NATIONAL G. O. P. CONVENTION MEETS TODAY

350 Pythians from All Over State Attend Impressive Dedication of Local Temple

CHANCELLOR OF CALIF. PRESENT

Inspection of Beautiful New Structure Precedes Ceremony

With the Grand Chancellor of California presiding, and in the presence of other grand officers and supreme representatives, the splendid new building of the Knights of Pythias was formally dedicated last night.

Approximately 350 Pythians from all over the state saw the ceremony in the handsome lodge-room.

Previous to the meeting an inspection of the new structure took place, members showing the visitors about.

The lodge meeting was opened at 8:30 by Fred Davis, local Chancellor Commander, who afterward turned the gavel over to Grand Chancellor Myers.

Other grand officers present were Frank F. Merriam of Long Beach, Speaker of the House at Sacramento, vice grand chancellor; Fred Jones of Hollywood, Grand Prelate; Charles Cleveland of San Francisco, Grand Keeper of Records and Seals; and William Gallatine of Redondo Beach, Master at Arms.

All of the grand officers made remarks during the evening. Other speakers were Robert Loucks of Los Angeles, Supreme Representative from the California domain and E. W. Inman, supreme Representative of the Utah domain.

The speakers were unanimous in declaring the building the finest of the sort in the United States or Canada.

The Anaheim lodge also was complimented for its splendid work in financing and constructing the new edifice. Jeffries & Shaffer of Los Angeles, the architects, who specialize on this type of work, were especially lauded.

Other lodges well might follow that of Anaheim in getting up similar creditable buildings, the speakers suggested. Long Beach is about to do so.

Last night marked the first of the Monday evening lodge meetings. The meeting night formerly was Wednesday. On Thursday evening the Pythian Sisters, who have been meeting in Eagles' Hall, will hold their first gathering in the new structure.

At the public reception Saturday evening, the next formal event on the program, a special invitation has been extended to Mayor E. H. Metcalf, the City Councilmen City Manager and heads of city departments. The building then will be formally presented to the city as one of its structures, designed to advance local civic progress. There will be a dance on the ground floor. The public is urged to come and become acquainted with Pythians and Pythianism. No tickets will be required for admission.

On Thursday next week the Pythian Sisters' temple will be dedicated similarly and on Saturday of next week the Uniform Rank will confer the rank on a large class of candidates.

Reference to Enforcement of Law Brings Cheers From Delegates

CONVENTION HALL, CLEVELAND, June 10.—The Republican national convention was formally put under way in Cleveland's beautiful auditorium this morning with the quiet precision of a well oiled machine.

No fuss, no feathers, no disorder, and what noise there was was almost lost in the magnificent great open spaces of the hall.

The picture presented when the opening gavel fell was theatrical rather than political. The hall was almost cathedral-like in its vastness and beauty.

"For the last 20 years I have had the soot from the rafters of the old coliseum sifted down my back whenever anybody disturbed the air by yelling real loud," said an old timer. "Here I feel as tho I were in church. If that organ would just strike up 'Nearer My God at Thee' I'd shut my eyes and swear it was Sunday."

Cleveland certainly showed the hosts of Republicanism something new in the way of conventions. It was an artistic triumph, however, cut and dried the politics of the meeting might be.

The delegates just sat and looked at the spectacle. Green, white, rose and violet lights shed down from the lofty ceiling, and remarked about the absence of the familiar bunting, red, white and blue decorations.

There was none of the old familiar panoply and display of other conventions.

The crowd was slow in arriving and strangely enough the spectators in the balconies that ringed the spacious hall were slower than the delegates.

At 10:30 o'clock, half an hour before the gavel was due to fall, there were only a handful of people in the galleries and the first delegates began to appear on the floor. By 11 o'clock, the opening hour, the floor was well filled but the spectators were still taking their sweet time in arriving. Not half the seats were filled at the opening hour.

It was two minutes past 11 when John T. Adams, grey-haired and smiling, stalked out onto the platform and banged a new gavel.

Immediately a band struck into the Star Spangled Banner. From the back of the stage with multicolored lights playing on it, drops a huge American flag. There was a round of applause as the band finished and the lights went on again.

Then with John Philip Sousa, the famous bandmaster, wielding the baton, the band struck up the Stars and Stripes Forever, while sergeants at arms and other supernumeries dashed hither and yon getting the stage set for the formal picture.

The floor presented a busy picture with delegates milling around finding their seats and shaking hands with friends and acquaintances.

It was more like old home week than a hectic political convention. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon was the center of a little throng and in the space of a few minutes probably shook more hands than he does in a week in Washington.

The gavel fell again and Adams introduced to the gathering Bishop William F. Anderson of the Methodist Episcopal church, who delivered a prayer. He spoke at length, giving thanks for the great leaders of the past and asking divine guidance for the future.

It was one of the longest prayers that ever opened a national convention.

Then more music, under the leadership of a singing master, an innovation introduced four years ago by Will H. Hays, the present day movie czar. The convention stood and sang "America."

A lot of time was occupied with the taking of the convention photograph. The aisles had to be cleared and the delegates made to stay in their seats and it represented a considerable undertaking. The national committee had been liberal in the distribution of assistant sergeants at arms, apparently, for there were almost

"KEYNOTE" IS LENGTHY AFFAIR

CONVENTION HALL, CLEVELAND, June 10.—Pointing backward with a prideful finger at Republican accomplishments during the past four years, and peering ahead into the future with a promise of further constructive administration if President Coolidge is given the necessary working majority in congress, Representative Theodore Burton formally opened the Republican national convention here today and in doing so uttered a warning to Republicans that there is no room in this country for a third party.

The speech of Representative Burton did more than merely open the convention amid all the familiar color and panoply of great political gatherings—it set down with considerable definiteness the issues upon which President Coolidge will seek the sanction of the electorate.

The reference to a third party on every hand was construed as a thinly veiled admonition to the insurgents within the party.

"A tendency toward third party movements is manifest wherever parliamentary government exists," said Representative Burton, after a lengthy review of the party's record in Washington.

"This has been true of most of the countries in continental Europe for years. The effect is invariably demoralizing, involving failure in constructive policies and often times control by a minority or combination of minorities.

"If we should tread the path which so many other countries have trod with disastrous results, inefficiency and confusion would be the outcome and there would be an expression, not of majority will, but the will of groups and sections."

This was all, there was no direct reference to menace of a third party presented by the La Follette and allied insurgent groups within the party, but none of his hearers had any doubt as to what this particular portion of the keynote speech referred.

Further on he expressed the party's resentment at "blocs" and "vociferous minorities" and said that "much of the blame that is visited upon Republicans in the present congress is not deserved because on many major questions their party has not controlled a majority in either branch."

There was a marked allusion to the balance of power held in the present congress by LaFollette and his militant band of insurgents.

"Let us not for a minute forget," Burton continued, "the importance of a Republican majority in the next congress, made up of members tried and true, who will stand united."

The country, Representative Burton said, looks to President Coolidge for leadership.

"As a candidate for the presidency, and this in the midst of temptations greater than those by which the angels fell, he has shown no truckling no scheming for votes but has gone calmly and steadily on his way unaffected by the lure of expediency or the promise of success," Burton declared.

Properly after a period of business and economic depression which followed the war.

Peace with all the world, "The Democrats could not make peace," he said, and the Republicans did.

The arms conference which limited the world's expenditures for armament established peace in the Pacific and insured an open door in China.

The budget law and economy in government which he said has saved the nation hundreds of millions of dollars.

A tariff law which he claimed has protected industry and added immensely millions in revenue to the treasury.

Abolition of the 12-hour working day by the late President Harding.

Tax reduction.

Passage of a foreign debt funding law which has already successfully insured the collection of nearly half the billions loaned to Europe during the war.

An immigration policy that will protect future generations and at the same time permit a steady influx of desirables from the world.

The Dawes plan for settlement of the controversial reparations problem which he declared now bids fair to accomplish the highly desirable results of stabilizing Europe.

For the future, he charted this course for the party:

Further tax reduction and reform along scientific lines as laid down by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Strict law enforcement.

Conscription of wealth and labor in time of war as well as human life.

Advancement of the date of the president's inauguration from March 4 to the preceding January 1, in order that the public will may earlier accomplish its result in the halls of congress.

Another arms conference as soon as Europe is stabilized and in that state of tranquility that will make possible international agreements.

Adherence to the world court advocated by Harding, Hughes and Coolidge, with the reservations written by the former.

There was no direct reference to prohibition, or to the Ku Klux Klan, and as for the bonus, Representative Burton merely stated it was now on the statute books and should be accepted as such.

Concerning the investigations at Washington, which resulted in the unearthing of so much scandal, he said:

"I must enter a solemn protest against the impression that there is widespread corruption at Washington. It is an infamous crime to seek to destroy the confidence of the American people in their government."

Undoubtedly, he said, instances of bribery and corruption had been disclosed, but these were matters of personal, not party responsibility, he declared and should be punished as such, irrespective of politics or partisan considerations.

MILLERAND TALKS TO PARLIAMENT

PARIS, June 10.—President Millerand, who is fighting the efforts of the left bloc to force him from office, addressed a message to parliament this afternoon asking the members to "respect the constitution and not make the presidency a plaything of the parties."

Premier Francois-Marshal read the message in the chamber; former minister of justice Ratier read it in the senate.

The president asked the parliament not to begin the session with a revolutionary act.

Rejection of the presidential message, it was expected, would be followed by the president's resignation.

Millerand suffered a snub and a defeat in the senate when that body adjourned, on a motion by the left bloc, immediately after the message was read after refusing to discuss it.

The adjournment vote was 154 to 144, the opposition having a majority of 10.

LAGUNA BEACH MAN VISITS AUSTRALIA

E. E. Jahraus, pioneer real estate man of Laguna Beach sailed from San Francisco today for a stay of five or six months in the South Sea islands and Australia.

For more than 20 years Mr. Jahraus has been actively engaged in business in Laguna Beach. During that time he has seen it grow from a small community of half a dozen houses to a thriving and prosperous small city. Due largely to his efforts several thousand feet of water from between Boat Canyon and the center of the town has been dedicated to the public and will be held as a public park forever. This gives Laguna unique advantage over most beach cities and is a feature that will be more and more appreciated as time goes by.

Coolidge Issues Dominate Tentative G.O.P. Platform

CLEVELAND, June 10— A tentative republican platform, drafted by administrative leaders under the supervision of President Coolidge, was completed today.

The president's closest advisers have written a document dominated thruout by the issues which Mr. Coolidge himself selected for the campaign.

Governmental economy, a promise of tax reforms, and a pledge to strengthen this nation's present friendly relations with the rest of the world were the outstanding issues.

Before its final adoption by the convention, every dissenting faction will be given an opportunity to amend the platform. A series of public hearings were to be held this afternoon by the convention's committee on resolutions, but there was every indication that the document would not be substantially changed.

Altho the platform was technically written by Charles Beecher Warren, ambassador to Mexico, and chairman of the committee on resolutions, most of the planks were prepared by administration leaders who submitted their proposals to the president. These included Secretary of State Hughes; Secretary of War Weeks; Theodore Roosevelt; Secretary of Commerce Hoover; Representative Theodore Burton, of Ohio; Senator Smoot, of Utah, and C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to the president.

The outstanding planks in the document, as new written, are:

Domestic — Administration— Highest endorsement of the administration of both the late President Harding and President Coolidge.

Payment of solemn tribute to President Harding with a declaration that he "gave his life to the nation."

Economy— A pledge to "maintain the integrity of the budget system" and to continue President Coolidge's "policy of strict economy." A declaration "with pride" that the Republican administration slashed $200,000,000 from the cots of government and 50,000 employees from the payrolls, lifting the tax burden some $1,270,000,000 in two years and reducing $2,500,000,000 from the public debt.

Taxation— A pledge to tax reforms with the revision of the new tax law. A declaration that congress merely contented itself with tax reduction and that the need for tax reform still exists.

Tax Exempt Securities — An expressed opposition to "further issuance of tax empt securities" and early enactment of a constitutional amendment permitting the necessary prohibitory legislation.

Labor—A proud reference to the lack of unemployment with a comparison of conditions as they existed when President Harding went into office.

Agriculture—A pledge to give the farmer "all necessary government assistance in organizing and establishing a system of co-operative marketing and in simplifying and cheapening our marketing and distributing machinery." A promise of departmental help in diversified farming where need of and "if necessary, of financial aid during the transition period" of diversification. A listing of the acts passed by the administration to help farmers.

Export Markets—A pledge to continue "vigorous efforts" to strengthen and broaden the export market.

Railroad rates—A declaration in favor of a revision in the freight rate structure to reduce rates on agricultural products.

Good roads—A pledge of adequate appropriation for the construction of good roads.

Railroads—A declaration in favor of rate reorganization to effect a "more equitable distribution of the costs of production" and for the "principle of consolidation."

Railroad labor board—A declaration in favor of continuing the railroad labor board but to "modify it if it fails to give satisfaction."

Immigration— Endorsement of the new immigration law but without reference to the Japanese exclusion clause.

Prohibition—A declaration in favor of law enforcement, but with no comment upon the prohibition law itself.

Senate scandals—A declaration that guilt is personal and a pledge to punish every person found guilty of fraud against the government. A further contention that every public official shall be considered innocent until proven guilty, and an appeal to the public to withhold judgment until the individuals are tried by juries.

National defense—A declaration in favor of national defense.

Veterans' bureau—A declaration to extend every aid, financial and otherwise, to the disabled veteran.

(Bonus issue to be ignored.)

Foreign affairs—A proud reference to America's friendly relations with the rest of the world and a promise to strengthen and extend the friendly status with other nations.

World Court — A flat endorsement of the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge plan for joining the world court, but with a renewed announcement that the United States will have no participation in the League of Nations.

Foreign debts—A declaration of opposition to cancellation of foreign debts but for the "liberal settlement of all outstanding debt upon the same terms given Great Britain."

Arms conference—Extension of hearty praise to the Harding arms conference as the greatest single step toward world peace in history, and a promise to call a new world disarmament conference whenever it is justified by international conditions.

FAMOUS WRITER COMMITS SUICIDE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—"Nothing remains but to dynamite the ruins." So Peter Clark MacFarlane, 53, nationally famous novelist and magazine writer, who lies dead in the San Francisco morgue today—a suicide—explained his tragic end.

His end was dramatic. Broken in health and discouraged with life, MacFarlane late last night walked to the very steps of the city morgue, where, under the fitful flicker of a door lamp he shot himself thru the head.

Before anybody could reach him he crumpled into a heap on the sidewalk and died.

Two long notes revealed, how, after 11 years of vainly battling for health, he finally became so desperate that he resolved to commit suicide.

"The long battle with ill health is at an end, and it is a lost battle," wrote MacFarlane in the farewell letter addressed to Dr. Rufus L. Rigdon of this city, in which he referred to Dr. Rigdon as "the dearest and nearest friend a man ever had."

Continuing in this same letter, which was dated June 3, MacFarlane, who has been successively a preacher, an actor and an author, said further:

"I tried to delude myself with the thot that the old power was holding on, but it wasn't. It is just 11 years since you diagnosed diabetis in my case. Instead of killing me before I was 40, as it should have done, it dragged on. I am but a physical bankrupt. Nothing remains but to dynamite the ruins.

"Disappointing as this is to my loved ones and to my friends, dishonorable as it is for me to go this way, I am still able to feel some satisfaction over my life. Seven years as a pastor are a joy in my memory. I believe I did good. My last work, 'Prodigies of Flame,' represents the best I had been able to do in an endeavor to interpret America to itself."

In the letter MacFarlane went on to describe his early struggle with writing, how he had exhausted too much of his physical energy in getting started, "so long was the road out of the mudhole of youth and incapacity for me."

"I go," concluded the suicide's note to his friend, Dr. Rigdon, "realizing with grim humor that, had I been run over by an auto, my death would have been honorable, but since I go of my own hand it is an act of shame.

"One other thot comes to me. Perhaps there is a new sphere of activity and a new and initial set of duties awaiting me. If I have been adjudged worthy of just that more, wouldn't that be wonderful! A new stretch of the highway of life before me! Goodbye, old fellow."

DETROIT, June 10. — Peter Clark MacFarlane, the noted author who killed himself in San Francisco last night, told Dr. W. L. Stidger about two weeks ago, he learned today, what would drive him to suicide, it was learned today.

The pastor of St. Marks M. E. church here, and MacFarlane were close friends.

ANAHEIM, GET READY!

It is important that Anaheim put itself in readiness for the unprecedented development that is and will take place in California in the next few years.

A study of the state at large shows that while there are now only four million people in the state, there are sufficient resources in the state to take care of at least thirty millions. The state's ideal climate, its proximity to ocean, valley and mountains, its wonderful wealth in mineral and agricultural lands, its outlook industrially, are sufficient to guarantee to men of financial ability that this state is a safe one in which to place their investments. Over one billion dollars is being expended in California this year in development while an analysis of the state's condition shows they are entering upon an era of unprecedented prosperity.

This is a billion dollar year for California. Contracts and appropriations for hydro-electric power development, railway construction, highway construction, irrigation development, and building construction amount to over $1,250,000,000 in California this year.

A survey of commercial conditions in California shows that we are doing a business of approximately one hundred million dollars per day or at the enormous rate of over thirty-six billion dollars a year. Indications are that the tourists this year will surpass all former records.

California has enormous natural advantages in her forests, in her streams, in her minerals, in her lands, in her fisheries, in her homesites, in her climate and in her commanding position on the Pacific. We realize, however, that these natural advantages alone will not bring to the state the development that it is entitled to.

Men of vision in California who have carefully followed the growth in population and in industrial development fully realize that future growth must be made in conformity with a well-planned systematic program.

California has had a natural growth that has brought an investment in industry to the state of one billion five hundred million dollars. We expect to make that investment three billion by 1925. Our marvelous growth in population, resulting in approximately 4,000,000 people living in California at the present time, should make us realize the necessity of preparing for our ultimate and logical population of 20,000,000 people.

An analysis of world conditions, of conditions in the United States, and particularly of conditions in California, shows that there is every reason to believe that we are entering upon an era of unprecedented prosperity. We intend to be prepared for the opportunities that are developing.

Aside from the great natural resources of the state which alone warrant a prosperous community of millions of people, there is another phase to California's solidarity which will bring millions to our shores. It has meant hard work to build and develop the cities, railroads and the great industries of the state, but it has not been all work. There has been time and opportunity for play. We Californians have taken advantage of California's natural adaptability for sports and have developed an inimitable arena for fun and pleasure.

California is the world's greatest playground. From the hunting of whales to a round of golf, from sleighing and tobogganing on the snow-covered mountains to bathing in the balmy surf and rivers, from polo the sport of sports to joy-riding in the clouds, from baseball to the tennis courts, from yachting to the gridiron, we have them all and more in California the year round, and millions are going to come to enjoy these sports and fun with us.

Citizens of Anaheim, located as we are almost in the center of this great playground, in the center of the greatest agricultural district, why should we not make of our Chamber of Commerce a sufficiently strong organization so that it will be able to function efficiently, so that it could be able to vie with other cities in advertising the great interests that we have here. This is the week to determine just how far we will be able to go with an organization through which other organizations of the city will be able to function. Are we going to let other cities excel us in advertising what they have to the vast millions who are coming?

MOTORISTS FIND ANAHEIM IS BEST

J. M. Gunnett was back at his post at the Pickwick stage office this morning after a two weeks vacation. With Mrs. Gunnett he covered all points of interest from San Diego to Ventura, and finds Orange-co and Anaheim are the most promising. The water in the wells at Ventura is 27 feet below the level and conditions are serious. There will be a shortage of hay and some of the big producers have ordered hay from San Joaquin ranches. Mr. Gunnett stated that 185% of the land in Ventura is planed to beans.

The trip covered approximately 1000 miles.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

Conducted by GEORGETTE THOMPSON

HE LOST HER

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man of 21 years. I met a young girl of 16 last fall and went with her two months and got well acquainted with her. One time we had a small quarrel over another girl. She accused me of loving this girl more than I loved her. I told her that she was the only girl for me and that I had never cared for any one else. I know that she loved me at first. She invited me to her home every time I saw her and also invited me to take dinner there, which I did a couple of times. Since our quarrel she has written to me and told me never to come back to see her again as she doesn't care for my company at all.

I would like to gain her friendship again as I dearly love this girl. Please advise me what to do. I have not seen her since I got the letter from her. I never answered it as I thought it was hopeless. H. S. N.

It is difficult to judge the girl's real feelings. She was either so jealous of the other girl that she pretended not to care, or else she is tired of you and made the other girl an excuse for the quarrel. It was wise not to answer her letter because the whole problem is too obscure to solve through correspondence. Even if she did tell you not to come again call at her home some night and tell her you are sorry she feels as she does and you wish she would forget the past and renew the friendship. If she is emphatic about insisting that the friendship be dropped, you may be sure she no longer desires your company. But if she only pouts and seems to want to be coaxed, you may be sure the whole trouble was her jealousy of the other girl.

BROKEN HEARTED BLACK EYES

Your life will certainly not be the same without the married man as with him, but I firmly believe that your chances for happiness are far greater without him. Although love has not come to you before, there is no reason why it will not come again, and when it does come you will be very thankful if you have kept yourself honorable and worthy of the right man. You will also be thankful if you play fairly and do not take another woman's husband. Put yourself in the place of the wife. Probably she is entirely unconscious of her husband's affection for you and believes him to be faithful to her. If he cannot have you there is great probability that he will turn back to her in time and both will be happy.

A PERILOUS LOVE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Six months ago I left home for the first time in my life and went to work in another town. While there I met a young man who right away attracted my attention. He made my acquaintance and invited me to go out to places with him. We went together for quite a while before I found out he was married. I refused to see him and for a long time did not see him. But lately he has been coming again, begging me to see him. He says he loves me only and it is very hard for me to stand by and not grasp love when it comes. This is the only time love has ever come into my life and yet I have no right to take it.

Please advise me what to do for I do not want to be a home-breaker and yet I love him. My life will never be the same with out him.

HE IS INDIFFERENT

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 17 years old. I have black bobbed hair and brown eyes and all my friends say I am good looking. I met a boy from another town about five months ago and he seemed to like me very well and showed his affections more than I cared for, altho I thot I loved him very much.

Why doesn't he do as we agreed to do? He said if he wrote in a few days he wanted me to write, and I agreed to. But he has failed to write. Do you think if he really liked me he would write?

There is another boy who tells me to let this boy go, but I can't seem to get him off my mind. This other boy proposed to me, but I refused as I still have hopes of hearing. What shall I do? I seem to love both and I can't tell which one better. HEART SMASHED.

If the boy really loved you he would surely write. Probably he was a cad and thought he would make the most of his time with you and talk of love, because living in another town he could escape making good his promises. Try to forget him and in time you will succeed. It is evident that you do not care seriously for either of the young men because you are so much in doubt. Do not become engaged until you are sure of yourself. A betrothal is a very serious matter and should not be entered into any more lightly than marriage.

WERDIN TELLS ABOUT SHOOTING

Mrs. Josephus Daniels.

Details of the shooting and death of Franklin Morrison, 19-year-old college boy, who, with Phil Baker, another youth, attempted the "hold-up" of a house party at the home of Fred Harlow in Hollywood the other evening, were told today by E. H. Werdin, president and general manager of the L. A. Paving Co., who was in Fullerton, where his company is filling a big order of street paving. Werdin was exonerated.

Werdin said that the two young men walked in at the side doors about 9:30 and covered the party. While Morrison covered the party, forcing them to put their hands on the table, Baker went into a side room and began rifling it. Morrison stuck his gun into the ribs of Harry Dean, and, with an oath, ordered him to hand over his wallet and be quick about it. Werdin was the next on the list to receive personal attention. Dean protested that there was nothing in the wallet, and hastened the robber to look for himself. This the bandit did, which was fatal to him; for taking advantage of this, Werdin drew his gun from his holster onto his lap, and put his hand back on the table without detection. He made no further move so long as Morrison had his gun against Dean lest even in the convulsions of death Morrison should shoot Dean, but when the bandit drew his gun from Dean and turned to give his attention to Werdin, Werdin seized his revolver from his lap, and fired twice into Morrison's chest, both shots taking effect. Morrison dropped to the floor dead.

At the sound of the shots, Baker turned back from the side-room and seeing what had happened, fired at Werdin, and tried to cover himself behind the door. Werdin dropped to his knees and fired three times into the door where Baker was covering himself, one of the shots, taking effect, but not fatally. Baker then fled into the other room and escaped by the window. Werdin reloaded his revolver, and ran out at the door to try to head Baker off, but by the time he got outside Baker was entered a waiting auto and fled. He is still at large.

Werdin for three years was on the sheriff's force in Los Angeles, and at present is officially a deputy sheriff, which accounted for his having a gun.

Mrs. Josephus Daniels was one of the most popular hostesses in Washington when her husband was member of the Woodrow Wilson cabinet. She is a woman of great nature beauty and personal charm.

Mrs. Daniels was Miss Addie Worth Bagley, of Raleigh, N. C., where they have lived ever since they were married in 1888. She was a member of a "navy family." Ensign Worth Bagley, her brother fatally. Baker then fled into the other room and escaped by the window. Werdin reloaded his revolver, and ran out at the door to try to head Baker off, but by the time he got outside Baker was entered a waiting auto and fled. He is still at large.

Werdin for three years was on the sheriff's force in Los Angeles, and at present is officially a deputy sheriff, which accounted for his having a gun.

Another brother, David Worth Bagley, served throughout the great war as a lieutenant in the navy and is now commander. Their father was a major in the confederate army, and their grand father was at one time governor of North Carolina.

There are no frills about Mrs. Daniels. When President Wilson was first inaugurated Daniels wore his black felt hat and string tie, was seated on the platform. Before the ceremonies began his wife, seated in the press stand a short distance away, wishing to let him know she was there, arose and called out:

"Mr. Daniels! Oh Mr. Daniels!"

Daniels turned, bowed and waved his hand at her. A stranger, observing these greetings, turned to Mrs. Daniels and inquired:

"Is that Josephus?"

"Yes, that's Josephus," she replied pleasantly.

Embassy to Present Fewer at St. James

LONDON, June 7.—Subtract thirty from five hundred.

If there was nothing to this problem but arithmetic it should be easy. But when it becomes a diplomatic problem, as it is in the present instance, it is a whole lot more intricate.

The equation then becomes: 500 minus 30 equals 470 disappointed American women.

Stated more baldly, the elements of the problem are that 500 American women want to be presented at the Court of St. James during the 1924 season. Only thirty are going to be presented. The remaining 470 are out of luck.

Where diplomacy comes in is that it is the task of Frank B. Kellogg, United States Ambassador in London, and his staff, to select the thirty lucky ones. It can't be done just by dropping 470 names in a hat and picking out thirty of them.

The problem is a lot more difficult this year than in previous years. Last season the American Embassy was allowed to present forty American women at court. This year they have been notified by the Court Chamberlain that the list must be restricted to thirty, exclusive of wives, sisters and sweethearts of diplomats, who have a special standing.

The problem will be settled, of course, and diplomatically, so that the enemies that are bound to be made won't be selected as judiciously as possible. But tempers at the American Embassy are going to be under a tremendous strain until the courts, which continues through June, are out of the way.

BIG BENEFITS DERIVED FROM CONVENTIONS

Southern California is benefiting immensely by a number of state conventions being held in the cities of this section this year. These gatherings are bringing together representative men and women of many localities throughout the state. This mingling together and the interchange of thought and the discussion of plans and purposes—all these things are useful and profitable to all who participate. Stimulus to the best in community life is given by the meeting of these convention bodies in any given city.

This Southland would do well to strive energetically in future to bring to this section many large and desirable conventions. This state has had one of the great national political conventions. It should have one or both of them four years hence. A fair arrangement would be for Los Angeles to strive for one of these great assemblages, and for San Francisco to seek the other. This would be just to both sections of the state and also give the delegates to the two conventions a diversity of experiences in this state.

California should become the pre-eminent convention state of the Union. It has all the advantages and resources which make it popular with conventions, and its hospitality is proverbial.

Governmental affairs should be impregnated with integrity, sincerity and devotion to the common weal.

CAUTION WITH FIRE IS NEEDED NOW

The season is at hand or handling fire with extreme care. Not to say that there is any season when fire may be handled carelessly. But the summer, as every Californian knows, is the season of extraordinary peril from fire. It is the season when everything except the water faucet, is dry as tinder. It is the time to safeguard life and property with exceptional care.

Carelessness with fire is not to be construed as applying only to the forest reserves. It should be the rule in cities and towns, and country settlements, as well as in wooded areas. Hundreds of millions of dollars is lost annually through fires that are preventable. Whole cities are devastated from one little piece of carelessness with fire.

This is opportune time to clean up the premises—to remove and destroy rubbish of an inflammable nature, and to remove tinder-like material, so as not to invite a destructive blaze. This is a work that should be entered into with zest here. Besides removing the menace of fire, this cleaning up adds to the neatness and attractiveness of premises.

To express it moderately, Europe should beat its swords into tractors.

Prevention of fires should be the cardinal aim of all. Give co-operative aid in combatting the preventable fire.

POEMS THAT LIVE

TO CRITICS

When I was seventeen I heard
From each censorious tongue,
"I'd not do that if I were you;
You see you're rather young."

Now that I number forty years,
I'm quite as often told
Of this or that, I shouldn't do
Because I'm quite too old.

O carping world! If there's an age
Where youth and manhood keep
An equal poise, alas! I must
Have passed it in my sleep.

WHO'S WHO IN THE DAY'S NEWS

IGNAZ SEIPEL

Attempted assassination of the chancellor of Austria by a boy Socialist directs the world's attention to one of the most impressive figures of post-bellum Europe. In 1922 as a result of a coalition of Clericals and Pan-Germans, Ignaz Seipel was made head of the Austrian governments. Proceeding governments, all of varying degrees of radicalism, had achieved nothing toward Austrian rehabilitation. The value of the krone had dwindled to invisibility, and starvation of the nation was warded off only by the charity of the powers which had been Austria's enemies in the war. Thoroughly convinced by four years' experience that Austria could not be saved by radicalism the people turned to conservatism as a final experiment.

Chancellor Seipel at once inaugurated the policies which have been markedly successful in pulling Austria out of the slough of hopelessness and of restoring her to a large measure of self-sufficiency. He convinced the League of Nations of his ability to carry thru his program, and the league sent to Vienna as its agent an able Dutchman named Zimmerman who aided Seipel in securing loans and in affecting desirable economies. Today Austria stands practically on her own feet, and her future is far from gloomy.

Ignaz Seipel is a Catholic priest. It is seldom in these days that a member of the clergy of any church combines statecraft with the practice of religion and ascends to the leadership of a nation. This tends to make more notable the achievements of Chancellor Seipel, and the fact that he is conservative without being reactionary is another point of interest. Though the Pan-German aided him to become master of Austria he has not sought to forward the Pan-German fallacies. His work has been all for Austria. He has not only saved Austria from starvation and dragged her up from bankruptcy, he has also rescued her from bolshevism and established representative government on a firm basis.

Levi Cohen was looking very dejected. That morning he left the house with $20 in his pocket to try his luck at the races, but, alas! he had returned at nightfall footsore and weary, and nothing in his possession but a bad penny.

No wonder his better half was in a bad temper. "How is it," she snapped, "that you're so unlucky at the races, and yet you always win at cards!"

"Well, my dear," responded Levi, meekly, "you see, it's this way: I don't shuffle the horses."

Comments of the Press

What Editors Are Saying

SAFFRON JOURNALS IN CONTEMPT—San Francisco Journal

The Chronicle, the Express and the Standard of London, the Manchester Guardian and the Norwich Mercury, a week ago had the pleasure of "paying through the nose" for interfering with the course of English law. The Standard was accused of having kept a leading witness in a trial for murder out of the way of the police and with publishing a statement from the witness after the police had warned her to make none to any person. The Express, which like the Standard, is rated as a yellow paper, and the Guardian, were also charged with contempt of court in the same case. The fines cost the five journals 1,500 pounds and costs, while in likely to interfere with due administration of criminal law. He described "this business of an amateur detective investigation, followed by immediate publication of the results," as a perilous undertaking.

The affair has its lesson for the American press and particularly for yellow newspapers. When its English brothers attempted to influence the proceeds and results of the court they were called to account. The question our people and courts should ask is: "When is the license of the press to be bridled? When will the creator of the power of the press control its creature? When will the people say to it: 'We, not you, are the master.'"

Trial by newspaper and attempts by newspapers to influence the outcome of cases in court are intolerable. The attacks of yellow newspapers upon President Coolidge for example, constitute abominable instances of license. Our yellow papers are supported by monetary magnates who perhaps do not realize what they do. They shape a monster that will destroy them as Frankenstein's monster destroyed its maker.

GLEANINGS FROM THE BOOK OF LIFE

ONE MAN'S VIEW OF LIFE

Early in his life Samuel Butler began to carry a note book and to write down in it everything he wanted to remember; it might be something he heard some one say, more commonly it was something he said himself. In one of these notes he gives a reason for making them:

"One's thoughts fly so fast that one must shoot them; it is no use trying to put salt on their tails."

Butler, the author of "The Way of All Flesh," surely one of the greatest novels of recent times, said these things about Life in his notebook:

"Life is one long process of getting tired."

"Life is the distribution of error—or errors."

"Life is like music, it must be composed by ear, feeling and instinct, not by rule. Nevertheless, one had better know the rules before they sometimes guide in doubtful cases.

"Life is not so much a riddle to be read as a Gordian knot that a will get cut sooner or later.

"A sense of humor keen enough to show a man his own absurdies, as well as those of other people, will keep him from the commission of all sins, save those that are worth committing.

"There are two great rules of life, the one general and the other particular. The first is that every one can, in the end, get what he wants if he only tries this is the general rule. The particular rule is that every individual is, more or less an exception to the general rule.

"Nature is essentially mean, mediocre. You can have schemes for raising the level of the mean, but not for making every one two inches taller than his neighbor, and this is what people really care about.

"All progress is based upon a universal innate desire on the part of every organism to live beyond its income.

"Is life worth living? This is a question for an embryo, not for a man."

THE Presbyterian church of Anaheim, will inaugurate during the first portion of the summer, a new program of religious education, a daily Bible school to be conducted in the church. This Vacation Bible school meets a long felt need for additional religious education and great opportunity is afforded through this means to vastly increase the scope of moral and religious training and character building.

The Bible school will open its sessions Monday, June 23rd at 9 o'clock. Sessions will be held each morning at the Presbyterian church from 9 to 12 except Saturday and Sunday, and holidays.

Children from the ages of 5 to 12 will be accepted and all are welcome. There is no tuition. The work of the day will be three departments, the kindergarten, primary and junior department. The supervisors are Mrs. C. C. Beatie, Mrs. Goddard and Mr. Arthur Cozns.

Orange-co Day Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the day when Orange-co does her bit at the biennial in Los Angeles. All the decorations of the local convention halls will be from Orange-co, flowers and fruits included.

Systematic use of gladioli and delphiniums will feature luncheon arrangements. Shasta daisies, pansies, violets, ria cornflowers and other blue blooms will be used for program decorations. Mrs. Eva Boyd is chairman of the committee for collection of flowers and further information may be received by getting in communication with her.

Also in honor of citizenship day Thursday, June 12, countless California blossoms of red, white and blue will be needed and these may also be delivered with the special flowers for Wednesday, if necessary. Rules previously published for the successful packing of flowers should be observed. They should be picked before full bloom and placed in cold water over night if possible, then closely packed in boxes lined with wet newspapers, sprinkled carefully and tied so as not to crush.

Honor Society Honored

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Sutherland entertained members of the Junior Society of Anaheim High school at their cottage at Anaheim Landing today. Every member of the society had completed tests and last days of school excitement and had a jolly time swimming, boating etc. There were about two dozen in the crowd.

A picnic dinner at noon was a delightful feature.

The marriage of Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt to the Hon. J. F. Cecil, scion of an old English family, was a notable event last month. Miss Mary Wallace, daughter of Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, was a participant in a recent notable international wedding to Washington, united by the president, the bridegroom being Dr. Charles Bruggman, Swiss diplomat.

Now comes news of two other prospective alliances of international import. The engagement of Miss Barbara Murray of New York, to Lord Boune, heir to the Earl of Moray, head of one of the oldest and most important Scottish families, was announced almost simultaneously with the engagement of Miss Helen Marye, daughter of the former ambassador to Russia, and Mrs. George Marye of Washington, the bride's fiancé being Count Arnold of Bath, Lombotte Scott, Arnold of Bath.

Progressive Party

Honoring Miss Edna Mitchell, who recently severed her connection with the local clinic, co-workers gave her a little farewell party Saturday evening. The girls went to Walker's theatre, Santa Ana, and after enjoying the picture returned to the home of Dr. Beaver Raiche where they had light luncheon, then music and dancing and chatting.

The jolly little company of invitees included the Misses Tallackson, Erickson, Pannier, Curtis, Ella Mitchell, Dr. Raiche, Dr. Margarve, Mrs. Beale and the honoree.

Miss Mitchell will visit the Yosemite and probably visit her old home in the east.

Back From Mountains

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Harrison and small son Darrell, have returned from a week's outing at Moreno dam in the mountains, 65 miles beyond San Diego. They joined a party of friends from Long Beach, making a crowd of 14 and passed the time in successful fishing. The nights were passed in the open with never a "bad dream" they aver.

Their mileage from Anaheim to their camping place registered 176, which they covered in record time. They traveled more than 350 mile in the entire journey.

Local Folk Enjoy Dinner

Many Anaheimers attended the dinner dance given by the Fullerton Community Players at the California hotel, last evening. An elaborate menu was served and during courses a program was given. The dancing pupils of Miss Claire Coutant entertained. The Misses Ingrid Hoppe and Phyllis Granada, both of Anaheim, entertained with duet dances and later in group dances. Miss Granada gave a very beautiful Spanish dance which won her a host of applause.

Dancing was the feature after the dinner and a most enjoyable evening was passed by the members and their guests.

Household Hints

TODAY'S RECIPES

Cornmeal Pancakes—Scald one cup cornmeal with one cup boiling water. When cool add one cup of milk, one egg, one-half teaspoon baking powder. In case sour milk is used add one-half teaspoon baking soda.

SUGGESTIONS

Muslin Window shades—Very attractive and serviceable window shades can be made from inexpensive unbleached muslin. Cut it seven feet long and the width of your window, then cut three scallops across the bottom, the center one a little shorter, more pointed and much narrower than the other two. Bind the scallops with two inches above the scallops, stitch a piece of the muslin, wide enough to carry the stick, hem the top and tack to the old roller. When the stick is inserted at the bottom, one has a very satisfactory window shade, for when they become soiled they can be taken down and removed from the roller, washed, starched and ironed, and always be clean.

Roast Veal—In roasting veal put one-half lemon in the pan.

BILLY WHISKERS

BY FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

"You remember Billy, determined to follow his master, had just butted down the door and escaped from the general.

Hearing a ripping, tearing, smashing sound behind him, the Captain turned to look, just in time to see Billy coming through the hole, holding his head down, going through with a second butt. Give you my word, I never saw a better job. Here, Hawkins," called the General to an orderly who was passing, "take this goat over to the stable where the horses are and put him in a box stall with lots of straw and food and water in it. And see that one side of the stall are high enough that he cannot jump over."

Hawkins saluted by touching his cap, then he called over to Billy and took hold of his beard to lead him away.

Think of it. Touched his sacred beard! Besides the indignity of being led by his beard! Never would Billy submit to anything like that. The consequence was that Hawkins had scarcely touched him when he found himself sprawling on the sidewalk at the General's feet.

The General and the Captain helped the man to his feet and he went limping off, holding both hands over his stomach where Billy had butted him.

"I think you will unless we up myself," said the Captain.

"I think you will unless we wish to have the regiment incapacitated. For I see he is going to resent being shut up."

(Well, we shall have to wait till tomorrow to see if Billy will get to go with his master or not.)

National Convention Opens

many officials on the floor as delegates and alternates.

The fireworks exploded with the proportions of a French 75. The hall was so large that a can of powder had to be used to get the picture.

It was 11:20 when Adams finally stalled out again and presented the pudgy figure of George B. Lockwood, secretary of the national committee, who read the official call, just to make everything legal and traditional.

This formality concluded, the business of the convention really began. John Adams spoke briefly, welcome and praise of party achievement. The crowd listened with scattering applause, until he reminded them they were here to nominate the next president of the United States" and then there was a yell.

He appointed a committee of three, Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota, Mrs. Carlisle of Indiana, and A. T. Roberts of Michigan to escort Burton to the chair. Then, as an afterthot, he called for a vote on whether Burton was to be the choice. It was given with a roar and the genial chairman retired blushing over his mistake in appointing the committee before the delegates had signified their ratification of William M. Butler's choice of Burton as the temporary chairman.

Burton began speaking at 1127. It was to be a long speech and the delegates settled back comfortably in their seats for a long stay. They listened with comparative silence to the earlier part of Representative Burton's speech. Even the eulogy of the late President Harding failed to elicit more than scattered applause.

He spoke slowly and directly into a radio device which carried his words out of the great hall reproduced them in the principal hotel lobbies in Cleveland and broadcast them to millions of unseen listeners.

Burton's taking the Wisconsin and other insurgents severely to task evoked a greater outburst of enthusiasm than any other portion of his lengthy address.

It was not until Burton got nearly half way thru his speech that the first manifestation of real enthusiasm broke from the delegations. This demonstration came when Burton declared:

"The Republican party stands now as always firmly for law enforcement."

This was construed as a direct reference to the prohibition situation.

There was more real applause when he said the party stood for conservation of natural resources and was opposed to "hundred year leases."

The allusion to the bonus that a Republican congress passed over President Coolidge's veto, was received in interested and stony silence. Burton simply dismissed the bonus with the statement that it is now on the statute books and should be considered history.

Burton finished at 1:04 p. m., having spoken an hour and 37 minutes. He was obviously tired at the conclusion.

The national committee brought in a long list of temporary officers and these were speedily ratified.

La Fayette Gleason was named secretary and Col. Ed Thayer of Indiana sergeant at arms.

The usual routine resolutions were then adopted, providing for the appointment of committees which already have been completed and announced and for the rules of the 1920 convention to govern this session.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, who heads the Pennsylvania delegation, received a tremendous ovation when he was recognized by Chairman Burton to present a resolution. Delegates leaped to their feet and the great hall resounded with cheers. After the ovation continued for several minutes Burton insisted upon his coming to the platform and he did so amid a deafening boom of applause as Mr. Mellon greeted the resolution providing for the appointment of the resolutions but before he could escape from the platform he was forced to stand in the glaring light thrown on him from searchlights about the hall.

Burton stopped the demonstration after several minutes and Mellon returned to his seat.

Reading clerks then began to read the personnel of the various committees. It proceeded amid a scattering of applause, each delegation applauding its own sections.

The hour was getting late and the delegates were getting hungry, so J Henry Roraback, of Connecticut, rose and moved it be dispensed with and this was unanimously passed.

The convention adjourned at 1:26 p. m. until 10:30 a. m. Wednesday.

CLEVELAND, June 10—Lacking the tension of other years, yet still curiously dramatic in the dethronement of men who have been in party control for a quarter century, the Republican national convention opened here today with its pathway chalked out with the definiteness of a road map.

The delegates, 1,109 of them, will nominate Calvin Coolidge for the presidency, select a running mate for him from among a score of candidates, adopt a platform over which there is little real fighting, and then go home, having done in three days what in other conventions it has taken days and nights of turmoil and strife to accomplish.

There has been no convention like it in 20 years—since 1904 when the Republicans marched quietly to Chicago and nominated Theodore Roosevelt.

Only the task of nominating a vice-president stood out today as offering the thrill of fights such as have made other conventions the great American quadrennial drama.

When the convention opened this morning it appeared that the vice presidential contest had narrowed down to a handful of candidates, among whom the names of Frank O. Lowden, Herbert Hoover, Judge William S. Kenyon and Senator Charles Curtis stood out.

Those who stand high in the councils of the Coolidge administration predicted that ultimately the tryed would narrow down to two men—Hoover and Kenyon—and that the ultimate choice would be one of these.

The Lowden movement was in a peculiar state. Governor Lowden could be nominated if he would but say the word. But he won't say it. On the contrary he has with dogged persistence assured friends that he does not want to commerce a reluctant willingness be nominated and will refuse to to serve if nominated.

Administration leaders who are in close touch with the White House have taken Governor Lowden at his word, and generally speaking their strength is being transferred to Hoover.

Hoover, like Lowden, has said that he was not a candidate, but when the historic convention opened this morning word reached Cleveland from Washington that Mr. Coolidge has succeeded in extracting from his secretary of friends that he does not want to be nominated.

The Lowden movement simply refused to die, despite the efforts of the ex-governor.

An arrangement was cooked up this morning whereby when the roll of states is called for the presentation of names, Alabama, being first, will yield to Illinois, and the name of Colonel Lowden will be placed in nomination.

As a result of energetic work done by the Lowdenites, who refuse to take "no" for an answer, it was reported just before the convention opened this morning that the votes of Illinois, New York, Alabama, Oregon, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Connecticut and Nevada, will form the basis of the Lowden strength.

The Lowden camp declared the list would be augmented by time balloting rolls around on Thursday.

The combined votes of these states, if they go solidly for Lowden, will be 256, or approximately half of the received 555 to nominate.

The Coolidge managers, however, do not see eye to eye on Hoover. The eastern contingent in the "administration crowd" is fairly solidly back of him but the western managers, like James W. Good of Iowa, are quietly and with great insistence petting forward William S. Kenyon, who until his ascension to the federal bench a few years ago, was the leader of the senate farm bloc.

Good is doing yeoman service among the delegates in Kenyon's behalf.

Good has flatly told his colleagues in the Coolidge campaign that there must be named on the ticket a man who is acceptable to the dissatisfied agricultural regions between the Mississippi and the Rockies.

He does not consider Hoover to be that man. Hoover's native state is California, but he has long been removed from there and cannot rightly be classed a westerner in the strict interpretation of the word. This at least, is the argument of the Kenyon backers.

On the other hand the eastern ers inside the Coolidge campaign plainly do not relish Kenyon. He was the leader of the farm bloc who stood shoulder to shoulder with La Follette, Norris and other progressives in the senate on many issues and every Republican keynoter in this convention is taking sharp cracks at the "insurgents" within the party.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS STRENGTH

NEW YORK, June 10.—The stock market exhibited moderate strength today. The reduction in the call loan rate to 2½, the lowest in seven years, and the further easement in the other rates for momentary accommodations exceeded the sound dividend paying issues.

Sugar stocks staged a vigorous rally in connection with the improvement in the commodity. Oils, motors and leathers and equipments gave a good account of themselves. Steel common advanced fractionally following the issuance of the tonnage report.

Interest in the railroad group was centered in the dividend payers, many of which, especially Missouri Pacific Pfd., went to a new high level for the year. New Orleans, Texas and Mexico stood out in the lake group because of its strength. Chicago and Northwestern advanced 2 points on the declaration of the regular dividend.

Cotton and grains showed strength, the latter due to the highly unfavorable government report.

Bonds were firm. Foreign exchanges were irregular.

Non-dividend paying railroad shares occupied the bulk of financial attention in the final hour, such issues as Missouri Pacific Pfd. and Texas & Pacific bettering their previous tops of the year.

Firmness continued to characterize transactions in the industrial division, the majority of stocks making their last prices in the last few minutes of trading. The market closed strong.

Stock sales today $96,000 shares; bonds $19,480,000.

GRAIN MARKET STRONG

CHICAGO, June 10.—The government report with its bullish influence, presented dealings in the grain market today with the result that the trend was strong all day and the close showed good gains.

Wheat closed 4c to 4¾ up; corn up 1¾ to 2¾ and oats 1¼ to 1⅝ up.

Provisions moved off at lower prices, but recovered some on the favorable trend in the grain pits.

HOXIE PICTURE FULL OF THRILLS

Universal has produced a real western picture starring Jack Hoxie that is a combination of thrilling action, interesting story and pictorial beauty in "The Phanton Horseman," which will be shown at the United theatre tonight and tomorrow night.

In one scene Hoxie took one of the greatest risks of his screen career, in a remarkable ride down a steep mountain slope, jumping his pony over a sheer bluff into a treacherous sand pit. The result is a thrill for the most blase fans. There are remarkable shots which make this picture unforgetable.

The cowboy star does some of his best riding in his picture and also some very capable acting as the youthful sheriff. Lilliam Rich is very bewitching as the girl. The rest of the cast including Wade Boteler, Ruby LaFavette, Nell McKinnon, George Williams, Ben Corbett and others.

15 MEN, 30 BOYS AT Y. M. SUPPER

Fifteen men and 30 boys gathered at the Y. M. C. A. last evening and sat down to the "get acquainted" for the Find Yourself campaign, which is being conducted by Secretary Warren Ashleigh of the local Y. M. C. A.

Bert J. Steadhead, instructor at the high school, was the toastmaster and after singing had been enjoyed the boys and men were introduced, each telling his profession or occupation now engaged in or the one he hoped to be engaged in after finishing school.

Mr. James McGill, boys' work director of the Santa Ana Y. M. C. A., was the speaker of the evening, also holding a conference for the men immediately following the banquet. The men of the different professions are giving their time to talk with these boys regarding their life work and preliminary interviews will take place during the next few days between boys of the Hi-Y and the businessmen of the town.

The following men are among those who have consented to act as interviewers: S. S. Hartranft, Leonard Evans, Chester Lewis of Fullerton high school, F. N. Gibbs, Oscar Heying, Arthur Coons, G. W. Sloop, Dr. J. A. Jackson, Oscar Renner, O. E. Sherwood, Eugene Dorland, William Falkenstein, E. H. Metcalf, William Wagner, Dr. J. L. Beebe, Rev. T. H. Walker, Frank Lehner, Mr. Schaffer of Fullerton, L. O. Culp of Fullerton. Others will be asked to help in this work.

WILLS GIVES WAY TO FATHER TIME

NEW YORK, June 10.—Harry Wills, challenger of Jack Dempsey, is slowly giving quarter to that great, invisible fighter, Father Time.

Wills, even his staunchest admirers admitted today, is slowing down under the burden of years. He failed to knock out Bartley Madden, the "fighting Irishman," in 15 rounds here last night and suffered an almost irreparable loss of prestige.

The negro, six feet 2 inches and weighing 212 pounds, as an advancing a looking physical specimen as ever crawled thru the ropes. He seemed in superb condition. Long, lean, razzbonzy, splendidly performed, with long, powerful arms, tremendous shoulders and slim waist, he looked 100% better fighter than pudgy, 185-pound Bartley Madden.

But something was wrong with Wills, despite his splendid appearance. He had speed, but not the flashing speed of old. He had agility, but not any more than Bartley. He had power but not enough to put Bartley away. And he seemed to tire easily.

The brown pounder, his body steaming with perspiration and his face in a perpetual scowl, trod round after round, to shoot thru a knockout punch but Madden was at there to stay the limit and he stayed. Wills discarded his long range punching and attempted to beat Madden with short rapid jolts to the face or clashing blows to the body.

He cut Madden's face to ribbons. He rocked him almost off his feet on several occasions. He pounded and mauled and slashed and held and scowled, but he couldn't subdue the fighting Irishman. He won all but the tenth and eleventh rounds, but the bloody faced Madden would not go down.

Madden had stayed ten rounds with Fred Fulton, three times he has gone the limit with Bill Brennan, and he had held off for ten rounds the other challenger of Dempsey, Tommy Gibbons.

And when the gong rang at the end of the 15th round, Madden stood there in the center of the ring, his bloody face wreathed in smiles, bowing to the cheering throng, a hero in defeat.

Wills, tired and crestfallen crawled slowly thru the ropes and strode with slightly bent shoulders and bowed head to his dressing room.

SARGUM SPROUTINGS

The auto racing fans that attended the Ascot races Sunday saw the mighty De Palma defeated twice. Duray, the French ace, did the trick. Duray was driving a Miller car equipped with a supercharger. This device proved to be a speed producer, as Duray not only ran away from De Palma in the long race but also in the single lap contest. It is up to De Palma to equip his Miller in the same manner and then there will be a real contest of nerve. It will be the man with the nerve to open up and let out the speed that will win and there will be a very good chance that too much speed will be attempted and the career of one or the other will be cut short.

Vernon and Los Angeles surely got spanked in the past week Sacramento took five out of seven on the Angel Pet while the Vernon Tigers were sneered with a six to one loss on the Seattle Indian war ground. The Indians are going strong and wilder as the season goes on. "Red" Killifer must be importing some of Canada's liquid fire to pop up his tribe in such a fashion. They are trailing the Seal now and are near enough to make the flying Seals sit up and take notice.

Seattle takes on the web footed tribe of Kenworthy. The Iron Duke will fight the Warriors to a finish but the finish is liable to be soon. Another big week for Seattle and one not so good for the Seals will consign matters at the top of the league standings.

Los Angeles entertains the Seals and will in all probability show them a good time. The Seals seem to have the Angel bands numbers. Marty Krug has failed with all his experimenting to produce a winner. Cruse has failed to hit any better than Galvin while playing first base and his fielding a mile below the deposed first sacker. The Angel catching staff have wooden arms and are failing to hold fast low curves. The Angel pitching staff is going great but pitchers can not win if their team mates refuse to spot them to a run or two.

The Vernon Tigers played great ball but were just out luckel and out played by the wild Indians. The Indians have a powerful ball club and while in a rampage they are almost impossible to stop. Vernon should pick up a bit of just ground at the Oaks expense this week.

Babe Ruth and his pals are still having their troubles in hanging onto their lead in the American. The lowly Red Sox are still in a tie with them. The Browns are on the up grade and the Tigers keep within hailing distance of the leaders. The American league race is a pretty one so far.

The Cubs keep trailing the McGraw tribe with such persistancy that the Little Giant is laying awake nights figuring out a plan to give them the slip. If the Cubs pitching holds up, the Giants will have to move in high all season and then they may not be able to cut in front.

SENIOR HI-YERS LEADING LEAGUE

Performing before several hundred bowling baseball fans the Senior Hi-Y and Schneiders teams mixed last night in the crucial game of the league with the Hi-Y boys coming out on top with a score of seven to five.

This victory gives the Hi-Y the undisputed lead in the league, having won all five games played and only one stumbling block between them and possession of the silver loving cup and that is the Junior Hi-Y team. Schneiders up to last night had a perfect percentage and both teams had their boosters and backers out in full strength, which helped to keep both teams right on their toes every minute.

It looked like a walkaway for Schneiders when in their half of the first inning they scored three runs on one walk, three errors and no hits and counted two more in the second frame after two men were out by three two-base hits. But here the story changed, the Hi-Y boys got down to business. Walker settled down and pitched some real ball, allowing only two hits in the last seven innings while the batters began to get on to Schneiders pitcher and this lead was finally overcome.

The Hi-Yers made one run in the first inning on a walk and one hit, scored two in the fourth on Sutherland's single and Ashleigh's double, counted one more in the sixth on a walk and two errors and won the game in the eighth spasm. Sutherland was out at first, Ashleigh knocked the ball over the fence for a three-base hit and scored the tying run on Utter's out. Lehr got to first on an error and Mann sent him to third and put himself on second with a pretty double. Spencer then sent them both home when his fly ball hit the top of the fence and bounced back into the field. He had bounced the other way it would have given him credit for a home run.

Ashleigh and Spencer were the hitting stars of the game, each accounting for three out of four trips to the plate and the two combined making half the number of hits counted by the whole team. Walt Schneider made two of the five hits for his team. Billy Knott and Mike Simon umpired in a fine manner and at the game was clean and fast thruout.

REPUBLICANS' PLATFORM CHAIRMAN CALLED COOLIDGE'S CHOICE FOR MATE

CHARLES BEECHER WARREN.

That Charles Beecher Warren, close personal friend of President Coolidge, is the latter's choice for the vice presidential nomination is the general belief as Warren directs the writing of the Republican platform, to be presented to the convention in Cleveland. Warren was named chairman of the resolutions committee, which drafts the platform, by the executive committee of the national committee.

Sport Snaps by JACK KEENE

Speaking of sporting events. Charlie Cummins, veteran wolf hunter of De Smet, S. D., and Roy Campbell, Nebraskan, have just staged a contest that ought to make every red-blooded man's pulse quicken. To settle the matter of supremacy at wolf hunting the two staged a 10-day hunt for a side bet of $500.

Cummins took but eight dogs into Campbell's own territory for the hunt and pitted them against the pick of Campbell's pack of 80. At the end of 10 days Campbell admitted Cummins' prowess after the veteran had bagged 23 wolves.

To rest his dogs one day Cummins used but one of his pack—Buster. This animal brought home three pelts alone that day.

Somebody announces that the New York Giants have the oldest catching staff in the world—Hank Gowdy, who is 34, Eddie Ainsmith, who is about 32, and Frank Snyder, who is 31. The busy scribe takes the record book's word for their ages, however, and thereby hurts his own idea. This dope makes their ages total only 97 years. But it would run something like 119 if the boys weren't so durned modest.

Chick Evans leaves himself out of consideration when naming the men who have the best chance of grabbing the national open golf championship over the Oakland course next June. That's what makes Evans the great golfer he is—his modesty and generous spirit.

REAL ACTION IN "CODE OF SEA"

If it's action you're looking for, here it is—plus in the Paramount picture, "Code of the Sea," which opened at the California theatre this afternoon. Rod La Rocque and Jacqueline Logan are featured in the principal roles of the production, directed by Victor Fleming.

After "The Ten Commandments" and "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" it's a pretty hard thing to find a more popular combination than La Rocque and Miss Logan. Any picture either of this pair appear in is certain to be a sure-fire hit, and, judging from the reception accorded it at the California, "Code of the Sea" is more of a knockout than a hit.

There's not a moment during the running of the picture, when you're not sitting on the edge of your sea—open-mouthed, wondering just when a big wave is coming down upon La Rocque in the small boat and send him hurtling into the sea or when you're not trying to decide just when that same player is going to "snap out of it" and show these "clever seamen a thing or two. He's a coward, yes, just as his father was before him, but when the "only girl in the world" tells him that she believes in him—that she knows he can and will overcome his cowardice—then things begin to happen.

If it's action you're looking for, here it is—plus!

In conjunction with the regular bill, the management offers something new, a real surprise in the form of "Plastigrams." Now, don't mistake this, "Plastigrams" will make you howl and shriek with laughter. It's a real knockout!

FAIRYLAND SHOWS GOV'T WAR FILM

Today and tomorrow Anaheim Post No. 72, American Legion, will show "Flashes of Action," at the Fairyland theatre.

These are the official government pictures of the World War by the signal corps and feature the 91st and 40th divisions. The films are being shown for the first time.

That the picture meets with the approval of the navy who saw the preview is best evidenced by the fact that numerous people well known here are assisting the organization in making the show a success.

The picture is not one that can be counted on to show exaggeration of either the heroic or the seamy side of life at the front. It shows the work the men did just as they did it. Mud, sudden death and other incidents of the struggle are there, and the uncomplaining spirit of the soldiers that carried them over and through the German lines, through barrage fire and against the pick of the German troops—all are thrown on the screen.

NO STATE DEFICIT

SACRAMENTO, June 10—State revenues during 1924 probably will be sufficiently increased to offset the soaring costs of government and avert a deficit, the state board of equalization said today in a statement announcing tax collections from all railroads for the year.

Tax on steam and electric roads for the year will aggregate $15,267,411 over the preceding 12 months' period, it was estimated.
