will protect them. The ordinary locust, which is so destructive to growing crops, has jaws which cut, while the seventeen year species, more properly called Cicada, has only a beak, through which he sucks his nourishment.

With the exception of peaches, the yield of fruit in the East will be one of the largest and best in many years. The peach crop is reported as being nearly a total failure, but the yield of grapes, it is said, will be enormous. Indications are that the yield of raspberries, strawberries and currants will be up to an average, and the crop of apples, pears, plums, quinces and apricots will be equal to that of previous years.

A woman and her three children were found living in an empty beer vat in Pittsburg a few days ago. It was a family of vagrants.

When Baby was sick, we gave her CASTORIA,
When she was a Child, she cried for CASTORIA,
When she became Miss, she clung to CASTORIA,
When she had Children, she gave them CASTORIA.

If I was a woman,
Do you think
I'd buy that nasty
Green tea to drink?

It looks so nice
And so smoothly rolled,
But ah! the story
That might be told

Of the paint and the rolling
Would make you think twice.
Ere you tasted a sip,
Though it looks so nice!

But the flavor and strength
Of EOLA TEA
Are as rich as the day
That it bloomed so free,

In the sunny gardens
Of fair Japan,
And its password is
The Perfection Can.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Dissolution of Copartnership.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE PARTnership heretofore existing between the undersigned, under the firm name of Hanna & Keith, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Hanna retiring. The business will be continued as heretofore by Mr. Keith.

JOHN HANNA,
P. J. KEITH.

ANAHEIM, May 25th, 1885.

To the Public:—

Referring to the above notice of dissolution, I desire to convey to the public of Anaheim and vicinity, with whom I have had business relations for a great number of years, my gratitude and appreciation of the kindness and consideration with which I have been uniformly treated. And I desire to commend to my personal friends my late partner, Mr. Keith, who will continue the business so long conducted by both of us. Since he has been associated with me in business, I have found him to be an upright, square man, and one in whom implicit confidence can be placed. It is probably unnecessary to ask the old patrons of the firm to continue Mr. Keith as their agent, as there is no reason to suppose they will do other wise; and I can conscientiously ask those who may at any time desire the services of an agent to entrust their affairs to Mr. Keith, whom I know will attend to all matters with judgment, ability and perfect honesty. Kleinigkeiten.

—Insure against fire in the first-class companies for which Richard Melrose is agent. Policies written and delivered at once.

—The Mabury tract of 320 acres near Santa Ana is being subdivided by Surveyor Kellogg, preliminary, it is supposed, to the tract being put upon the market.

—The house of Mr. Boege, east of the meat market, is being fitted up as a saloon for W. J. Ree, who has to evacuate his present quarters to make room for the new drug store.

—A special Missionary meeting was held at the Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon, at which addresses were delivered by Rev. and Mrs. Chapin, returned missionaries from China.

—Daniel Newman, who lived near Agricultural Park, Los Angeles, suicided on Tuesday morning by shooting himself. He was a hard drinker, and his domestic life was unhappy.

—The beautiful and sweet-toned pianos used at the concert on Tuesday evening, were from the establishment of Messrs. Pellegrin Bros. & Co., where a fine assortment of all kinds of musical instruments is constantly kept in stock.

—A drama entitled "The Last Loaf" will be given by the Placentia Literary Society on Friday evening, June 5th, at the Placentia school house. A general invitation is extended. There will be no charge for admission.

—The Ladies' Industrial Society will give a social on Tuesday evening next at Kroeger's Hall. A programme of musical and literary selections will be rendered with ice cream and strawberries, and an admission fee of ten cents charged.

—The contract for the construction of the winery of B. Dreyfus & Co. was awarded on last Saturday to H. H. Roper of Santa Ana, his bid being the lowest of the many that were tendered. The work is to be vigorously pushed, as the building must be ready for the crushers by August 20th.

—Nathaniel Cook, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of California, I. O. O. F., has appointed E. W. Champlin of Anaheim District, Deputy Grand Master of District No. 69, comprising Lodges No. 199, 236, 303 and 315; and H A Boege District Deputy Grand Master of District No. 15, comprising Lodge No. 237 located in Anaheim.

—In Los Angeles on Sunday evening Manuel Moraga was killed by Jesus Figueroa in a saloon on Alameda street. The two men quarreled over the payment for drink and it culminated in Figueroa stabbing his opponent, who died in a few minutes thereafter. The murderer escaped for a time but was subsequently arrested and is now in jail.

—Orange buyers have been operating in this vicinity for a week past. They make a bid for the oranges in an orchard—and a very low bid it generally is—and set their own force of men to work picking the fruit. The best oranges they box and ship (without cleaning) to the East, the culls they send to San Francisco to be sold to the hucksters of that metropolis.

—The construction of a brick winery has been begun by Mr. Schorn. The building will be 52x31, and will consist of basement with one story above. The brick work is being done by Mr. Schindler. It will be a substantial structure and will not only add greatly to the appearance of Mr. Schorn's already fine place, but will be a source of profit to him, as well.

—Rev. Mr. Robinson and family will leave in a few days for one of the northern counties. They have many warm friends here who will learn of their proposed departure with regret and will hope that circumstances will be so shaped as to permit their residence here again.

Mr. Robinson was presented on Wednesday by ladies connected with the Presbyterian church with a sum of money, as a mark of their esteem. The testimonial was in part made up with the proceeds of the refreshments sold at the concert on Tuesday evening.

—It will be seen by the notice in our advertising columns that the firm of Hanna & Keith has been dissolved by the withdrawal of Mr. Hanna who, after spending a vacation of a month or so in the mountains, will remove to Los Angeles and engage in business in that city. The departure of Mr. Hanna and his estimable family will be a decided loss to this community, and one to which we cannot reconcile ourselves. We will continue in the hope that, as there are many slips 'twixt the cup and the lip, something may arise in the interim which will cause them to reconsider their determination to remove.

Mr. Keith will continue business at the old stand, and will without doubt be accorded a large share of patronage. He will have the assistance of Mr. Hanna in Los Angeles, who will be able to send many customers here, as he will make a specialty of Anaheim lands. Business entrusted to Mr. Keith will receive careful and prompt attention.

The Graduating Exercises.

The stereotyped and somewhat hackneyed phrase, "large and respectable" could, with great propriety, be applied to the audience which gathered in Kroeger's Hall on Tuesday evening. The hall has seldom been better filled and certainly no audience could have been more select or appreciative of what Prof. Packard called "a characteristic programme."

The performances were in the main by the Professor's pupils, the exceptions being Mrs. McClure and Mr. and Mrs. Knapp. The instrumental duet by the last named was a finished and artistic performance, and well deserved the encore it received. Mrs. McClure and Mrs. Knapp sang sweetly in duets with the Professor.

Miss Nellie Bancroft, Miss Rose Davis, Miss Sarah Crowther, Miss Clara Schulte, Miss Maggie Anderson and Miss Jennie Baker, were the ladies who took part in the instrumental entertainment, and their proficiency was apparent even to the untutored ear. The solos of Miss Davis and Miss Baker gave those young ladies an opportunity to show how proficient they were; and the popular "Carnival of Venice" as rendered by Miss Davis, was a skillful interpretation of that sprightly bit of music.

Of the performance of the esteemed and popular Miss Bancroft, in honor of whom the entertainment was given, it is difficult to find words to frame a compliment which would do justice to her skill. In conferring the graduating diploma upon her, Rev. Mr. Robinson stated that it was the first time in ten years that any pupil had completed the course required by the musical department of the Napa Collegiate Institute—a fact which tells of the high place which she has reached in her musical studies by close and industrious application united with natural aptitude. Her rendering of "Sonata No. 7," was followed by an ovation and by the bestowal of some most beautiful floral gifts. It was a proud moment for her and, we venture to say, for the "old folks" who witnessed their daughter's triumph. We feel assured that the career so auspiciously begun will witness many musical triumphs, and that there will come to Miss Nellie all the honor and happiness which the possession of such a talent ought to bring.

It may not be out of place to add that Anaheim is fortunate in having as a citizen such an accomplished professor of music as Prof. Packard.

The Grasshoppers

The grasshoppers are beginning to make their unwelcome presence felt, in spots. They have devoured some corn in North Anaheim, and appear to be meditating an attack on some of the vineyards in that district. Mr. R. J. Northam is ready to give them battle with an army of hens which he has gathered to perfection in his wines.

A Sacramento paper says:

Captain Westcott has related some interesting facts connected with the grasshopper scourge at the California Raisin Company's vineyard near Rocklin. The pests are still at work upon the place vigorously and with most disastrous results. This vineyard is eleven years old, and was now at its very best. The injury is incalculable, and the question is being debated whether the vines are not killed. Captain Westcott, having seen the statement concerning the reported successful work in driving the pest away by burning sulphur, immediately investigated the matter, interviewing those who had used it and also by trying it himself, and found that no good results were obtained. The supposed success proved, after a few hours, to have been fallacious. Captain Westcott thinks the only question left is, how soon they will quit and leave of their own accord. The ditch crematory process he thinks might be successful, but requires, he says, an army of persons to operate. A strange thing noticed in this vineyard is that the grasshoppers do not touch the vines of the Mission grapes, but will clean all others around them and not touch a leaf of this variety. There is another small vineyard near the Raisin Company which has not thus far been molested.

Waste of Water

The State Engineer, while visiting Riverside last week, measured the water in the Riverside canal at various points for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of water lost by seepage and evaporation. The loss was ascertained to be twenty inches per mile; and as Riverside has thirty miles of large canals, 600 inches of water is lost from them. It may be set down as a fact, also, that the loss is proportionately greater in the smaller distributing ditches, as they are not used continuously and absorb great quantities of water every time they are used.

In the upper ditch of the Anaheim Union Water Company, which is sixteen miles in length, there is a loss of 450 inches of water out of a thousand inches turned into the ditch; that is, when ten heads of water are turned into the ditch from the river, five and one-half heads are received at the lower end by the distributing zanjero. In distributing the water to irrigators there is another large loss of the valuable fluid. In the lower main ditch the loss is about the same as in the upper ditch, though it is only about one-half as long.

This fearful waste of water is not unavoidable. It can be prevented by either conveying the water in pipes or by cementing the open ditches. Either process, however, involves an appalling expenditure of money, which will delay reform until, what is quite probable, the State assumes control of the irrigation works.

Postoffices Closed To-day

This being Memorial Day the Anaheim postoffice, in common with every other postoffice, will be closed. The regulations say:

The Anaheim Extension.

Under the above heading the San Diego Sun ludiniously says:

The southern portion of Los Angeles county is very anxious for the extension of the Southern Pacific to San Diego. There is a large and very fertile section of country there, only a little farther from San Diego than Los Angeles, that would derive a great benefit by a rail connection with this bay. Los Angeles county is one vast farming section, while there is only one large city to be supplied with the products of the farm. The Los Angeles markets are therefore frequently glutted by an over-production. The southern portion of the county—Anaheim, Santa Ana, Orange and other small towns—would secure a double market by the extension of the railroad to San Diego. At some time in the near future this same part of Los Angeles county will be a county by itself. Its population is now all that is necessary for the purpose, and its interests are so peculiarly its own, that it is only a question of a short time when it will be divided off, and will probably be called Orange county. Several attempts have already been made to effect this division, but so far have been defeated each time.

The addition of this rich section as a tributary point to San Diego is of immense importance to the merchants of this city. The handling of vast stores of wine, wheat, wool, fruits, etc., would go to our commission merchants, and a general reciprocal exchange of products would result. It is the nearest point of any of the great farming sections of other counties which we hope in time to render tributary to this city.

The New Revenue Collector.

Hon. Asa Ellis of El Monte has been appointed Collector of Internal Revenue, vice Hartson resigned. The appointment was a genuine surprise. Like the knowing politician that he is, Mr. Ellis went about the matter without blare of trumpet or beating of drums, and pulled the "underground" wires in the most effective fashion. The horde of other aspirants were not only surprised but shocked when the telegram bringing the news was made public and conveyed to the good old Democratic gentleman who was at work in his hay field at El Monte, seemingly oblivious of all things political. But everybody except those who wanted the place themselves concede that it was an appointment eminently fit to be made. Mr. Ellis is an able man, a tireless worker, and will earn his salary. Nothing can be truthfully said against him, or against the administration for appointing him. We beg to tender to the Messrs. Ellis and Cleveland our best congratulations.

It appears, however, that some of the disappointed ones die hard. A Washington telegram says that it is sought to have the appointment revoked on the ground that he is a detailing tax collector. The charge is false, of course, and is so branded by the ex-District Attorney, the present incumbent of that office and by the County Auditor.

—George H. Cake, aged 58 years, while walking from Santa Ana to Orange on Tuesday, succumbed to an attack of heart disease and died. He was a member of the G. A. R., and served during the war as Captain of Company A, 31st Ohio Infantry. He was a member of the Masonic Knights of Honor and I. O. O. F. orders, and had an insurance on his life of $4,000. He was a harness maker by trade, and leaves a family.

A Disabling Disease.

No disease which does not confine a man to his bed so completely unfits him for business as dyspepsia. When the stomach is foul, the brain is always muddy and confused, and as the cares and anxieties of life are a sufficient burden for the organs of thought to bear, without being tormented by the miseries born of indigestion, it is highly desirable for the brain's sake, as well as for the sake of every other portion of the system, that the disordered stomach should be restored with the utmost dispatch to a healthy, vigorous condition. This object can always be accomplished by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the purest and best of vegetable specifics, which evacuates the morbid humors through the bowels, tones and rouses the torpid stomach and regulates the liver, imparts firmness to the nerves and clears the sensorium of its mental cobwebs. Persons subject to attacks of indigestion, bilious headache, irregularity of the bowels, sickness of the stomach or "the blues," should take the Bitters once or twice a day throughout the present season.

THE ENACTMENT AGAINST TEA ADULTERATION A DEAD LETTER.

In an interview with Tea Examiner Davies of New York, a Times reporter [New York Times, August 23d, 1885,] speaking of tea adulterations says:

"While teas coming to this and other ports so adulterated may be rejected and refused admission to this country, the pure tea, or tea not adulterated beyond the standard given in the table below, may be imported and poisoned—for the coloring is nothing less than poisoning—in this city. There are now five firms in this city known to be engaged in the coloring of tea after importation, using the material described. The coloring enhances the value among ignorant purchasers, who want the tea they buy to be of the pale-green shade, always indicative of adulteration. This treatment cannot be prevented by the United States authorities, though under our State laws the sale can and should be prohibited by the Board of Health."

Will people never understand that there is only one way to obtain pure tea of good quality, and that is to buy it in its original package, shipped by responsible firms? It is needless to eulogize the Perfection Tea Can, its prestige being already so high as to make this superfluous, but the importers of Eola Tea would beg to call attention to the fact that both this high-class article and their "White Cross" brand are imported only in this original and guaranteed package.

GRAZING AND DAIRY INTERESTS.

In Westminster township, which lies south-west of Anaheim, grazing and dairy interests now predominate all others. In the beginning it was not so, and there were several causes which have now combined to make it so.

First.—The people had not capital enough to plant and wait on fruit trees in large orchards. All deciduous fruits are a perfect success. No better apples, pears, apricots, prunes, peaches or grapes can be raised in California. But the people were forced into general farming with butter, cheese and eggs for immediate profit.

Second.—Alkali spots and strips were developed by cultivation and the free use of abundant artesian water, and these had to be thrown out of cultivation, thus reducing the area of tillable lands, and usually preventing beautiful solid fields of orchards, alfalfa or grain.

Third.—The profits of beef, hogs and horses fed on alfalfa and the wild grasses, and of cheese, butter, eggs, corn and potatoes, and the greatly reduced cost of fencing with wire instead of boards, made it feasible to inclose both small and large areas of alfalfa, corn land and unprofitable land. The wild grasses began to be appreciated. Salt grass (long despised but found to be invaluable in the mixture,) blue joint, rye grass, burr clover, alfilleria, etc, in the same pasture with alfalfa, gave the best results. The uniform high prices of cheese, butter and eggs, the general profit of hogs raised on alfalfa and fattened with corn, the demand for good horses at high prices, the doubled value of beef cattle, now four cents on foot and with no present prospect of decline, the sale of alfalfa hay, and the immense production of corn and potatoes on the damp lands south of Westminster, made a solid foundation for prosperity. The diversified land not only compelled diversified industries, but made each one work in with the other.

Our apparently disgraceful weed fields begin to show differently when fenced in and well dotted over with stock feeding on the undergrowth, and we are learning that rolling the weeds instead of the annual burning improves both feed and looks. A new era of content has begun and crowns us satisfaction, which is almost universal, with the climate as well as with the pure artesian water. With this will soon come the much needed improvements in fields, buildings and roads that will give us an honorable place, as a well developed fine stock country, among the show places of California. Fruit farming in the direction of winter apples will probably take a new start in the hands of enterprising newcomers, but stock will undoubtedly predominate for all these reasons, singly or combined.

An alfalfa field, green, fresh and fragrant the whole year round, well fenced and dotted with fine stock, has a beauty of its own that appeals to every cultivated mind. Even a wild pasture, rolled, fenced and stocked, is a comfort to the eye wearied with bare ground. We are coming to this with increasing rapidity. The profits that have been made are going into useful beauty after their own kind. Industries that admit of beauty will compel beauty for the best economy.

A fair estimate from detailed counts, gives Westminster, outside of the famous Alamitos stock rancho, about 2000 head of cattle in small bands, devoted partly to butter, partly to cheese and partly to beef. There are about 1500 acres set in alfalfa, either in pasture or unfenced and cut for hay, with an average yield of about six tons to the acre. Over 6000 acres of land are now fenced and cross-fenced into small areas of from 10 to 160 acres for pastures. No estimate can easily be made of the number of horses, hens and hogs, but they are in due proportion to the cattle, and, except the last, seen on every farm. The views of your correspondent that hogs are a very useful and very profitable and perhaps necessary nuisance, are so well known that he will be excused from counting them. Eggs, however, can be more comfortably counted. The two Westminster stores gather in from the farmers, and ship an average of 4000 eggs a day, 10,000 dozen a month, 120,000 dozen (1,440,000) a year. With average prices for butter and eggs, two cows and one hundred hens, with suitable land for their feed, will pay all store bills for a small family. This is actual experience and will explain the fact that Deeds are common and mortgages comparatively rare and temporary, and in process of discharge.

In no other land than California issuch a diversity of industry both possible and profitable as in Westminster. It is a good thing to have two strings to your bow, and not a good thing to put all your eggs in one basket. It is expected that by another year one owner of Garden Grove will place on the market about 2,500 acres of superior alfalfa and fruit land lying close to Westminster, and also in the artesian belt. Then Anaheim may claim to be near the largest and best dairy and stock country in Southern California.

THE CHURCHES OF ANAHEIM.

The church privileges of a town occupy no mean place in the consideration of those who are seeking a new home. This is especially true of those coming from the older settlements in the East where the church has been longer established, its influence more deeply felt, and its worth to a community more fully realized. The following incident will illustrate this: A gentleman recently arrived in Anaheim. He at once sought out the writer of this, and began to question him respecting the particular church with which he is connected here. How many members has it? What is its influences on the community? Is the building free from debt? Is the church self-supporting? How many are in the Sunday school? How many attend the Sunday services and the weekly prayer meeting? etc, etc. This gentleman said he wanted to find a place in which to locate permanently with his family. He presumed he would find sufficient inducements to stay here when he began to look at land for sale, but he wanted first to be sure he would find the church privileges to his liking.

Perhaps some one reading this description of Anaheim may wish to know about the churches here before deciding to come. Although our town is not the largest, we have no less than six churches in it. This seemingly large number does not exist for the same reason that in a town of the same size in the East, the same number or more may be found. This will be seen by a brief survey of the various churches and their peculiar work. There is of course a Roman church in Anaheim. A large section of country in the Santa Ana Valley, of which this is a part, has no church of this kind save here, hence all who are allied to it must come to Anaheim for the privileges granted by the sect. Rev. V. Foran is the priest. One of the most attractive and churchly edifices outside the cities is occupied by the Episcopalians. And that is not all. It is made still more attractive by the noble and faithful band of adherents who render it life and vigor. Rev. W. C. Mills, who has recently decided in favor of our climate, is the rector. In the north part of town, and adjacent to the two already mentioned, stands the Presbyterian church. Although Presbyterian in name, it is cosmopolitan in character—if the word may apply to ecclesiastical as well as national peculiarities. Being the only nonsectarian denomination represented here, intended for the English speaking population, its doors are thrown open to all followers of our common Lord. And many, whose early prejudices and fixed principles do not prevent, enter the door. Among the worshippers are Christians of all beliefs, and all receive a hearty welcome. Rev. F. H. Robinson is pastor.

Passing to the south part of town we come to three church edifices recently put up. As the stranger enters town he is struck with the neat appearance of the Evangelical church. A vigorous society occupies this building. Though the building was but recently erected, the society has been established here for years. Rev. C. Green is pastor. He resides in Santa Ana, where he has also another church of the same order.

Near the Evangelical church stands the second Presbyterian church. It is intended for the Spanish speaking population. Rev. J. M. Roberts is the Missionary in charge. There is a parochial school in connection with the church. Miss M. A. McCoy is teacher. An Indian-school building stands next to the church. It has recently been established under the auspices of the government and in care of the Presbyterian Mission Board. Mrs. M. E. Roberts is Superintendent and Mrs. N. Robb is matron.

The Southern California Conference of the M. E. Church has recently established a mission in Anaheim. This society has a neat building a little removed from the Spanish and Indian Mission. Rev. G. H. Bolinger is the energetic pastor. He also is the presiding elder of the German work in the Conference.

If the new comer should settle in the Orangethorpe or Placentia districts of North Anaheim, or in Fairview, just south of town, he will find Sunday schools held in these inviting sections, and occasional preaching also. Rev. C. B. Pershing and others occupy the circuit.

LAND VALUES.

The prices asked for lands in and about Anaheim are as diverse and varied as the land itself. But it can be said without equivocation that the purchaser of land in Anaheim and vicinity, at the ruling prices, gets full value for his money, and does not pay an inflated price for fictitious or imaginary advantages. There never has been any disposition shown here to buoy up prices beyond the true value of the land, and the result is that as good land as there is in all California is offered for sale at a much lower price than in any other part of Los Angeles county.

In the central part of town, known as the Fairview district, which is very good grape land, unimproved land can be purchased for from $50 to $75 per acre. We call it grape land, because that is probably the most profitable use to which it can be put, but all kinds of deciduous fruits can be grown upon it as well as upon land held at double the price. And as we write this paragraph there is growing upon this land a large area of corn which will yield, under average conditions, from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five bushels to the acre.

In the Orangethorpe school district, lying northward from town, land is held at from $75 to $125 per acre. In addition to being adapted to the growth of grapes, deciduous fruits and cereals, this land also produces oranges and lemons of excellent quality. It is a most desirable neighborhood.

In Placentia school district, or what is better known as North Anaheim, the prices are about as in Orangethorpe—from $75 to $125 per acre, and for some specially choice locations $150 per acre is asked. Everything is grown on the soil in this district, and nowhere can be seen thriftier orchards and vineyards, or more beautiful homes. The land held at $150 per acre is, to use a current phrase, "dirt cheap," and must necessarily double in value within a very short time.

All the lands referred to above are within the district which is furnished with water by the Anaheim Union Water Company. There is plenty of good land outside of the irrigating district which can be bought cheaper, and when the water company perfects its system and completes its plans for storing the water which now runs to waste in the winter, it will be able to extend its area of usefulness and take in much of the land which now is offered comparatively cheap because of the lack of irrigation facilities.

There is a section of country east of Anaheim, adjoining the Santa Ana river, known as Yorba district, where good improved and unimproved land can be purchased at from $50 to $150 per acre. The people of this district have a superabundance of cheap water at all seasons, and the soil is adapted to the growth of all kinds of fruit and grain.

Vegetarians can find no better country than this in which to carry out their dietetic principles. There are several families in the vicinity of Anaheim who live upon fruits almost exclusively, and use no cooked food of any kind. There are few countries where such a mode of living is possible, but the following statement of the seasons when fruits may be gathered in Los Angeles county will show that it is quite practicable to here carry out the vegetarian idea: Oranges, Christmas to June; lemons, all the year; limes, all the year; figs, July to November; almonds, October; apples, July to December; pears, July to November; grapes, July 15th to December; peaches, June to November; apricots, June to August; plums and prunes, June to November; cherries, June; Japanese persimmons, November; guavas, nearly all the year; loquats, May to June; strawberries, all the year round; raspberries, June to January; blackberries, June to September; gooseberries, June; watermelons, July to October; muskmelons, July to October.

THE SURVIVAL OF TRUTH.

[Edward Willett.]

Never the cause that is right shall be buried in ashes,
Never be lost in the cloud or be sunk in the dust;
Still from the embers the light of the truth ever flashes,
Still there is glory ahead for the cause that is just.

Men who have labored with firm and unfaltering devotion,
Only for what they believe to be honest and right,
Yet shall be heirs of the isles in the midst of the ocean,
Isles of the blest that are lovely with sweetness and light.

Lost is the bad that is blighted, the thoughtless suppress'd,
Fit but to fall, and forgotten to rot on the ground;
Yet it shall bloom in the spring with the rest of the roses,
Yet in full bloom with the bravest and brightest be found.

Truth cannot perish. It fades and it falls, but its essence
Lives like the breath of the flower, in the earth, and the air:
Soon, in God's time, will its living and beautiful presence
Break on the sight of the people, resplendently fair.

Never a life shall be lost that for truth has been given,
Never a wound for the right but shall fully be cured:
Still do the heroes who loved us live here as in heaven,
Holding the blessing of balm for the pain they endured.

Lovely is truth, and the one thing sublime and immortal,
Often to sicken, but never, oh, never to die;
Yet to be welcomed on earth as at heaven's great portal,
Yet to be crowned in all glory, on earth as on high.

Recognition at Sea.

[Bo-ton Transcript.]

In view of the many first-class lines now crossing the Atlantic, the question that at first suggests itself upon seeing a steamer in the distance is: To what line does she belong? Is she an Inman, Guion, White Star, or Allan boat, or is she a Cunarder? To the uninitiated all steamers look alike at sea, and it is frequently a puzzle to the passengers to understand how the officers can tell so readily on being asked—even if the strange steamer be passed at night—to what line she belongs.

Each line has a distinctive "funnel mark" by which its steamers can be told by day, and a distinctive kind of firework signal by which they can be known by night. When you see a steamer whose funnel is two-thirds red, with a white band and a stack top, you may know that she is an "Allan Liner." If at night she sends up blue, white and red rockets in succession she belongs to the same line.

An "American" line steamer will have a funnel, the lower part of which is red, with a white keystone painted on it; above these will be a narrow white band, with a black top. The night signal is first a red light, followed by a Roman candle throwing six red balls, and then another red light.

If a steamer's funnel is buff, with a black top, she is a "White Star" boat, and her night signal will be a green light and a rocket throwing two green stars.

When you see a black funnel, with a white band about a third from the top, it will show an Inman steamer; and a night signal of blue lights forward and aft, with a red light on the bridge and a variegated rocket, will tell you she belongs to the same line.

The Cunard line is known in the daytime by a red funnel with a black top, and at night by two rockets and blue lights simultaneously.

If the funnel is black, with a red band two thirds of the way up, it is that of a Guion steamer, to which line the famous Alaska and Arizona belong. The night signal of the line is blue lights burned forward, aft, and on the bridge simultaneously.

A steamer with a white funnel, with a black top to it will be a National line boat, and her signal at night will be a blue light, followed by a rocket, and then a red light.

The Anchor line boats have black funnels without any mark, and the night signal is red and white lights burned alternately.

With the new volume, beginning in December, HARPER'S MAGAZINE will conclude its thirty-fifth year. The oldest periodical of its type, it is yet, in each new volume, a new magazine, not simply because it presents fresh subjects and new pictures, but also, and chiefly, because it steadily advances in the method itself of magazine-making. In a word, the MAGAZINE becomes more and more the faithful mirror of current life and movement. Leading features in the attractive programme for 1885 are new serial novels by CONSTANCE FENIMORE WOOLSON and W. D. HOWELLS; a new novel entitled "At the Red Glove;" descriptive illustrated papers by F. D. MILLET, E. SWAIN GIFFORD, E. A. ABBEY, H. DAMOC, and others; Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," illustrated by ABBEY; important papers on Art, Science, etc.
