THE QUESTION OF TREES AND RAIN.

The present has been a rather remarkable Winter. We have, up to the present time, since the rainy season commenced, we think only three rainstorms of importance. But fortunately they came at a time, and were so abundant in the quantity of water furnished, that the crops of the country have not materially suffered. But can we calculate with any certainty for the hereafter that the rains will come in due season? There are reasons to fear that this year is exceptional. It is seldom that we have too much rain during a rainy season. Crops and stocks have each, during some years, felt the effects of drought in failures for one, and death as well as starvation to the other. In view of such facts, some efforts have been made to offset this by offering inducements for the cultivation of trees. Almost every one is satisfied that the abundance and absence of trees in a country have a great influence upon its climate, its rain-fall, its cloudy days, its moisture or dryness of climate, and consequently on its general state of fertility. Without trees, woods, forests, a country is very likely to be deficient in the desirable quantity of rain. With trees in abundance, rains in abundance may rationally be anticipated.

The report comes to us that nearly, if not quite through New England, there is a complaint that the water supply is deficient. It is not merely because the weather is so intensely cold forty degrees below zero at Franklin, N. H., and cold in proportion elsewhere—but the fact is the earth itself is comparatively dry, the water has almost altogether failed, nearly all that otherwise might be available is frozen, and consequently in numbers of the cities and towns water is the necessity. Boston journals say the rains been no rain there for six months. Last Summer and Autumn a similar cry came from New England generally. Why should it be so? We know two things: in the early days of New England there were no complaints of the want of water. Of course when the population was small, but little comparatively was needed, except for crops, and they were scattered through the country in the midst and between woods and forests, of which in those days there were an abundance. But it is not so now. During the last fifty years the denuding of the soil of the forests that formerly clothed it has been broad, general and constant. The area of cultivated land has thus been vastly increased, but at the expense of fertility, for the rain supply has decreased as have the forests disappeared.

This system is not confined to New England. Pennsylvania and New York and other sections of the country feel the effects. Some encouragement is extended in certain localities for the cultivation of trees. But the very bodies that offer such premiums seem to have no idea that a grown tree is worth vastly more than a mere sapling. While planting and cultivation of trees is sought to be encouraged, little or no measures seem to be taken to preserve the trees and forests already matured. On this Western Coast, where rain is such a necessity for the maturing of our grain crops, vandalism is left almost without any check whatever, to do its work. Very fast our magnificent forests have been disappearing. Twenty-five years ago the Contra Costa hills were fringed with the redwood trees. We could see their tops as they shot up from the eastern sides of the mountains and flaunted their tall tops in the wind above the summits of the hills that protected them. They have all disappeared. It is so generally along the coast. We have been destroying our forests recklessly, and in so doing have been destroying our assurance of grain crops. In New England there fails not half the amount of snow that fell two hundred years ago. In some sections that difference has been arrived at within fifty years. And it will be so here.

Summer heats, Summer suns in the Eastern States are very powerful in evaporating the moisture of the soil. Once, when and where the earth was protected from the influence of the sun by the presence of trees, we have known the existence of brooks and small rivulets which did not disappear even during the hottest seasons. But it did not require longer than the existence of boyhood to discover that the removal of forests about the section of country where they rise, had the effect of destroying them altogether. The same natural law exists here. Were all our California hills covered with dense forests, we should be much more likely to have a regular supply of rain, notwithstanding the modifying influences otherwise. The absolute necessity of protecting the forests of this Pacific Coast is becoming more and more apparent. Officers of the Federal Government have occasionally interfered to prevent the unauthorized destruction of trees on public lands; but while tinkering with the case of one offender, acres and acres of timber have probably been destroyed by others. Laws for protection of timber, as well as for its cultivation, are imperatively necessary, and these should be pointed and severe against trespassers, for one might almost say that the salvation of the land and of its people depends upon its forests. It is fortunate that coal has been discovered in so many sections and in such quantities. Otherwise it might not have taken many years more to have left large portions of the United States as free from rain as are the Arabian and African Deserts, or those of Arizona and Chile.—Alta.

A NICE MAN TO RIDE WITH.—The London correspondent of the Graphic tells this story: One of the popular notions in England is that our system of railway traveling surpasses yours in comfort, from the fact that with our small carriages it is easy to get a compartment to oneself, or, at worst, a carriage with only two occupants.

That there are drawbacks, however even to this summit of earthly felicity the adventures of a worthy director who recently traveled from one Midland station to another may show. The train he had to catch was very full and he was rather late, and in hurrying to and fro he observed a carriage tenanted by two men, one of whom was leaning out of the window while No 2 was asleep in the corner. No. 1 endeavored to assert that the carriage was taken, but the director would stand no such nonsense and bustled into the carriage, followed by the solicitor to the company. The train started immediately, and tenant No. 1 proceeded to explain that his sleepy friend was a lunatic, and that he was his keeper and that as his patient was excitable all that was to be hoped was that he might not wake. Unluckily this hope proved vain and the invalid being aroused required the director to sit opposite to him while he explained the theory of the connection between fish ponds and frogs, the director's open mouth doing duty for the former and the ramrod of being represented by little pellets of paper, which were hurled down the aperture with great precision by the lunatic. This interesting invalid next insisted on the director's daubing his face with ink which was produced from a traveling bag and the entertainment wound up with a screaming farce called "Hot Pancakes!" in which the fun consisted in the insane gentleman's slapping each of his companion's faces en turn, and exclaiming, "There's another hot pancake." This finally resulted in a free fight, and the capture of the lunatic; but the director takes care now whom he travels with.

THE PREVENTION OF SEA-SICKNESS.—Dr. Giraldes has published in the last number of the Journal de Therapeutique an account of the means by which he avoided sea-sickness during two passages to England and back. He was at Boulogne last June en route for London, when the weather was so rough that many intending passengers hesitated to cross the Channel. Dr. Giraldes was informed by a colleague at Boulogne that American physicians used the syrup of chloral as a preventive of sea-sickness with successful results. He therefore obtained some syrup of chloral, put himself into a quiet corner, and took his syrup directly the vessel was in motion, when although his fellow-passengers experienced the usual unpleasant consequences, he arrived at Folkestone without having suffered the least inconvenience. The same results were obtained on the return voyage; but he increased the amount of chloral. He had again occasion to cross the Channel at the end of September, by the night boat from Calais to Dover, and thinking with reason that the sea would be rougher at that season than usual, he had a draught made up composed of chloral, 3 grammes; 45 grains; distilled water, 50 grammes; gooseberry syrup, 60 grammes; and French essence of peppermint 2 drops. He took half of the draught as the vessel left the harbor and arrived at Dover without having suffered in the least from sea-sickness, whilst his companions were in the usual state of prostrate misery.

A HARD BED TO FILL.—The junior editor of the Gallathin——is noted for his modesty. When school-boys, he and the writer were inseparable companions, probably because we both stood in such holy awe of "the girls." A pair of mischevious black eyes would stampede us quicker than "a big dog." One day "Bob" was sent to neighbor Shaw's to inquire about some straw for filling beds, and of course the writer went with him. Mr. Shaw was the father of six hateful girls, who had rather laugh at a fellow than not, and when we arrived they were all seated at dinner. I dodged behind the corner, while Bob edged carefully in at the door, and with a scared look stammered:

"Mr. Straw, can you let me have enough Shaw to fill up bed?"

"Well I——," said the old gentleman, glancing around the circle of astonished faces, "I suppose so. Here are six besides the old woman; but I'd rather you would leave her if the girls will be sufficient. Take them all and God bless you."

Perfect shrieks of laughter went up from those mean things, and "Bob" took to his heels, followed by the writer and cries from the old man to come back and he'd "throw in the old woman too."—Exchange.

EARLY TREE PLANTERS.—In the eighteenth century the number of patrons and planters of trees greatly increased. The Duke of Argyle stocked his garden at Whitton, and received, according to Macmillan's Magazine, from Horace Walpole the honorable sobriquet of "tree-monger." At the same period, the first great planter of another ducal house began to clothe the hill and mountain tops at Blair Athol and Dunkeld with a timber tree which Pliny had admired for its durable and incombustible nature, and which was used for the Forum of Augustus, and for many of the buildings and bridges of Rome. The larch had been introduced into England a hundred years before it arrived at Dunkeld with some Orange trees in 1727; but it had not been planted as a timber tree till it found its way from the hot-house to far colder situations on the Duke of Athol's estate, covering, as it now does, then 10,000 acres, and yielding an immense revenue.—The (London) Garden.

The collection of gems in the British Museum has been recently enriched by the purchase of a splendid circon of jacinth. It is not larger than a common garden pea, but it is one of the finest specimens known; and its cost was upwards of £700 sterling, or $3,500.

A lease for 999 years has recently run out in England. An estate let for that term has reverted to the original holders, or rather their representatives. The land is at Woolwich, and was church property a thousand years ago, but was leased to the Crown for military purposes.

A young fellow in San Francisco suddenly snatched a kiss from a lady friend, and excused his conduct by saying that it was a sort of temporary insanity that now and then came upon him. When he arose to take his leave the pitying damsel said to him, "If ever you feel any more such fits coming on you had better come right here, where your infirmity is known, and we will take care of you."

The Sutter, Cal., Banner says: "We are informed by Mr. Wm. Mawson, one of the champion watermelon growers of Sutter county, of a novel way of producing watermelons. When the vine begins to bear, he leaves the first watermelon on each branch to grow undisturbed, but covers the branch up with dirt from the first melon to the second one. Within six inches or more from the end of the vine will be a seedless watermelon, the melon nearest the body of the vine having kept all the seed."

The Grangers' Convention, held in San Francisco last week, adopted the following: Resolved, That the Patrons of Husbandry of California, while they deeply sympathize with their brethren of other industrial pursuits in their efforts to liberate themselves from the thraldom in which they are held by monopolies, disavow any intention of forming political alliances, and that in accordance with the avowed principles of the order, they reaffirm their unqualified opposition to joining with any political organization as a body, each patriot being entirely free to exercise the elective franchise according to the dictates of his own judgment.

In his address before the Mechanical Section of the British Association, Professor James Thompson discusses the question of improvements in railway engineering. By reference to the reports for the last twenty-seven years he shows that in the early part of that period about one passenger in five million was killed. Through the period the number steadily diminished, till in 1875 it was one in eleven million. Among the employees of the roads, however, a very different state of affairs exists, for in the same year, 1874, one out of every 923 employees of the railroads in Great Britain had his life. The great majority of these accidents occurred at stations and along the lines in the operations of coupling and shunting, or switching the cars from one track to another.

SATURDAY...FEBRUARY 27, 1875.

DURING the year 1874, the Panama steamers took from Los Angeles for New York and Liverpool 12,187 packages of merchandise, weighing 2,346,817 pounds. Wine and brandy were the principle articles exported by these steamers, aggregating 1,068,750 pounds.

THE Sacramento Union has been purchased by the "Sacramento Publishing Company," and been merged into the Record. The Record-Union, as it is called, is under the general management of Wm. H. Mills; and George Frederick Parsons will be the chief editorial writer. The Record has always been a first-class newspaper, and the increased facilities for news-gathering, which this fusion of interests affords, is certain to render it an admirable journal.

AT a recent meeting of the Vineland, (N. J.) Anti-Fashion Society, a letter was read by Mrs. Butler from George Wright, of Azusa, Los Angeles Co., Cal. He said he had learned through the Herald of Health, of an Anti-Fashion Society in Vineland of which she was President. He denounced the present existing fashions in law, religion, dress, orthography, eating and drinking in no measured terms, and encouraged the Society to go on in its good work.

QUITE a lively row is going on in that little isle across the water. The election of John Mitchell to Parliament has been declared illegal, and a new election ordered. But John "will not down," and has issued an address to the electors of Tipperary, presenting himself again as a candidate, and so popular is he that it is believed that there will be no opposition. Mr. O'Callaghan, member of Parliament from Tipperary, has resigned. His constituents demanded this action for having voted for the the disqualification of Mitchell.

MR. I. M. HOLT, Secretary of the Los Angeles Immigration and Land Co-operative Association, informed us a few days ago that he answered about twenty letters every day, from parties in the "States" who are seeking information about our country. Some of the questions asked verge on the nonsensical. For instance, one man wants to know how they build houses in Southern California so as to effectually exclude poisonous reptiles! There are no doubt hundreds of persons who look upon a residence in California as exposed to danger and privation as a residence in one of the undiscovered deserts of Africa. Hence the necessity for journalists to enlarge upon apparently trivial and well-known matters.

THE TILTON-BEECHER case continues the absorbing topic in public and private circles. Nine weeks have been consumed, and apparently the trial has only begun. The plaintiff's lawyers expect to occupy two weeks longer in the examination of their witnesses, when General Tracy will open for the defence, which will occupy another week, after which the defence will examine about fifty witnesses, among them Oliver Johnson, Samuel Wilkinson, Aug. Steers, A. B. Holladay, Mrs. Woodhull and Mrs. Morse. Beecher himself will, of course, be the principal witness, and his testimony is awaited with the greatest anxiety. The defence expect to occupy about the time of that of plantiff. The closing speeches and summing up by Evarts and Beach, will certainly occupy two weeks, and thus the battle will drag along till late in May.

THROUGH the courtesy of Wm. R. Olden, agent of the Los Angeles and San Bernardino Land Company, we are enabled to lay before our readers this morning a statement of the lands sold on the Stearns' ranchos from Oct. 1st, 1874, to February 24th, 1875. These figures will give a better idea of our progress than could be conveyed by any other method.

BEAUTIFUL HOMES.

There is nothing that tends more to the happiness and contentment of man than an attractive home—a plot of ground that one can beautify and adorn to his taste. The dwellers in crowded cities, huddled together in tenement houses where brick walls are all that meet the eye on either side, know nothing of the genuine happiness of the dweller in the country, the possessor of a little piece of land where in his leisure hours he can bury the cankering cares of life in his little flower garden and dig them under with the weeds. And those who struggle and work with their plot of land in the cold Eastern States, where they can only raise a few of the hardiest trees and flowers, have no conception of the ease and trifling expense with which we dwellers in this glorious Italy of America can beautify and adorn our homes. Here the poorest man can enjoy the pleasures of gardens of which the costliest conservatories of the millionaire of the frozen regions are but an imitation. Here in this section of the country, where the climate is so genial, the soil so rich, water so abundant, and land so cheap, scarcely any energetic man need be without a little home adorned with shrubbery and flowers, the cultivation of which will give health to his body and rest to his mind. The cutting up and colonizing of the large ranchos which have been hitherto locked in the hands of capitalists is daily giving to the poor man the means of possessing a small tract which he can beautify and adorn and call his home. The increasing facilities for immigration are fast filling our country with an industrious, intelligent class of people who come here for the express purpose of finding some place where they can settle down and enjoy the comfort and pleasure our beautiful country affords. The greatest mistake made by the earlier settlers was the desire of possessing huge, unwieldy tracts, too large to cultivate and enjoy. This mistake, however, is rapidly being rectified. The steady, hard-working, home-loving German settlers, who first laid out, and by their patient industry planted the colony from which has sprung our now flourishing and important settlement, understood and appreciated the value of ornamenting their homes. And there scarcely can be found a vineyardist in Anaheim who did not reserve a place near his house for the cultivation of shrubbery and flowers, and the result is to-day, a collection of comfortable and beautiful residences which suggest to the tired invalid Eastern tourist the idea of health, comfort and peace; and is the strongest inducement that can be held out to him to settle among us and share the blessings which nature has so lavishly bestowed upon the denizens of this fertile valley.

AN IMPORTANT MEASURE.

The stockholders of the Anaheim Water Company held a meeting at their office on last Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of discussing a proposition to unite with the Cajon Water District and participate in the benefits secured by the Irrigation Law. After an interchange of views, Messrs. Fischer, Reiser and Scott were appointed a committee to confer with the Water Commissioners of Cajon District in regard to the proposed fusion. The committee and Commissioners held a meeting on Wednesday, and an agreement was drawn up which will be laid before a meeting of the Water Company this afternoon for their action. The agreement reads as follows:

The Committee of A. W. Co. propose that the A. W. Co. will go into Water District No. 1.

Provided, That the Board of Commissioners of Water District No. 1. will grant them a perpetual right to pass such portion of water of their acquired Water Right as can be contained in a box — feet wide by — feet deep through the main ditch of Water District No. 1. This water to be supplied to the A. W. Co. at such point on the main ditch of Water District No. 1 as the trustees of the A. W. Co. may hereafter select and to be given to them at all times when such an amount of water is in the ditch of Water District No. 1.

In consideration of which the A. W. Co. will agree to pay the estimated cost of the enlargement of the ditch of Water District No. 1 as may be necessary to pass the required quantity of water, and further agrees to pay for the use of such water the current rates as charged by the Board of Commissioners for Water District No. 1.

The A. W. Co. will further stipulate that they will surrender to Water District No. 1 no previously acquired Water Rights, held by them, except as above provided.

Should the interests of Anaheim and Cajon be consolidated, the Water District will comprise over 25,000 acres. Nothing will so conduce to the prosperity of Anaheim as to be situated in the very midst of such an immense body of irrigable land, and we hope that no insurmountable objection will be found to bar the way to such a happy consummation.

Since the above was written, Mr. Olden has informed us that he has received a dispatch from the L. A. & S. B. Land Company authorizing him to include in the new district all of their lands except those on the north and north-west of town.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

M. C. Baker is preparing to start a brass foundry in Los Angeles.

Senator J. P. Jones will arrive in Los Angeles about the middle of next month.

The Los Angeles Turnverein will give a masquerade ball on the 6th of March.

Owen Gibney has been appointed Deputy Sheriff for San Fernando township.

The Senator brought 67 Chinamen who will be immediately put to work on the Independence Railroad.

Mr. Waite will commence the publication of a newspaper at Downey City in about three weeks.

El Monte Grange gave a concert on Monday evening. It was well attended and a large sum was realized.

Tarbox's Distillery, in Los Angeles, has again been seized by the Government authorities for alleged irregularities.

A telegram was received on Thursday stating that the Orizaba was detained by a break in her machinery. The passengers were transferred to the Ventura.

R. M. Widney has applied to the Common Council of Los Angeles for a franchise to construct a street railroad. One mile of said road is to be completed within twelve months.

Mr. Wm. H. Martin, manager of the California Immigrant Union, was made the recipient of a fine gold watch last Saturday from the Centinela Company, as a mark of esteem for his efficient services.

The contract for building the wharf of the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad has been let to Mr. Thos. R. Bard, of Ventura county. The contractor proposes to push the work ahead as fast as possible.

We understand that sufficient money has been subscribed to raise the upper story of Mr. Jacoby's warehouse, and convert the front half into a Masonic and Odd Fellow's Hall, and the rear half into a town hall. The building is very large.—Wilmington Enterprise.

The following Grand Jury was impanneled on Wednesday: H. D. Barrows, foreman; W. Kallisher, E. Newton, George Carson, Thomas Mead, J. A. Nichols, Timothy Crowley, M. Manning, Gustav Rust, Samuel Hoffman, Frank Baker, N. C. Carter, A. S. Ragland.

A son of Cyrus Sanford was herding cattle out on the Ballona Ranch a few days since, when a large eagle swooped down upon a good sized calf and carried it up to a distance of some twenty feet from terra firma. The bird then let its prize drop. The calf was damaged considerably, and the boy ran off in dismay.—Herald.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk on Tuesday, incorporating a company to appropriate the unappropriated waters of San Antonio Cañon, to convey the same to the San Jose ranch and to sell to parties for irrigating and other purposes. The incorporators are: A. R. Messerve, C. F. Loop, S. Sorby, E. F. Huse and E. M. Ross.

We learn that a new bank is about to be started in Los Angeles by a combination of capital from San Diego, San Francisco and this place. A lot, 25 feet front, on Main street, next north adjoining Chauvin's store, has been purchased for $12,500, and a fine building will be erected thereon for the bank. Four of the directors are residents of this county and three of San Diego. The general business manager and cashier will be ex-Mayor Toberman—Express.

The Artesia land sale was a decided success. The first day the sales were: 324 acres and 20 town lots, aggregating $24,192 29; the second day the sales amounted to over $26,000; the third day the sales amounted to $23,400 90 making a total for the three days of $73,773 84. The prices paid ranged from $32 to $81 per acre. The sale has been adjourned until the first Tuesday in April. The Company will at once commence the erection of a fine two-story frame school house, which will cost not less than $4,000.

The Los Angeles Star learns from Deputy United States Marshal Dunlap that Chavez, accompanied by seven men, well mounted, well dressed and well equipped, and leading an extra horse, were seen at Borax Lake two weeks ago February 21st. Mr. D. states that shortly before that time the gang had robbed a German near Kernville of $800 in money, five horses, and as much clothing as they wanted. When they made their appearance at Borax Lake it was evidently with the intention of robbing the station, but just as they rode up, a party of miners appeared in the foothills, whom the robbers mistook for a sheriff's posse, and incontinently fled. On the Tuesday following they met Mr. Victor Beaudry between Coso and Cerro Gordo, and relieved him of what valuables he had on his person —amount not known. They have not been definitely heard from since. The proprietor of the Borax works at the Lake recognized Chavez distinctly. There can be no doubt about his personality. It is about time to catch Chavez.

The House has passed Page's bill as reported by Mr. Myers, of Pennsylvania, to prohibit the importation of Chinese coolies under contract, and of Chinese women for immoral purposes. The bill is very stringent in its provisions, and that portion of it in relation to Chinese prostitutes is as sweeping as the California statutes.

The following is the record of the Pacific Coast Congressmen on the motion to allow the Texas Pacific bill a chance to be reconsidered: Aye—Houghton, of California, and Nesmith of Oregon. Nay—Page and Luttrell of California. Absent—Clayton, of California, and Kendall, of Nevada.

In the San Francisco Probate Court the petition of Emma A. Milliken, daughter of T. J. Milliken, late prominent wholesale merchant in Sacramento, for the revocation of letters of administration granted upon the estate of her father to C. N. Stratton, came up. The letters were granted to Stratton upon the request of Kate P. Pearson, a mulatto woman who represents herself to be the widow of Milliken. The case excites much interest on account of the notoriety attached to the liason of Milliken with the colored woman, resulting in the obtaining of a divorce by his wife and his marriage to Kate Pearson the next day, and his subsequent death. The point sought to be made by the petitioner is that the marriage was null and void on account of the woman being a mulatto. The case was continued to Friday, March 5th, when the question of jurisdiction, and whether a mulatto under the constitution of the United States is prohibited from marrying a white man will be argued.

Anaheim Gazette

SATURDAY...FEBRUARY 27, 1875.

Kleinigkeiten.

—Mr. A. G. Smith has just received a barrel of chesnuts, beech and other nuts from the East.

—D. G. Sorenson has commenced the erection of a fine costly building on the Boldt vineyard.

—Episcopal services will be held at Enterprise Hall to-morrow morning by Rev. Mr. Neals.

—N. H. Mitchell has bought the Fashion Stable from Charlie Wright, and will again resume charge of the equines in that establishment.

—We hear that the Fisher Bros. have bought 6,000 acres of land in Rancho las Virgines, and will remove their sheep to their new purchase.

—Mr. T. C. Hull, manager of the Westminster Co-operative Store, informs us that the average monthly receipts amount to about $1,700.

—We have seen a letter received a few days ago from T. Casad, formerly of Santa Ana. He has purchased some land in Messilla, New Mexico.

—John Fischer has laid out a street 86 feet wide, through his vineyard. A row of eucalyptus trees on each side makes it a beautiful avenue. He has some very desirable town lots for sale.

—Among the participants in the Terpsichorean festivities on Monday night were H. McLellan, of Los Angeles, and his charming cousin, Miss Bradbury, of Santa Barbara.

—R. R. Haynes, the Superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, was in town last week. He intends doubling the lines, and Harry rejoiceth thereat.

—We find among the proceedings of the District Court, that on Tuesday a demurrer was submitted in the case of F. Gay vs. Bolsa Chica Wharf Company.

—It is said that a colony of Tennesseans will soon arrive in this county. General Forrest will be one of the colonists. We suggest "Pillowville" as an appropriate name for the new settlement.

—Messrs. Viles and Marsh, who recently purchased a tract of land adjoining the farm of Evey Bros., are preparing to sink an artesian well. Mr. Cook, who owns an adjacent tract, has already received pipe for the same purpose.

—A meeting of the Anaheim Cemetery Association will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the rooms of the Anaheim Water Company. All members are requested to be present, as subjects of importance will be discussed.

—A lad named Marion Freeman, whose parents live at Santa Ana, suffered amputation of his leg above the knee one day last week. The operation was made necessary by the formation of a large tumor on the knee, the result of a slight bruise received a short time ago.

—Mr. Hansen, the gentlemanly conductor on the Anaheim Branch, is the messenger of Wells, Fargo & Co., and can be relied on to transact business in Los Angeles with accuracy and attention at a very small charge. He has access to the Banks in the afternoon, and will transact any banking business.

—We have been requested by Mr. A. Langenberger, agent for Wells, Fargo & Co., to call the attention of the charitably disposed to the fact that the Express Company will receive and remit all moneys which may be given in aid of the Kansas and Nebraska sufferers.

—The merits of Tim Carrol's tree transplanter seem to be fully appreciated. It is necessary for him to occasionally visit the various orchards and nurseries and insist that the owners pay due respect to his patent. A recent visit to Los Angeles disclosed the fact that several parties were infringing on his rights.

—Messrs. Holman & Davis have bought D. W. Field's farm of one one hundred acres. Mr. Field, we understand, will leave for Monterey in a short time; a circumstance that we, in common with his many friends, exceedingly regret. Mr. Holman, one of the purchasers, was formerly agent for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company at San Francisco.

—Lightning plays strange freaks and so does fortune, and we are pleased to find that our old friend, John W. Strauchon, has stopped fooling with the electrical current in Arizona, and established himself in Los Angeles with the firm of Lips, Craigue & Co., wholesale dealers in liquors and cigars. We wish him success and commend him to the public.

—We have received a letter from Mrs. Mary Kelly, of 725 Sutter street, San Francisco, in which she desires us to assist her in procuring information in regard to the whereabouts of her son, Thomas Kelley. He left San Francisco in November last for Anaheim, since which time no tidings have been heard from him. Information left at this office will be promptly forwarded to the anxious mother.

LARGE YIELD.—Our esteemed correspondent at Orange writes as follows: We have received from Mr. Harwood, of this place, who has kept an accurate account of the income from his infant vineyard the past season, the following encouraging report: From 3,000 vines of the white muscat variety he has realized upwards of $440. Two thousand five hundred of these vines were but one year old, or rather making their second years growth from the cuttings. The remaining five hundred were two years old. Together they yielded 5,000 pounds of grapes and 30,000 cuttings. The grapes were sold for four and five cents per pound and the cuttings at eight dollars per thousand, thus making the amount realized upwards of $440. The vines are set eight feet apart, or six hundred and eighty to the acre, hence the income per acre averaged the snug little sum of $100. The vines are trained low and spreading, after the new method, which Mr. Harwood prefers, believing that a finer and sweeter grape is produced thereby. They certainly ripen better and earlier. He says also that, compared with the upper country, the vines here come into bearing earlier, and the fruit not only ripens earlier in the season, but is decidedly larger and better. His vines have never been irrigated since they were started from the cuttings. This certainly augurs well for this section of California.

BUSINESS MATTERS.—Our merchants report an increase of business during the week. The prospect of an abundant harvest has unclosed purse-strings that have for a long time been closely tied, and money is palpably more plentiful. H. Blanken expects to commence removing to his new and commodious quarters to-day. Clark & Co. will do likewise in eight or ten days. The store they now occupy will be fitted up as a tinshop by Messrs. Lowe & Leach who have already received a large stock of tinware. Stappenbeck is busily engaged in putting a new front on Dreyfus' building on Centre street, which will be occupied by Goodman & Rimpau. Postmaster Higgins will in a few days commence building an addition to his drug store and post office, and will also make improvements on the building now occupied by him. When completed the post-office will be a model of convenience. To accomodate the demand, he will have fifty lock-boxes.

FIRE COMPANY.—A meeting of citizens to discuss the propriety of re-organizing the defunct fire company was held on last Saturday evening. S. J. Davis presided, and A. W. Steinhart acted as Secretary. On motion of John Fischer a committee consisting of Messrs. Durr, Zeyn and Menzel, was appointed to take an inventory of the property of the company, ascertain its condition and what was needed for its efficiency. They were also instructed to make arrangements for the proper keeping of the apparatus, and ascertain the cost of flooring the truck-house. The committee will make their report at a meeting to be held this evening at Enterprise Hall. We understand that Mr. Richards has offered, for a compensation of $20 per year, to keep the truck and apparatus in good working order and repair. A general attendance is desired at the meeting this evening.

MORE INQUIRIES.—Rev. Robert Strong, Superintendent of Westminster Colony, has handed us a letter received by him from Wm. H. Sprinkle, North Topeka, Kansas, who desires to subscribe for the GAZETTE, so that he may become acquainted with our country and its resources. J. F. Mayhew, of the firm of Richardson & Mayhew, dry goods merchants, Austin, Minnesota, has also sent for the GAZETTE. H. H. Gray finds No. 112, West 45th street, New York, a rather cramped locality, and also desires to cast his lot with us. The demand for information in regard to Anaheim and surrounding country is rapidly increasing, and we are now making arrangements to issue a mammoth edition containing an exhaustive and thoroughly reliable exhibit of the inducements which our country offers to immigrants.

THE BALL.—On Monday evening Kroeger's new hall was formally dedicated to the God of Amusements. A happy, fun-loving crowd gathered together, and reveled in the winding intricacies of the "mazy" until early morn of Tuesday. The affair was admirably managed, and was socially and financially a success. Over one hundred dollars were realized, which will be applied to benevolent purposes. The supper at the Planters' was all that could be wished. The rosy cheek of beauty paled, and dancing for a while forsake; they went to supper and returned, flushed with the wine and gorged with cake!

NEW TOWN—The Los Angeles and San Bernardino Land Company are about to lay off two sections of land into town lots. The site is near Costa Station, about five miles from Anaheim. It is probable that the new metropolis will be named "Northam."

SICK.—We regret to learn that Dr. David Taylor is seriously ill with pneumonia.

FOUNTAIN VALLEY.—We have received a letter dated Fountain Valley, described by the writer as all that portion of the country between Gospel Swamp and the sea. Our correspondent says that there are over one hundred settlers on the tract, most of them hard-working, honest, law-abiding citizens. They are busily engaged sowing barley and other grains, planting fruit trees, and fixing for a corn crop, and making other improvements, building houses, etc. The tract in question is claimed by the settlers as Government land, and the result of the contest between them and the adverse claimants is looked forward to with a great deal of solicitude on their part, as would naturally be expected. Our correspondent predicts that if the settlers are successful, Fountain Valley will, in a few years, be one of the most thickly inhabited and best cultivated valleys in the State. There is no one who will not wish them the fullest measure of success, if, as they say, they have the law and the facts on their side.—Star.

A LUCKY FALL.—It will be remembered that a few days ago a shock, like that of an earthquake, was felt. It wasn't an earthquake however, but merely the concussion of the atmosphere produced by the rapid descent from a high altitude of the four-year old son of Al. Steinhart. He was playing on the porch of Phil. Davis' house, when he toppled over and fell a distance of eighteen feet to the ground, the only damage being the loss of some skin from his little nose. It was some time before his parents could ascertain from him the cause of his damaged probocis, as he dreaded that his escapade would get him a licking. He didn't get it.

HOTEL PROJECT.—A company is being formed for the purpose of erecting a fine hotel, of sufficient capacity to meet the wants of the public in this prosperous section for some time to come. It was at first the intention to build it on the west side of Los Angeles street, opposite the Presbyterian Church, but being unable to procure the necessary land for the purpose, the Company talk of building on Centre street, at a short distance from the railroad depot, if they can procure a suitable site. We will be able to obtain the full particulars of this enterprise in a few days.

SCIENTIFIC CARD-PLAYING.—For the benefit of those who like to play that little game called "Pedro" scientifically, we record these few facts. If the pack contains 52 cards and the player receives six at a time, the different variations in which he can receive them is 20,358,520. If there are four players they can play 488,604,480 different plays. If it takes 15 minutes for each play, and they play ten hours per day to complete a number of plays equal to the number of the above variations, it will take 33,443 years?

RELIGIOUS NOTICE.—Services will be held at the Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, and in the evening at 7:30. Preaching by Rev. J. M. Allis. Topic in the morning, "The constant presence of Christ." Topic in the evening, "The nature and function of Conscience." Sabbath School at 10 o'clock, A. M. Meeting for the study of the Scriptures on Thursday at 7:30, P. M. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

PERSONAL.—We had the pleasure yesterday of a call from Mr. St. John, of the Boston Post. We regret the necessity which compels him to return to his post of duty in a few days. Mr. Gus. S. Alden is canvassing our vicinity in the interests of the Los Angeles Herald. We commend him to our friends, and the literary public generally. George and Robert Kuchel will leave to-day for the mining regions of Nevada.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—We beg to acknowledge the receipt of a five-gallon keg of beer from the proprietor of the new brewery. In color it is a golden yellow, strongly resembling English ale; in taste it is highly superior. Orders for kegs or bottles can be left at the brewery or at Mossman's saloon, and they will receive prompt attention.

CHANGE OF TARIFF.—Mr. H. McLellan, agent for the Goodall, Nelson & Perkins' Steamship Company, informs us that freight on wine has been reduced from 2½ cents to 1½ cents per gallon; empty pipes from $1 50 to $1 25; and puncheons from $2 to $1 75.

SALES.—Charles Harter has purchased ten acres of land from John Adams, paying therefor one thousand dollars. The land is adjacent to the railroad depot. L. W. Kirby has purchased the old school-house lot from N. H. Mitchell for $500.

ARRIVED.—The schooner, George W. Prescott, Captain Cook, arrived at Anaheim Landing on Sunday. Her cargo consisted of 160,000 feet of redwood lumber, consigned to Halberstadt & Co.

DOING WELL.—It gives us pleasure to announce that A. G. Beebe is progressing as rapidly and finely as could be expected.

SATURDAY...FEBRUARY 27, 1875.

HE WANTED A CRADLE, NOT A COFFIN.

He came into the office of a West End undertaker yesterday, with a look of great care on his honest face. His eyes were heavy and slightly bloodshot, telling of nightly vigils, and of loss of sleep. His hair was unkempt and shaggy. The soft hearted man of coffins looked upon his visitor with a gaze full of pity and thankfulness—pity for the customer's loss, and thankful for his patronage. He was so young to be burdened by the loss of a dear one by death.

The manufacturer of burial cases nodded a silent assent and condoling recognition; the young man from the country said:

"How d'ye?"

Then came a painful silence, broken at length by the man of grave business.

"Can I do anything for you to-day, sir?"

"Wall I reckin' so, stranger."

Another silence. Once more the undertaker began by suggesting:

"Your sister?"

Young man stared a moment, then, as a light gradually broke upon his perplexed mind, he smiled a smile more suggestive of sorrow than happiness, and replied:

"No; my wife."

"Sudden?"

"No; expected su'thin of the kind for several months."

"When did it happen?"

"Bout four o'clock this morning."

"Looks natural?"

"Rather." (Spoken carefully, and expressive of some doubt.)

"About what do you want the cost of it to be?"

"Don't care for expenses; git it up kinder nice. I'll treat her handsum, cause she is the fir-st one I ever had."

"Very well, my friend; you'll have it lined with white satin, I suppose?"

"Jest as you say, stranger."

"Silver-headed screws, too, I suppose?"

"Y-a-a-s, I s'pose so. An', stranger, jest put a bully top to't."

"Oh, of course; and you'll want a glass in it, also, I suppose?"

"Y-a-a-s—Oh, certainly—you bet. Get her up sniptious, you know, old fellow. None of your dratted one-hoss fixins for me. No sir'ee."

"Just so. Silver handles, of course."

"Eh? What's thet you say, stranger—silver handles? Oh, durn it, now, won't thet be pilin' it on too hefty, like? I kin stand silver screws and such, but there's no use makin' the hull tarnation trap of silver. The thing has to be moved, and must have handles, but I ain't quite so stuck up as thet now—not quite, stranger."

"Very well," acquiesced the man of obsequies. "I'll put ordinary handles to it then."

"Eggs-actly—them's 'em mister; now yer talkin'. Or'nary handles'll do. But I say, stranger, (reflectively), make the wheels glisten like thunder!"

"Wh—wh—wh-eels?"

"Yes, wheels. What's the matter with you, anyhow?"

"But who ever heard of wheels to a coffin?"

"Coffin!" shrieked the dejected looking young man. "Coffin! Now, who the dickens said anything about coffin?"

"Why, don't you want a coffin?"

"No-o! I want a cradle—a trap to rock my new baby in."

"And isn't your wife dead?"

"Not by a jugful. Don't you make cradles for sale?"

"No, my friend, I am an undertaker."

"Undertaker of what?"

"I make coffins."

"Oh, Lord, let me ketch the feller that sent me here."

And the grief-stricken youth, crammed his hat over his eyes, ran his hands deep down in the pockets of his trowsers and bounced out on the street searching for vengeance.

ABOUT KISSING.—A bachelor says: "People will kiss; yet not one in a hundred knows how to extract bliss from lovely lips, no more than they know how to make diamonds from charcoal. And yet it is easy—at least for us! First know who you are to kiss. Don't make a mistake, although a mistake may be a good thing. Don't jump up like a trout for a fly, and smack a woman on the neck, on the ear, on the corner of her forehead, on the end of her nose, or knock off her waterfall. The gentleman should be a little the tallest. He should have a keen face, a keen eye, a mouth full of expression. Don't kiss everybody. Don't sit down to it; stand up. Need not be anxious about getting into a crowd. Two persons are plenty to corner and catch a kiss; more persons spoil the sport. Take the left hand of the lady in your right; let your hat go—any place out of the way; throw the left hand gently over the shoulder of the lady, and let the hand fall down upon the right side toward the belt. Don't be in a hurry; draw her gently, lovingly to your heart; her head will fall lightly upon your shoulder—and a handsome shoulder strap it makes. Don't be in a hurry; send a little life down your left arm. Her left hand is in your right; let there be an impression to that, not like the grip of a vice, but a gentle clasp, full of electricity, thought and respect. Don't be in a hurry! Her head lies carelessly upon your shoulder! You are nearly heart to heart! Look down into her half-closed eyes! Gently, yet manfully, press her to your bosom. Stand firm. Be brave, but don't be in a hurry. Her lips are almost open. Lean lightly forward with your head, not the body. Take good aim; the lips meet—the eye close—the heart opens — the soul rides the storm, troubles and sorrows of life—(don't be in a hurry)—heaven opens before you—the world shoots from under your feet as a meteor flashes across the evening sky—(do not be afraid)—the heart forgets its bitterness—and the art of kissing is learned! No noise, no fuss, no fluttering and squirming like hook-impaled worms. Kissing don't hurt; it don't require a brass band to make it legal. Don't jab down on a beautiful mouth as if spearing for frogs! Don't grab and "rank" the lady as if she was a struggling colt! Don't mass her hair, scratch down her collar, bite her cheek, squinze her rich ribbons, and leave her mussed and rumpled. There, that will do for once."

Tumor of 12 Years' Growth Cured by Radway's Resolvent
BUTLER, MASS., July 16, 1869.
DR. RADWAY—I have had Cancer Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried every thing that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Handbook, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took one bottle of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Sarsaparilla, and there is not a sign of tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter, and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You can publish it if you choose.

MEDICAL

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.
The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grandma's Knitting.

BY KATE ALLYN.

'Tis the quiet hour of twilight
Which follows the set of sun,
When the toil of day is over,
And the evening rest begun,
And the silence is broken only
By the ticking of the clock,
While grandma sits by the fireside,
Knitting a little sock.

The yarn flies over the needles,
In stitches of white and gray;
But her fingers only are working,
For her mind is far away;
And a vision of golden ringlets,
Of a snowy muslin frock,
Moistens the eyes of grandma,
As she knits the little sock.

Oh, oft have those fingers fashioned
Finest garments of old!
Oh, oft on that loving bosom,
Have rested ringlets of gold!
For "grandma" then was "mother,"
And her own were the household joys;
And she held in her deep affection
The love of three darling boys.

Dear Charlie was lain 'neath the daisies,
When his years but numbered two;
Fred fell in the battle at Vicksburg—
One of our heroes in blue;
But the babe of darling Louie
In the cradle she loves to rock;
And 'tis for the second Charlie
She is knitting the little sock.

No wonder that grandma sits musing
While the shining needles fly;
No wonder the seam and the turning
Are marked with a weary sigh.
Her work will be rounded and finished
At the striking of the clock;
And a crowd of tender memories
Knit into the little sock.

—Youth's Companion.

Chicago Spirits.

The writer has seen what purported to be materialized spirits right here in Chicago; but no cold chills ran down his back, and his hair had no inclination to rise. Nor did he feel any gush of enthusiasm, for the apparitions were so transparent that he could see through them. The most impressive and necessary appurtenance of the show was the formidable cheek of the "medium." Full details of the performance here referred to will be given in a subsequent article, together with an exposition of various other mysteries of assumed mediumship as exhibited in this city. It is his present purpose to treat upon the method of Mrs. E. A. Blair, the "Spiritualist," located at No. 707 West Madison, in painting pictures while she is blindfolded. Not taking into consideration the conditions under which her pictures are executed, they possess but little artistic merit. They mostly represent flowers variously arranged in wreaths or boquets. Some of these flowers are not known to mortal botanists, but are supposed to grow in the "Summer Land." The petals and stamens are painted with tolerable skill, but for all flowers there is a uniformity of leaves or foliage, made by easy strokes with the brush. When painting with different oil or water colors, she seldom uses more than one brush, which she wipes, when necessary, on a cloth secured to what remains of her left arm, the latter having been amputated at or near the elbow. The artist is fairish, "fat and forty." She is a native of Vermont, and has been in the "spiritual" business about six years, though she claims to have had some "developments" at an earlier period. Her resumption of mediumship is supported by the fact that she paints pictures while blindfolded, in such a way as seemingly to preclude the possibility of her being able to see. Narrow strips of linen cloth sometimes wet, are several times folded and laid over her eyes, and then covered with a handkerchief, which is bound around her head, after which she passes into a state of trance, as is claimed, and goes to work with brush and paint upon some Bristol board.

Several years ago, when the writer was connected with one of the metropolitan journals as a reporter, he was first privileged to witness the painting performance of the blindfolded Mrs. Blair. For the time he was astonished, and was strongly inclined to attribute her success to clairvoyance. On that occasion she was blindfolded, as above described, the handkerchief, however, not coming below her slightly retrouse nose. Some one suggested that her nose be entirely covered, but the "entranced medium," under what purported to be the influence of a deceased squaw, and referring to herself, said, "White Lily wants a good chance to breathe," implying that it was necessary to breathe through the nose, or keep the mouth open, which latter no fair minded investigator had a right to require. Therefore by an arbitrary ruling the eyes were wholly or in part excluded, and the nose prevailed. Yet, after all, there was some suspicion that the eyes and nose were in "cahoots." The medium then proceeded to paint some pictures, which were readily purchased at a good price by enthusiastic Spiritualists present. They were far inferior to her present productions though the question might have reasonably been raised as to the right of even spirits to thus violate artistic good taste, yet the execution, though bad, was exceedingly wonderful, admitting that the artist could not see; and that she could not was readily granted by the majority present.

On his arrival home, after the seance above described, the writer procured some strips of linen cloth, and instructed his wife to blindfold him, just as Mrs. Blair had been. In tying the handkerchief around his head she gave a slight and unintentional pull to the left, which brought the folded linen strip which covered the right eye a little away from the nose, and, raising the eyelid, he found that through the interstice between the cloth and his nose, he could look down under the handkerchief and slantingly across his nasal appendage, upon the table at which he was sitting. Then he remembered that, after Mrs. Blair had been blindfolded, her business manager had prohibited any one from touching her or coming nearer than three feet, as to do so, he said, would disturb the spiritual atmosphere with which she was surrounded, and supposed to extend that distance, and within which the spirits operated in controlling the medium; and the writer concluded that such a prohibition was made for the purpose, really, of preventing any sceptic, who might be standing near, from pulling down the handkerchiefs, and thus embarrassing the medium, after she had piped her eye for a successful performance. Then, too, he remembered that Mrs. Blair, after being blindfolded, had rested her head on her hand while she seemed to be awaiting developments, and which he construed into assisting developments by imperceptibly slipping the handkerchief to the right, so as to bring the folded linen cloth a little further away from her nose. The next day, on meeting with a firm but honest believer in Spiritualism, who had also attended Mrs. Blair's seance of the previous evening, the writer told him of his successful experiment at home, and suggested that, if a large sheet of card-board were to be interposed between the medium's eyes and the table, she would not paint a picture; or, if she did, it would constitute better evidence of the truth of her claims than she had thus far afforded. The Spiritualist agreed to propose the test at the next seance (Mrs. Blair was then giving a series of public entertainments), which he did, but the medium declined to comply, for the absurd reason, as stated by her, that the spirit saw to paint from her forehead, and the card-board would intercept his vision. The Spiritualist, with waning faith, was on hand at the next seance, with a sort of mask, which he had provided for that particular occasion. He proposed to so adjust it over the medium's countenance that it would leave the forehead exposed, not reaching higher than the frontal sinus, at the same time that a big bulge in it would admit of "White Lily" having "a good chance to breathe" through nose or mouth, the bottom of the mask to come below the neck and be secured to the waist. Taking from his pocket a dollar bill, he said he would give it to the medium if, with the mask on, she would paint a picture as good as any one of those she had produced on the previous evening. A few fanatics present began to hiss him, and one of them declared that any person who was not satisfied with the evidence that Mrs. Blair had already afforded was not worth convincing. This "disturbance of the elements" made "unfavorable conditions" for spiritual operations at that time,—so the medium said, and she was probably glad to have such an excuse for not submitting to the test.

The disgusted challenger gave his address, saying that his offer would be good for any length of time, and then remarking that he had been an avowed Spiritualist for many years, and though he might have been humbugged in the past, he did not intend to be in the future if rigid investigation could prevent it, he retired from the hall. Mrs. Blair has never accepted that challenge.

While operating in New York at the time referred to, her manager stated publicly that she had painted pictures while her eye-lids were held down by an investigator's fingers. Subsequently the city editor of the World was permitted to put his fingers on her eyelids while she essayed to paint; but he so thoroughly obscured her vision that she could not peek out of one corner of her eyes, as she perhaps had been accustomed to do when the lids had been merely touched by some gentle sceptic; therefore failing to produce a picture, she abruptly rose in her exasperation, and boldly accused the man of the World of trying to punch her eyes out. He stammeringly denied the impeachment and precipitately retreated.

The atmosphere of New York was not altogether favorable to Mrs. Blair's phase of mediumship, and so she soon returned to the provinces. Since then, however, she has made several visits to Chicago, meeting with good success each time, and of late she has made this city her headquarters, the favorable reports made of her doings by her credulous dupes, bringing her much custom.

Mrs. Blair encountered some insurmountable difficulties in trying to humbug the citizens of Roscoe, Ill., about two years ago. After making a somewhat favorable impression on a few people there, one of the citizens sent for Dr. J. Phillips, a dentist of Belvidere, with whom he was acquainted, and who had incidentally acquired some little reputation as a medium detective. On the Doctor's arrival he was favored with an opportunity to witness the painting performance of the "spirit artist." He immediately suspected that she was able to see, notwithstanding the apparent thoroughness of the blindfolding; and then, by actual experiment, he proceeded to demonstrate that a person thus blindfolded could see. An enthusiastic and sanguine Spiritualist offered to wager the Doctor $50 that Mrs. Blair could paint with a newspaper fastened over her face, and the offer was promptly accepted. But some difficulty arose as to the manner of arranging the newspaper. The medium wanted but a single thickness of paper, and to have it pressed close to her eyes. The paper she provided had several pinholes or perforations in it. The Doctor wanted to cover her face with a newspaper several times folded, bulging away from her eyes, with no perforations of it before or after its adjustment. At length the wager was declared "off," and Mrs. Blair took herself off to "fresh fields and pastures new." Dr. Philips, who can be addressed on the subject, is still willing to invest $50 or more, if need be, in an indubitable demonstration that Mrs. Blair, or any one else, can paint when so thoroughly blindfolded as not to admit of the possibility of seeing.

Mrs. Blair now paints in private only. For three dollars or more she produces for whomsoever employs her, what she calls a "family picture," that is a wreath, or something of the sort, containing a miscellaneous assortment of pretty posies, the white ones representing the deceased female members of the employer's family, and unopened buds the lost little ones. If the possessor of this "family picture" does not immediately call to mind as many dear departed female relatives, as there are white flowers to represent them, he has only to wait awhile and a mother-in-law, great-aunt, or forty-second cousin will occur to him. If there are fewer white flowers than remembered departed female relatives, he is forced to conclude that conditions favored the representation only of the nearer and dearer ones. As to the buds, by a concatenation of contingent circumstances, they can often be construed into a "most wonderful test."

Mrs. Blair is welcome to this advertisement. "Further developments," relating to other Chicago mediums, are reserved for another article.—Chicago Tribune.

St. Bernard.

The most significant historical works of Neander is his sketch of St. Bernard, the ideal monk, as Luther calls him, whose very physiognomy is a portrait of the Middle Ages; who prefers the democratic theocracy to the feudal monarchy; who restrains in Abelard the first impatience of human reason to emancipate itself prematurely; who reorganizes the monastic orders to give them a more spiritual character; who awakes the lethargic peoples, petrified with penance, to launch them in the Crusades, and by this means to reveal, as if by miracle, the existence of liberty. Rich, powerful, possessed of wide domains, born in the fertile land of Brittany, he despised dignities, property, wealth, for the rude gown of the monk, for the wandering life of the apostle, for intellectual and religious converse with the poor and oppressed, for the pleasure of combating the pride of the strong and the powerful. Pale as death, emaciated as a skeleton, without any life but that which shone in his sparkling eyes; ecstatic to such a point that he sometimes lost the power of taking food, as if he only fed upon ideas and drank inspirations; so absent-minded that he would for entire days know nothing of the places he passed through or the persons he talked with. The people hung upon his speech, and kings upon his writings; the pope he protected was adored, the warrior he cursed was defeated; the town which he patronized was saluted by the world; the war he condemned was suspended; the peace he disapproved was disturbed; the man who listened to him followed him to the desert, to the valley of bitterness, to bury himself alive in the cloister, or to rush recklessly into battle. If he wished it, the armies of France went out of Champagne; King Louis repented his policy; the Emperor Conrad abandoned the affairs of his empire to go to the defense of the church; two hundred thousand men—shepherds, who left their flocks and came down from the mountains, peasants and serfs, who arose as if resurrected from their fields, great and rich men, who abandoned their palaces—all as if impelled by a certain madness of heroism and of martyrdom, leaving behind them wives and children and homes, went they knew not where nor why, not obeying the will of God, but the words of St. Bernard.—Emilio Castelar, in Harper's Magazine for January.

How It Is.

"There's where a man has the advantage. He can undress in a cold room and have the best warm before a woman has got her hair-pins out and her shoes untied."

That's how it looks in print, and this is how it is in reality: "I'm going to bed, my dear. It's half past ten." No reply. "Now, John, you know you're always late in the morning. Do get to bed!" "Yes, in a minute," he replies, as he turns the paper wrong side out and begins a lengthy article headed "The Louisiana Muddle." Fifteen minutes later she calls from the bedroom: "John, come to bed, and not keep the gas burning here all night," and murmuring something about "the bill being big enough now," she creeps between the cold sheets, while John sits placidly on, his feet upon the piano stool and a cigar in his mouth. By-and-by he rises, yawns, stretches himself, throws the paper on the floor, and seizing the shaker proceeds to that vigorous exercise, shaking the coal stove. Just at this stage a not altogether pleasant voice inquires: "For pity's sake! ain't you ready for bed yet?" "Yes, yes, I'm coming! Why don't you go to sleep and let a fellow alone?"

Then he discovers that there is coal needed. When that is supplied and rattled into the stove he sits down to warm his feet. Next, he slowly begins to undress, and as he stands scratching himself and absently gazing on the last garment, dangling over the back of a chair, he remembers that the clock is not wound yet. When that is attended to he wants a drink of water, and away he promenades to the kitchen. Of course, when he returns his skin resembles that of a picked chicken, and once more he seats himself before the fire for a last "warm up." As the clock strikes twelve he turns out the gas, and with a flop of the bedclothes and a few spasmodic shivers he subsides—no, not yet; he forgot to see if the front door was locked, and another flop of the bed covers brings forth the remark: "Good gracious!" if that man ain't enough to try the patience of Job!" Setting her teeth hard she awaits the final flop, with its accompanying blast of cold air, and then quietly inquires "if he is settled for the night," to which he replies by muttering: "If you ain't the provokingest woman!"—Detroit Free Press.

A VERMONT school-master says he never felt unequal to any demand in the line of his profession, excepting on one occasion, when a farmer brought his bouncing 15-year old daughter to the school, and walking up to the master's desk said: "That's my youngest gal, and if ever you catch her slidin' down hill with the boys I just want you to trounce her."

IT you cannot be a great river, bearing great vessels of blessings to the world, you can be a little spring by the wayside of life, singing merrily all day and all night, and giving a cup of cold water to every weary, thirsty one who passes by.

A MAN may be great by chance, but never wise and good without taking pains for it.

THE FIRESIDE.

Infant Precocity—Its Dangers.

We just now assume to be fond of science, and talk wisely concerning nature's laws, especially such as are at a convenient distance and don't infringe upon ourselves; but we fight shy of many a physiological truth of nature, among which is that embodied in the old aphorism, "Soon ripe, soon rotten." Far be it from me to growl at the little ones, the bright little ones. I have no cynical dislike for them—I even sympathize in a parent's pride; but in the interest of these infants, I say to parental pride, and fain would say it forcibly, "Forbear! you are ruining, destroying the object on which you build such high hopes." Humanity is not a legitimate subject for hot-house forcing; it arrives at its best strength and most desirable development only in its natural element, and by natural stages of a rather slow growth.

It much more frequently happens that a somewhat dull child, or one that has shown merely a kind of quiet common sense, comes by-and-by to the front on the great stage of human affairs, than otherwise. The vivacious, sparkling, meteoric style of infancy seems usually to burn itself out; and its ashes fill either an early grave, the drooping form of an invalid, or that of some fitfully-flashing, but on the whole incompetent sample of mediocrity. There are exceptions to all rules, but this is the rule with regard to the growth of intellect, not to say genius, for both these are more likely to be developed by the exigencies and hard knocks of actual life, as nature prepares the way, than by the pampering and forcing of early stimulation. Just observe a little one whose parents glory in its precocity, how the lights and shades of color and expression chase each other over mobile features; how the eyes glow and the nervous system of the excitable miniature candidate for public applause is upon the strain when or wherever it feels itself to be on exhibition. Almost superhuman must such a child be, if its self-conciousness do not soon make it an object of censure, if not of dislike, to everybody except its doting friends, some who would win favor with these, or perchance a passing stranger attracted for a moment. But this is not the worst of it; that eagerness for notice, for admiration, is a fever hurrying on the life-currents with an unwholesome, an exhausting impulse. In past times people used to push and ply their promising infants with book-lore; this is not now the fashion; it is not school-books and school-masters that now-a-days sap the life of little Dombeys; it is excitement, not work, that, especially among us, does the mischief.—Science of Health.

HOT ALUM-WATER is a recent suggestion as an insecticide. It will destroy red and black ants, cockroaches, spiders, chintz-bugs and all crawling pests which infest our homes. Take two pounds of alum and dissolve it in three or four quarts of boiling water; let it stand on the fire till the alum disappears; then apply it with a brush, while nearly boiling hot, to every joint and crevice in your closets, bedsteads, pantry shelves, and the like. Brush the crevices in the floor of the skirting or mop-boards, if you suspect that they harbor vermin. If, in whitewashing a ceiling, plenty of alum is added to the lime, it will also serve to keep insects at a distance. Cockroaches will flee the paint that has been washed in cool alum-water. Sugar barrels and boxes can be freed from ants by drawing a chalk line just around the edge of them. The mark must be unbroken, or they will creep over it; but a continuous chalk mark half an inch in width will set their depredations at naught. Powdered alum or borax will keep the chintz-bugs at a respectful distance; and travelers should always carry a package in their hand-bags to scatter over and under their pillows in places where they have reason to suspect the presence of such bed-fellows. —The Journal of Chemistry.

INFALLIBLE AND QUICK CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.—The Hamilton Spectator (South Australia) publishes details of the "Greathead" cure for diphtheria. The disease is declared by Mr. Greathead to be of hydrated growth, and that the germs of it flowing about in certain impure atmosphere were inhaled by human beings.

For a grown person four drops of sulphuric acid diluted in three-quarters of a tumbler of water; with a smaller dose for children. The effect of this treatment was instantaneous, the acid at once destroying the parasites and the patient coughing up the obstruction. The papers have teemed with accounts of sufferers who had recovered in a few minutes by adopting the "Greathead" treatment. Children, almost previously in a dying state, were declared to be playing about within ten minutes, and at a computation some forty or fifty of these sudden recoveries have been placed on record with full particulars.

ROYAL FRUIT CAKE.—Five cups of flour, five eggs, one and one-half cups of sugar, one cup of molasses, one and one-half cups of butter, one teaspoonful saleratus, one-half a cup of milk, two pounds of chopped raisins, three pounds of currants, one and one-half pounds of citron, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, one nutmeg, two teaspoonfuls of cloves. This is a splendid recipe; I have some cake now that I made a year ago and it is nicer now than when first baked.

FELONS AND RUSTY NAILS.—Elder Evans, the Shaker, says: "For the past ten years we have treated felons with hot water, and with unerring success. No blistering, no anything, but immersing the finger, hand, or even the whole arm, if necessary, in water as hot as can be borne, until the pain is gone and the core is loosened and drawn from the bone. When rusty nails have produced wounds, the same course has been pursued. If on the hand or foot keep it in hot water."

NOW they are adulterating honey. This is a bee-ly fraud.—Terre Haute Mail.

The Cost of Living.

Valuable statistics in regard to the comparative cost of living in America and Europe are given in the last Massachusetts Labor Report:

One dollar will buy twenty pounds of flour in Boston, one or two pounds more in several European seaports, but the same or considerably less in a majority of the places compared. In Boston one dollar will buy 5.56 pounds of fresh beef, roasting piece. In no place in England will it buy so much by a pound or more, and in Europe still less. Copenhagen being the only place given where it will buy more. Butter in Europe averages a pound more to the dollar than here, cheese less by more than that, except in a few spots.

As for potatoes, they are cheaper here than in England, and dearer than in Ireland or Germany. Seven or eight pounds of pork for a dollar are sold here, and not much over half as much can be obtained for that sum in England or Europe, and nowhere as much. In rice, milk and eggs, they have the advantage of us. Tea costs less here than in England, but more than on the Continent. With coffee it is about the same, though the difference is little. In sugar the British are a little better off, the Continentals are a good deal worse. Coal is cheaper here than in Germany, and dearer than in England. Merrimac or common prints are cheaper here than anywhere in England or Europe. Boots are about the same here as there, generally speaking. There are but two or three places in England or the Continent where brown sheetings are cheaper than here, while in brown shirtings the foreigners are better off. Rent for four-roomed tenements is from two to four times cheaper in Great Britain and on the Continent than in Boston; in Austria fifteen times cheaper. Board also is from once and a half to twice as cheap in Europe and Great Britain as in Boston.

Cleaning and Oiling Harness.

Many a harness is spoiled for the want of a little care at the proper time. The Chicago Journal gives the following directions for cleaning and oiling harness:

Our advice to those intending to clean harness, is first to unbuckle all the straps, and remove all the metallic portions possible without ripping the stitching; then, if a thick coating has formed on any part where the harness came in contact with the horse, remove it by scraping it with a wooden scraper; then place the straps in water, and after they have been well soaked, lay them, on a board, and with soap and brush clean off all superfluous matter on the surface. They should then be allowed to surface dry, and if they were hard before cleaning, neatsfoot oil should be applied: this will penetrate the leather and open the pores. As soon as the oil has entered the leather, apply a coat of melted tallow, thoroughly smearing all parts of the straps; then lay all the straps out on a board and allow them to dry; as the water dries out the oil and grease will enter and fill the pores of the leather, the one softening it, the other forming a barrier against moisture from atmospheric or other sources. After the moisture has dried out, all the superfluous grease on the surface may be removed with a cloth, and some varnish black be applied if desired. Leather will absorb moisture rapidly, unless the pores are well filled, and there is no grease so well suited for this purpose as tallow. It is the province of the oil to soften the fibre, but in so doing it opens the pores, and renders the leather extremely sensitive to moisture, unless they are well saturated with grease.

William IV.

He sleeps in the same room with the Queen, but in a separate bed. At a quarter before eight every morning his valet de chambre knocks at the door, and at ten minutes before eight exactly he gets out of bed, puts on a flannel dressing-gown and trousers, and walks into his dressing-room. Let who will be there, he never takes the slightest notice of them till he emerges from his sanctuary, when, like the malade imaginaire, he accosts whoever may be present with a cheerful aspect. He is long at his ablutions, and takes up an hour and a half in dressing. At half past nine he breakfasts with the Queen, the ladies, and any of his family; he eats a couple of fingers and drinks a dish of coffee. After breakfast he reads the Times and Morning Post, commenting aloud on what he read in very plain terms, and sometimes they heard "That's a d——d lie," or some such remark, without knowing to what it applies. After breakfast he devotes himself with Sir Herbert Taylor to business till two, when he lunches (two cutlets and two glasses of sherry); then he goes out for a drive till dinner time; at dinner he drinks a bottle of sherry—no other wine—and eats moderately; he goes to bed soon after eleven. He is in dreadfully low spirits and cannot rally at all; the only interval of pleasure which he has lately had was during the Devonshire election, when he was delighted at John Russell's defeat. He abhors all his ministers, even those whom he used rather to like formerly, but hates Lord John the most of all. When Adolphus told him that a dinner ought to be given to the Ascot races, he said, "You know I cannot give a dinner; I cannot give any dinners without inviting the ministers, and I would rather see the devil than any one of them at my house." I asked him how he was with them in his inevitable official relations. He said that he had as little to do with them as he could, and bowed them out when he gave any of them audiences as fast as possible.—Greville Memoir.

A Touching Story.

A very strange story was told to me the other day (says a London correspondent of the North British Advertiser and Ladies' Own Journal). In a town not far from London there lived a young lady who was handsome, tolerably wealthy, and more than usually well educated. Her father was an invalid; her mother was an insipid, cold, and heartless woman. Two years ago, a physician of London was called to attend the father; in this way the young lady saw him. He paid no attention to her; his mind was engrossed with his professional duties. A few weeks ago, this doctor, after paying a visit to his patient, was somewhat surprised by being asked by the young lady to grant her the favor of a private interview. She took him into the drawing-room, and led him to the further end of the apartment. "Doctor," said she," I suppose that gentlemen of your profession are accustomed to receive strange confidences; I have a confession to make to you." He supposed that the impending confession had something to do with the state of her own health, or with that of her father, and he begged her to proceed. "You will, however, scarcely be prepared for what I am about to say," she continued, "but I wish you to hear it. It is now just two years since I first saw you. You have scarcely ever exchanged a word with me, but I have learned much about you. I am not mistaken in believing that you are unmarried?" "No," said he, "I am not married." "And your affections are not engaged?" "You scarcely have the right to ask that," said he. "Well, then," she replied, "I will not ask it; but I must make to you my confession. I love you with all my heart. I wish you to marry me. I loved you from the first moment I saw you. I said to myself: 'I will wait for two years; if he then speaks to me, I will know what to say.' You have not spoken, and now I speak. I say I love you with all my heart; you are necessary for me. Will you marry me?" The doctor, who, although not a very young man, was twice the age of the young lady, recovering a little from his surprise, tried to turn the matter off as a joke; but the young lady was very serious. "No," said she; "I am in very sober earnest. I know all you may say or think as to the indelicacy of my proposal; but I cannot help it. I ask you once more, can you love me, and will you marry me?" "In sober earnestness, then," he replied, "I cannot marry you." "Then I shall die," said she, very calmly, and she left the room. The doctor had heard people say before this that they should die, and he left the house without attaching much importance to the prophecy, although wondering greatly at the other portion of that interview.

A few days after this the young lady was found dead in her bed. Two letters lay upon her dressing-table. One was addressed to her family solicitor. It recalled to his mind a promise he had made her. She had gone to see him, and had asked him to make out a paper transferring the whole of her property to a person whose name she would then give him. He was to prepare the necessary paper, and send it to her to fill up the blanks and sign. She had done this, and she now inclosed the paper filled up and signed. Every penny of her property was given to the doctor. "I told you I should die," said she, "and when you receive this, I shall be dead. For ten days I have taken no food nor drink, but that does not kill me, and now I have taken poison. I have no reproach to cast to you, but could not live without your love. When I am dead, look at my heart. You will see your name there. I have two requests to make of you. Go to my solicitor and take what he has for you, and then go off on a holiday to Italy for a few months. The other request is that you never ask where I am buried, and never come to my grave." There was a post-mortem examination made of the young lady's body. On her breast, over her heart, deeply imprinted in the flesh, were the initials of the doctor's name. The characters seemed to have been made there two or three years before. They were probably imprinted by her own hand on the day when she first saw him.

Ice in Paris.

A correspondent of the New York Times describes the scenes in Paris on New Year's night, which was a memorable one for the Parisians. He says: "It had been raining all day, and had carried off nearly all the snow that had fallen during the week, and the last of it was just beginning to run into the sewers, when the mercury fell, and in two or three hours the streets were covered with ice. The transformation was first noticed as the people were leaving the theatres and returning home. The first of those who left the theatres went down as soon as they touched the steps, and the others that followed, not taking warning, met with the same mishap. The horses in the streets suffered from the same cause; hundreds of the poor animals had their legs broken, but many were saved by the drivers wrapping portions of their blankets around their feet. One blacksmith stationed himself at the corner of a street and drove nails in the horses' shoes, thereby saving a great many. A considerate shop-keeper stood by one of the theatre doors and sold woolen stockings, and the price he asked was readily given by the unfortunate pedestrians. On looking at the scene next morning he says that the streets were strewn with the wrecks of cabs, wagons and vehicles of all sorts. Some fifteen hundred accidents are reported, in which six persons were killed. One hospital alone had 217 cases of broken and fractured limbs, and it was not until late on the day of the 2d that travel was resumed.

WHAT doth it profit a pastor if he gets seven dressing-gowns and fourteen pair of slippers and has not the wherewith to go to market?

Riding in the Himalayas.

The roads in the Himalaya Mountains in India are for the most part bridle-paths, only a few feet in width, cut in the sides of the mountains, and frequently overhanging tremendous precipices. On the writer's first visit to this region, a friend sent him a pony to ride. He mounted and rode several miles, but then hastily dismounted. The path was cut out of solid rock, and consisted of a narrow flight of broad steps, overhanging a sheer precipice of (say) two thousand feet. He concluded his own feet would be safer than those of the horse, and hence preferred walking until the danger was past. After a short residence among the mountains, this nervousness wore away, and we were accustomed to gallop along the narrow ledges and round sharp curves without the slightest hesitation. That the dangers are not imaginary, is seen from the following account in a recent number of Blackwood's Magazine.

No animal is so easily startled as a horse, or so readily becomes restive. It will shy at an oyster-shell, though doing so may dash itself to pieces over a precipice. One can easily guess what danger its rider incurs on a narrow, parapetless road above a precipice; where there are monkeys and falling rocks to startle it, and where there are obstinate hillmen, who will salaam the rider, say what he may, and who take the inner side of the road, in order to prop their burdens against the rock, and to have a good look at him as he passes.

One of the saddest of the accidents which have thus happened, was that which befell a very young lady, a daughter of Rev. Mr. Robsch, the missionary at Kotgarh. She was riding across the tremendous Rogi cliffs, and though a wooden railing has since been put up at the place, there was nothing between her and the precipice, when her pony shied, and carried her over to instant death.

Not very long after I went up this lethal road, a Calcutta judge of one of the subordinate courts went over it and was killed in the presence of some ladies with whom he was riding, owing simply to his horse becoming restive.

An eye-witness of another of these frightful accidents told me that when the horse's hind feet got off the road, it struggled for about half a minute in that position, and the rider had plenty of time to dismount safely, and might easily have done so, but a species of paralysis seemed to come over him; his face became deadly white, and he sat on his horse without making the least effort to save himself, until they both went over backwards. The sufferer is usually a little too late in attempting to dismount.

Theoretically, it may seem easy enough to disengage one's self from a horse when it is struggling on the brink of a precipice; but let my reader try the experiment, and he will see the mistake.

Bran and Corn Meal for Cows.

The Practical Farmer says: It is well settled in the opinion of all our best dairymen that bran greatly promotes the milk secretions in cows, and it is fed almost universally. About equally mixed with corn meal is the usual proportion. This mixture seems to promote both quantity and quality of milk. From several sources we hear that buckwheat bran is a great producer of milk, and it is being used considerably among our Chester county dairymen, in about the same proportion as the other. Thomas Gawthrop, near West Grove, Chester county, also by repeated trials with his own cows, has fully satisfied himself that they do as well with corn and cob meal and bran as with pure corn meal and bran. The amount of nutriment in corn cobs is so very small that this result will have to be explained on the supposition of the ground cob acting to promote digestion by distending the stomach. The presence of bulky material being necessary to fill up the stomach of ruminating animals, before digestion can be accomplished, is frequently lost sight of. Hungarian grass is also found for milch cows to be rather superior to the ordinary run of hay. The last year or two Hungarian grass has loomed up wonderfully in the estimation of our dairy farmers; and a very large scope of land will be sowed with it the coming season. It matures for cutting in about sixty days, and produces two to four tons per acre—the latter of course on good soils.

THE DUTCH LANGUAGE.—Among us the word "Dutch" is used for the people and language of Germany as well as those of Holland, but in England it is confined to the latter. A recent English writer praises the Dutch language, and holds it up as a model worthy of our imitation. It is nearest akin to the English, but differs entirely from it in one respect. It does not borrow words from other languages, as does ours, but when it requires a new term, produces it from its own resources. Thus for telescope, the Dutch say far-gazer, for hemi-sphere they use half-round; for hydrogen, water-stuff; arithmetic is reckon-craft, and astronomy, star-craft; a university is only a high-school, and university-professor is a high teacher (though not necessarily a tall man). Other terms are even more curious. A physician is a curelord (though he often fails to cure), and a surgeon a heal-master (though he does not always heal). Education is up-feeding, and an advantage is a foreshare, which among us is also the coulter of a plough. For our part, we prefer the variety which is produced in our language by the use of words derived from the Greek, Latin and other tongues.

A NEW HAMPSHIRE woman when dying made her husband swear on the Bible that he would never marry a woman with a sharp nose. And yet a sharp nose is not half so bad as a sharp tongue.

SHARP little Katy Doyle, of Pittsburg, got out of patience with her bashful lover's backwardness, and so brought matters to a favorable climax by saying to him: "I really believe that you are afraid to ask me to marry you, for you know I would say yes."

THEIR merit always comes to the surface.

David Maydole and his Hammers.

Mr. James Parton, in one of his lectures, tells "how some men have become rich." In connection he relates the story of the great American hammersmith. It proves the frequently urged lesson, that the sure way to prosperity is the honest way—to do everything well—better than anybody else, if you can. Last winter, in Norwich, a beautiful town near the center of New York, I went over David Maydole's manufactory, where one hundred men were employed in making hammers, enough men, you would suppose, to supply the world with hammers. He is one of the most perfect examples of a King of Business I have ever met with in my life. If every King of Business were such as he, we should have the millenium the year after next. A plain little man he is, past sixty now, but in the full enjoyment of life and in the full enjoyment of his work. Upon being introduced to him in his office, not knowing what to say, and not being aware that there was anything to be said or thought about hammers—having, in fact, always taken hammers for granted—I said, "And here you make hammers for mankind, Mr. Maydole!"

"Yes," said he, "I've made hammers here for twenty-eight years."

"Well, then," said I, still at a loss for a talk-opener, "you ought to be able to make a pretty good hammer by this time."

"No, sir," said he, "I never made a pretty good hammer; I make the best hammer made in the United States."

And so he does; every hammer made most carefully by hand, and tempered over a slow fire as delicately as Delmonico's cook broils a steak for his pet gourmand. Then the hickory handle is put to it that has been seasoning for two years; and it is a hammer that dare show itself anywhere in the world.

There is thought, and conscience, and good feeling, and high principle, and business sense in it. It speaks its maker's praise wherever it goes, and as long as it lasts, and it will last very long indeed.

He did the honor to give me one, which has ever since hung conspicuously in my room, admonishing me to work, not fast, nor too much with a showy polish, nor any vain pretence, but as well as I can every time, never letting one thing go till I have done all that was possible to make it what it should be.

Upon our return to the office after going over the works, he told his story. It is a representative story. Twenty-nine years ago, when he was a road-side blacksmith, six carpenters came to the village from the next county to work upon a new church, one of whom, having left his hammer behind, came to the blacksmith's to get one made, there being none in the village store.

"Make me a good one," said the carpenter, "as good a one as you know how."

"But," said the young blacksmith, who had already considered hammers, and had arrived at some notion of what a hammer ought to be, and had a proper contempt for cheapness in all its forms, "perhaps you don't want to pay for as good a one as I can make."

"Yes, I do; I want a good hammer."

And so David Maydole made a good hammer, the best one, probably, that had ever been made since Tubal Cain, and one that perfectly satisfied the carpenter. The next day the man's five companions came, each of them wanting just such a hammer, and, when they were done, the employer came and ordered two more.

Next, the storekeeper of the village ordered two dozen, which were bought by a New York tool merchant, who left a standing order for as many such hammers as David Maydole could make. And from that time to this he has gone on making hammers, until now he has one hundred and fifty men at work. He has never tried to compete with others in price. He has never reduced a price because other men had done so. His only care has been to make as many such as people wanted, and no more, and to sell them at a fair price.

Tail of the Rattlesnake.

A queer controversy has been going on as to the real design in nature in placing rattles upon the tail of the reptile in question. It has been urged as an objection to the theory of natural selection that the tail appendage of the rattlesnake must be injurious to the animal by attracting to it the notice of its enemies. Prof. Shaler has, however, observed that the noise of the rattle is scarcely distinguishable from the sound made by an American species of cicada, and he conjectures that the object of the rattle is to attract within reach of the snake the birds which naturally feed upon the cicada. This he considers to be the explanation of the mode in which birds are seen to flutter round a rattlesnake without calling into play the theory of fascination.

That the rattle of the snake resembles in sound the note of the cicada, and thus serves to entice birds, is strongly controverted by Mr. F. Putnam, whose remarks on the subject before the Essex Institute are quoted in the American Naturalist. He says the adult male cicada, which makes the peculiar drumming referred to, is not a ground insect, and not very abundant, even in the trees, in such localities as are most frequented by the rattlesnake. Moreover, the snake's rattleing is ordinarily but a slight noise, and the rattle is not sounded to any extent unless the snake is disturbed. According to his observations, it is not at all the nature of the rattlesnake to make any sound to attract birds, but rather to approach slowly and cautiously, or lie in wait silently. He thinks the rattle a detriment to the snake, except as it serves to call the sexes together.

GEORGE BANCROFT, the historian, who is seventy-four years old, but still very active, has bought the house in Washington recently owned by Ex-Senator Harlan, where he is diligently engaged in closing his History of the United States down to the adoption of the Federal Constitution. He rises at six, lights his fire, and works until summoned to breakfast at eight. After breakfast he resumes his labor until one, when he stops for the day, and usually takes a ride on horseback, followed by a "constitutional" walk of two or three miles. The evening he devotes to social enjoyment.

Proceedings of Congress.

Monday.

A large number of bills, joint resolutions, etc., of no particular interest, were introduced and referred.

Kelly introduced a bill to increase the public revenue. In it he proposes to repeal the bill for the resumption of specie payments, approved last January, and substitute his 3.65 inconvertible scheme. He also proposes to repeal the Act of January, 1874, prohibiting the increase of greenback circulation.

After the call for bills and joint resolutions, the bill giving bounties to the heirs of soldiers who served less than one year in the army came up as an unfinished business from last Monday and was passed.

A bill was introduced by Houghton, of California, fixing the time of holding Circuit Courts in California, Oregon and Nevada. Also, a bill to encourage and promote telegraphic communication between America and Asia.

Speer moved to suspend the rules, and adopt a resolution declaring the judgment of the House against the election of S. Tyndeat for a third term, as opposed to the tradition of the country, and hazardous to the liberties of the people.

The motion was lost—yeas, 57; nays, 102. All the yeas, except Smith, of North Carolina, were Democrats; all the nays Republicans.

Dawes moved to suspend the rules to make in order an amendment to the modification, suspension or repeal of section 25 of the revised statutes, regulating the time for holding elections for Representatives to Congress, the object being to make the time uniform. Agreed to, 161 to 64.

Dawes also offered a resolution reciting the facts with regard to Wm. S. King, the fugacious Pacific Mail witness, and directing the Speaker to issue a warrant commanding the Sergeant-at-Arms to take him into custody wherever found within the United States, and bring him before the bar of the House, to answer for contempt of its authority.

Sayler, from the Committee on Patents, made an adverse report on the application for an extension of the Wilson sewing machine patents. The report shows that the patents have been in existence twenty-one years; that the combination of sewing machine companies which own the patent have received over $2,000,000 from them and that the public has therefore paid heavily for the invention. The report was tabled. Adjourned.

Tuesday.

After the passage of some unimportant bills and resolutions, and the prescription of a memorial praying for the restoration of the tax on sugar, the repeal of which had resulted in the loss of $14,000,000 in gold to the Government, without any reduction in price to the consumer, the Hennepin Canal bill, which was unfinished business from Saturday, was taken up. Hurlburt, who has charge of the bill, yielded the floor to allow Poland to present a privileged report from the Committee on Revision of the Laws, which was considered at length.

A bill was introduced and referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, which has special reference to the coolie trade. It provides that when Immigrants have entered into a contract or an agreement for a term of service within the United States, either for labor or lewd and improper purposes, such immigration shall be deemed voluntary, and a United States Consul shall not deliver the required permit or certificate. It makes it a penal offense for Americans to be engaged in such trade; forbids the importation of women for purposes of prostitution; invalidates all contracts in relation thereto, and makes the importation or holding of women for such purposes a felony, punishable by fine and imprisonment. It also makes immigration of the following named classes unlawful: Persons who are undergoing sentence for felonies or crimes other than political, or whose sentence has been remitted on account of their immigration, and women imported for purposes of prostitution.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Post Office Appropriation bill. The total amount appropriated by the bill is $37,324,361, of which amount $29,148,150 it is estimated will be received from the revenues of the Department.

Tyner, who had charge of the bill, explained that the expenses of the Department was five per cent. less than last year, while the annual increase of business is from 8 to 10 per cent.

Holman moved to add to the item for inland mail transportation, a proviso that no part of the money should be used to increase the compensation of railroad companies beyond the rate now received by them. Rejected—45 to 105.

A proviso was added to the item of $100,000 for advertising mail lettings, requiring the Postmaster-General to cause advertisements for mail lettings to be posted up conspicuously in each Post Office for sixty days.

Smith, of Ohio, moved an amendment repealing the law of 1872 for additional mail steamship service to Japan and China, and annulling the contract made under it. Agreed to, without discussion.

Coburn moved an amendment for the free carriage of public documents and seeds sent by members of Congress.

Finally the House, in Committee of the Whole, by a vote of 97 to 75, agreed to the amendment providing for the free transmission of documents and seeds through the mails. Democrats and Republicans voted for the amendment.

The Indian Appropriation bill was then taken up in Committee of the Whole. All parts of the bill, except the Choctaw and Chickasaw amendments were considered and agreed to.

The amendment to pay the Chickasaws $280,000, arrears of interest on trust bonds held by the Government, was rejected without a division. The bill then passed—102 to 62.

The new Tariff bill then came up. Dawes said the Customs receipts had fallen off at the rate of $800,000 per day. He made a statement of receipts and expenditures since 1870, showing badly for the year's receipts.

The bill giving all discharged soldiers $8 25 per month bounty, was passed. It deducts all previous bounties.

Senate.

Scott, from the Committee on Railroads, reported adversely to the bill extending aid to the Washington, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad Company, and they were indefinitely postponed.

The Chair laid before the Senate a message from the President with regard to affairs in Arkansas, in which he says: "All the testimony will show that in 1872 Joseph Brooks was lawfully elected Governor of the State, was unlawfully deprived of his office; that in 1874 the Constitution of the State was overthrown by lawless revolutionary measures."

In conclusion, the President submits that the precedent is so dangerous that it should not be allowed to pass unnoticed, and asks Congress to take action with regard to the matter.

Morton from the Committee on Elections submitted a report in the case of P. B. S. Pinchback, and a resolution declaring him entitled to a seat as Senato from Louisiana, from the 4th day of March, 1873.

Hamilton of Maryland presented a minority report by the Committee on Elections, signed by himself and Saulsbury, against the admission of Pinchback. Ordered printed and to lie on the table.

The Chair called for business on the calendar, and the Committee on Public Buildings being entitled to the floor, the bill to grant a site for the Peabody School at San Augustine, Florida, came up, the pending question being the amendment submitted at the last session providing that if at any time a distinction shall be made among pupils on account of color, the site shall revert to the United States. The amendment was rejected, yeas 28, nays 34. (Cameron, Ferry (of Conn.), Gilbert, Morrill (of Vt.), Schurz, and Sprague being among those voting in the negative.

The bill passed.

The bill to perfect the United States Government guarantee of the District of Columbia 3.65 bonds, and to authorize them to be registered at the United States Treasury, passed.

McCreery introduced a bill directing the Secretary of War to investigate, through competent medical officers of the army, the report that Asiatic cholera is spreading westward, and is now raging on the borders of Mexico. The bill appropriates $5,000 for the expenses of the investigation.

A bill was introduced authorizing the President to appoint a Commissioner to attend the International Congress, to be held in Rome next year.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET.

We have little change to note in the business of the week past. Grain is slowly and steadily coming forward and ships are loaded and dispatched daily. It is true prices are not satisfactory to the hard working producer, but as prices here are governed entirely by the foreign market we must submit with the best grace possible. Our harbor is full of ships seeking business, and rates of freight to the United Kingdom—which is our principal market—are lower than ever, the present rate being 45s to Liverpool, at which rate two large fleet-loads have shipped and been chartered within the week. Reports from all parts of the coast are of the most favorable character respecting crop prospects for this year, and if there is no failure in the spring rain-fall, we have promise of the largest crop of grain the State has ever produced. Wheat is steady at our last quotations, the demand for export being fair at the present limited price. Flour is in request, without change in the figures. Barley is weak, and prices hardly maintained with a prospect of a decline soon. Oats are decidedly weaker, and, as soon as we receive supplies from Oregon, lower rates may be expected. Corn is held firmly at our last quotations, with an active demand. Buckwheat is quiet at nominal prices. Rye is quiet at nominal prices. Potatoes are in more liberal supply and prices are lower. Onions remain as last quoted. Hops are in light supply and prices rule high. Wool is still in excessive stock and without movement, even at the very low prices quoted, the bulk of the stock remaining on hand being earthy, burry, and undesirable for export. Cotton is without movement and unchanged in price. Hides, both dry and wet-salted, are in demand, and our quotations represent cash prices for usual selections. Tallow is in light demand with large stock accumulations. Dairy produce meets a ready market, but as supplies increase daily, prices lessen in proportion.

WHEAT.—Transactions are limited, and there seems to be an inclination to lessen prices. There is no speculative feeling, nor is there any competition among buyers; purchasers may be said to have only a desire to buy at the lowest possible figures and load on the same terms—the point in view being, not to make money, but to avoid loss in the transaction. The range of price for good shipping grain is from $1 37½@1 55. Choice milling commands $1 55@1 60 per ctl. The present Liverpool quotations are as follows: 9s 2d @ 9s 4d for average, and 9s 6d@9s 10d for club. We note the following transactions during the week under review: 12,000 sks extra choice milling at $1 57½@1 60; 30,000 sks choice, for export, at $1 55@1 57½; 35,000 sks fair grade, shipping, $1 50@1 55; 10,000 sks inferior at $1 45@1 40 per ctl. Since July 1st, 1874, we have dispatched 204 vessels to foreign ports, carrying 7,000,000 centals wheat valued at $10,700,000. During same period last year we dispatched 198 vessels carrying 6,000,000 ctls wheat valued at $16,000,000.

FLOUR.—The price is unchanged since our last, but the market is weak. Business for the week has been quite light. Rates are as follows for cargo lots: superfine country brands, $4 00@4 25; city mills, standard, $4 25 @ 4 50; extra superfine, $4 75@5 00; silk dressed $5, 12½@5 25.

BARLEY.—Prices are easing off. Stocks are reported quite light; the demand being chiefly for export eastward, overland by rail. Sales within the week are reported, and include 4,000 sks choice Bay Brewing, in lots, at $1 60 @1 70 per ctl; 6,000 sks clean coast at $1 50@ 1 55; 4,000 sks coast feed at $1 42½@1 47½.

OATS.—Are yet without supplies from Oregon, though soon expected, now that the Columbia River is open. The market is very slack, and prices ease off. Sales for the week, in lots, of 1,500 sks at $1 57½@1 77½ ₹ ctl.

RYE.—Is in fair demand; receipts are light. There is a continued decline in price, the present range being $1 27½@1 30 per 100 lbs.

CORN.—There is quite an active demand, with sales, in lots, of 500 sks Yellow at $1 47@ 1 50; 2,500 sks do, $1 50@1 52½. White being very scarce is held higher.

BRAN and MIDDLINGS.—The mill prices are $15 00 for bran, and $22 50 ₹ ton for middlings, which is a reduction from previous prices.

HAY.—Is in good supply, meeting a ready market at advanced prices. The cargo price on the wharf ranges from $12 00 to $17 00 ₹ ton, according to quality.

STRAW.—Is quoted at 70@80c per bale.

BEANS.—White are scarce and in good demand at good prices; colored are neglected—prices for the latter are merely nominal, most of those offered being unsound and bad conditioned. We quote the range of wholesale prices for round lots as follows: Bayos, 2½@ 2¾c; Pink, 2@2¼c; Red, 1¾@2c; new White Pea, 3½@3¾c; White Butter at 4½@5c. ₹ 100 lbs.

HOPS.—There is no movement to speak of. Stocks are very light, and prices are firm, holders waiting for higher prices; 35@37½c may be quoted as the range.

HONEY.—Present receipts are small. Owing to a large export trade at low prices early in the season, stocks are much reduced and prices remain steady and firm at 18@22½c for White Comb; dark do. 12½@15c; Strained remains steady at 6@9c, according to quality.

BEESWAX.—The supply is fair, with a light export demand at 25@27½c.

POTATOES.—Receipts have been more liberal during the week, and prices have been a shade lower, although the demand continues active. We quote choice Humboldts at $1 80 @1 90. All other choice varieties bring $1 75 @1 80 on the wharf.

ONIONS.—The supply is fair—the larger portion of our receipts being of inferior quality. Choice Silverskins bring $1 20@$1 25 ₹ 100 lbs.

WOOL.—Stocks are unusually large for the season, and commission merchants continue to complain of extreme dullness in Wool matters. Good shipping grades of free wool are being offered at 15c, and hurry as low as 12½c for good grades; but shippers consider these rates much too high, in view of the low rates ruling at New York and Boston. Much of the stock here will have to be carried over until Spring clip comes forward, and even later, unless the feeling in the East improves very much by 1st of May. Sales for the week aggregate 125,000 lbs—say 20,000 for shipping, at 15@16c; 30,000 lbs ditto, free, 16½@17c; 25,000 lbs, 13@17c. We quote seedy and burry, 10@12c; fine free short, 10@14c; medium grade, 14@18c; coarse grade, 18@20c.

COTTON.—There is no movement, and prices are merely nominal, say 12½@14c. Stock on hand held for higher figures.

HIDES.—Dry are wanted; 19@20c cash is paid for usual selections; 8@9c ₹ lb for wet-salted.

TALLOW.—Stock on hand is said to be upwards of 2,000,000 lbs. The demand is quite light and prices low. Refined, of good quality, commands 7@7¼c, while large quantities of fair grade will bring only 6½@7c.

SEEDS.—There is an active demand for many varieties, the oil-mill taking all the clean Flax offered at our quotations. We quote: Alfalfa, 15@17c; Canary, 3@10c; Flax, 3@3 25c; California Mustard dull, 1½@3c.; Timothy, 7c ₹ lb.

CATTLE.—Our markets are well supplied with all the varieties of meats, except choice beef, which, at the moment, is hard to obtain, and brings a round price. The following are the wholesale rates: Beef, 8@10c, according to quality; Calves scarce at 6@8c; Mutton, 6½@7¼c, plentiful; Hogs on foot, 6¼@ 6¾; Hogs, dressed, 8¼@8½; the latter price for choice small ones.

POULTRY.—The market is well supplied with every description, but as the demand is light, prices are extremely low. We give the range as follows: Hens and Roosters, $6@7 00 ₹ doz; Broilers, $5@6 00 ₹ doz; Geese, tame, $2@3 00 ₹ pair; Ducks, do., $5 00@7 00 ₹ doz; Turkeys, live, 16@17c ₹ lb; do, dressed, 17@18c. pr. lb.

GAME.—We have an abundance of all seasonable varieties at prices so low as to enable almost any person to live entirely on wild meats. The following are market jobbing rates for the different varieties: Hare, plenty at $2 00 ₹ dozen; Rabbits, do., at $1 50@2 00 ₹ doz; Wild Geese, $3 00@3 00 ₹ doz; do. Ducks, large Mallard, $2@$3 00 ₹ doz; do. do., small, $1 50@$2 00 ₹ doz; Quail, $1 25@1 50 ₹ doz; Doves, 75c ₹ doz.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.—The demand has been so much greater than the supply for the past few weeks, that high prices have ruled for all the varieties. At this date we quote choice fresh roll butter, scarce, 37½@45c as the range for good, to extra choice. Pickled roll and packed barrel and firkin, out of market. We have received two or three car loads of Western firkin and keg within the week, which sold readily at 24@30c. New California cheese commands 16@17c; New York State cheese, 13@20c. Fresh California eggs quotable at 33½c ₹ doz., as a jobbing rate. No Eastern or Oregon in market. The prices here given can only be quoted for the 15th inst., as a continuance of pleasant weather will give farmers an opportunity of bringing in large supplies, and the consequence must be a falling off in prices.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

MASONIC SAVINGS AND LOAN BANK, No. 6 Post street, Masonic Temple, San Francisco.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this Bank, held January 18, 1875, a dividend was declared at the rate of nine and one-half (9½) per cent. per annum on Term Deposits, and seven and one-half (7½) per cent. per annum on Ordinary Deposits, for the semi-annual term ending January 31, 1875, payable on and after January 28, 1875, free of all taxes.

H. T. GRAVES, Secretary.

Centinela Colony.

The Centinela Rancho, situated on the coast, in a westerly direction from Los Angeles and about three miles distant from the limits of that beautiful city, contains 25,000 acres of good, arable valley land, a large portion of which is choice bottom and well adapted to the cultivation of semi-tropical fruits. Near the highest elevation is a cluster of large springs, from which flows a stream of crystal water several feet wide and six or eight inches deep, which may be conducted to almost any portion of the rancho. On the adjoining ranches are strong flowing wells, and it is the opinion of Governor Downey, Mr. Garey and others, that artesian water can be readily secured on a large portion of the land purchased. The surveyor is laying out a town in a central position and about three miles from a well sheltered bay. The Los Angeles and Pacific Railroad Company has been incorporated to build a railroad from the landing, where a wharf will be built, running through Centinela to Los Angeles.

There are orange, lemon and lime trees now loaded with fruit, 6,000 orange trees growing in the orchard, 7,000 three-year-old orange trees growing in the nursery, 1,500 Languedoc almond trees just commencing to bear, several hundred other fruit trees, and 850,000 young trees of all kinds; Shrubbery for Door Yards and Conservatories; Semi-tropical, to wit: Oranges and Lemons, budded and grafted, and Seedlings by the boxes, so no loss need be sustained in planting. Bananas, Pineapples, Guavas, etc. My prices are reduced. Send for priced catalogue free on application.

SOLDIERS' WARCLAIM AGENCY

No. 34 MONTGOMERY BLOCK, SAN FRANCISCO.

W. H. AIKEN, Attorney at Law, and Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the Collection of Soldiers' Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of Charge. When writing inclose stamp for reply, and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional Bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January, 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22d, 1861, for three years, if not paid, unless when discharged. Land Warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed to Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted Pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. AIKEN also tends to General Law and Collection Business.
