THE NEED OF TWO LIVE PARTIES.

New York Times.

New problems are now engaging the attention of the people and they are demanding their solution through the action of political parties. They will no longer sustain any party on its past achievements, or respect it for its venerable traditions. They are demanding of their representatives and their public men the performance of certain tasks, and will judge them by their success or failure in dealing with these. It is a bad thing when one party can presume upon distrust of the other as a means of retaining power without regard to its own present merit. We should have two parties inspired by worthy purposes and seeking the public good, the ascendancy of neither of which should be regarded as fraught with disaster. There is good reason for believing that the time has gone by when any party would or could sacrifice the results of our national progress in the last twenty years. The Republican party has shown too much inclination of late to rest upon its laurels, to claim 'remuneration for the thing it was,' and to depend for support upon distrust of the opposing party. It will be a good thing for it and for the country if the Democratic organization shall resolve to 'purge and live cleanly' henceforth, and bid for public confidence by endeavoring to do the work that needs to be done.

It is a wholesome thing that the Democratic party in the leading States has so far recognized the demand of the time as to make explicit professions and promises of reform. It has declared itself in favor of economy in public expenditures, reduction in the revenues, thorough revision of the tariff, and radical reform of the civil service system. This is the kind of competition for popular favor and support that should be exhibited by rival parties. It is well that both should recognize the work to be done, acknowledge its importance, and pledge themselves to earnest efforts to do it. There may be distrust of the promises and professions of one or the other, and of its capacity to perform the tasks it is willing to undertake; but when it is bound by pledges and accepts responsibility on condition of making them good, it can be held to a fair degree of effort. This is better than having only one party that can be looked to for any attempt at the performance of the tasks of the time. When that is the case such a party becomes too confident of its support, it presumes upon having the arena to itself, and of retaining power because it cannot be trusted to the opposing party.

There is no question of the tendency of a party long in power to become wedded to abuses and disinclined to reforms. The things to be reformed have grown up under its administration and secured its toleration, if not its countenance and support. It is entangled with them to such an extent that the process of correction tears its very body and substance. On the other hand, the party that is out of power has every inducement to undertake the work. It has nothing to lose and has much to gain, even if it make no undue or improper use of the advantages of victory. It is in a position to bid for public confidence and undertakes a new policy, always provided that it is a safe party to trust. Both parties should be safe in the sense that their ascendancy could involve no disaster. The normal method of progress under a free government is to be found in alternations of power between the forces of advancement and conservation. The failures of parties can be effectively rebuked and retrieved only by their defeat. They can be spurred to progressive effort only by the chance of losing support and having the administration transferred to the opposition. It is many years since the politics of this country has been in a normal condition in which there was a chance to pit the claims of one party to confidence against those of the other. It is a question whether the existence of slavery did not preclude such a condition even in the older days of the republic. But the time is coming for it. There may be a need of transformation in the parties themselves before it is fairly brought about, or it may come through present parties modified only by gradual changes.

VIRGINIA (Nev.), Nov. 17.—On probing the wound of Denis Sullivan, shot last night by William Miller, the ball was found to have gone downward instead of upward into the mouth. It struck under the chin, passed down to the scollar bone, then glanced round and lodged in the muscles of the back, narrowly missing the large artery and veins of the neck. It is quite a dangerous wound. Miller was struck in the right breast and the bullet passed round the shoulder bone and lodged in the muscles of the right arm, from which it was cut. Miller has been arrested and this afternoon gave bail in the sum of $5,000. As to the cause of the trouble there are conflicting stories, but both sides agree that it grew out of the appearance of Sullivan on the floor of the ball-room with his hat on and smoking a cigar.

The ravages of the phyllexera among the French vines have had a very beneficial effect upon the Greek raisin growers, for during the course of September upward of 70,000,000 pounds of raisins and currants were exported to France. About 30,000,000 pounds were shipped at Patras from the provinces of Corinth, Patras, Missolonghi, Tryphilia, Pylos, &c., 12,000,000 pounds at Zigina, from the provinces of Zigialea, Corinth, and the Dombe, and about 20,000,000 pounds from smaller ports.

LAND OFFICE DECISIONS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Acting Secretary Joslyn to-day decided that where a settler has failed to comply with the law in making improvements, but has tilled the land, and his failure to build is shown to have been caused by climatic influences, that he be allowed a further period of six months within which to establish a residence.

In the case of Christian F. Ebinger of Bloomington, Neb., against Daniel Hearle, Acting Secretary Joslyn to-day decided that Ebinger acquired no right by the presentation of his application for a timber culture entry during a vacancy in the office of Receiver, and that consequently the tract in controversy was unappropriated upon the date of Hearl's application. This decision establishes an important precedent which will govern similar cases.

In a decision rendered to-day the Acting Secretary of the Interior holds that a contest for a land title instituted by a parent cannot be transferred or inherited by a child, even though it shall appear that the contest was instituted for the child's benefit.

Commissioner McFarland, in a recent decision, declares that where a person has failed to make entry to a tract of land, through being misinformed of his rights by the local officers when otherwise entitled to make such entry, will be protected by the department, and lose nothing, unless required to do so by the actual demands of the law.

On April, 1881, the President issued a proclamation reserving from sale certain lands in Wisconsin which it was thought would be required for reservoir purposes on the head-waters of the Mississippi and St. Croix rivers. This proclamation was based upon engineers' reports. From subsequent reports it appears that the lands reserved are not required, and the President, by another proclamation, releases the lands embraced in the former. The Acting Secretary of the Interior holds that cash entries of lands reserved by the first proclamation, made after the date of the proclamation, but before its receipt at the local office, are illegal, as the proclamation went into effect from its date, and not from its receipt at the local office. The Acting Secretary has referred said entries to the Board of Equitable Adjudication.

Acting Secretary Joslyn has decided the case of Williams vs. the heirs of Hodgman, at Benson, Minn., in favor of the heirs. It appears that Hodgman made an entry on the land of Williams, on the ground that Williams died and left his entry complete. The Acting Secretary holds that the heirs should be allowed to complete the entry.

An Arizonan in Frisco.

ED. GAZETTE:—If there is one thing in the city that has struck me more forcibly than another, it is the prevalence of saloons. Much has been said about the saloons and rough characters in Arizona, but I think Arizona is much maligned. There are less saloons in Arizona, I think, to the number of people, than seems to be in the city of San Francisco, and even Oakland, with its great pretensions. And as for drinking—well, the fact of the saloons being there show that they must have custom to enable them to keep up. People don't keep saloons for their health even in the cities. Of course people need not drink unless they wish to; but one sees a number of men who are "half seas over," and, what are worse in appearance, sometimes women in the same condition. Then there are those who drink once in a while, not to excess, but habitually.

San Francisco is a network of street railways. Five cents is the fare, and for that small sum you can go to almost any part of the city, and by several ways, too; direct or all around Robin Hood's barn. Some of the companies have two or more lines, and then some have arrangements with other companies by which you are transferred from one line to another without paying another fare. For instance, you can get on the Sutter street car at the ferry landing drawn by horses up Market to the foot of Sutter, where they take off the horses and hook the car to the cable dummy; get off at Larkin and the conductor gives you a "transfer" to the Larkin street cable car; at the foot of Larkin he will give you a transfer to the Mission street cars which will take you to 28th street, or you can take the Mission street cars at the ferry. The conductors and drivers are very gentlemanly and will give you any information possible. And in fact city people very kindly answer the inquiries of a stranger. Stand on a corner and ask the first man who comes hurrying along, as if the train was waiting for him, where such and such a street is and he will stop and tell you very kindly; or if he hears you ask another who says he does not know, will stop himself and point out the way. Of course it is just where you thought it was—or else it isn't.

It is interesting to stand on the corner or walk along the street and watch the crowd—always in a hurry, men and women, handsome and homely, rushing, hurrying, scurrying by as though life depended on their reaching there in just such a time. Some happy faces and some serious. Some going home and some just going to work; others going out to enjoy themselves. But all in a hurry. Once in a while you see a stranger, like yourself, walking leisurely along taking mental notes of the crowd. San Francisco is a busy place, but yet it has a class of people who are ever intent on pleasure. No matter what sort of weather it is they will have their pleasure, and places of amusement are plentiful and of all kinds and classes. Good opera music is a rarity, as there is no first class one in San Francisco. They are more of a theater than opera going people.

CRIMINAL ITEMS.

Some of the Incidents which are Daily Flashed over the Wires.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Nov. 17.—A son of the Rev. Dr. Doane, a Methodist minister of East Portland, 13 years old, assaulted a schoolmate named Alonzo Gates, 11 years of age, on Thursday, while he was on the way home from school in company with his little sister. Doane fired three barrels of a revolver loaded with shot at him, without seemingly injuring him. The Gates' boy was monitor in the school, and Doane, having committed some offense, threatened to kill him if he informed the teacher. Gates told the teacher, and that evening while he was on his way home, with a little sister in charge, he was attacked as above stated. Young Gates was so afraid that Doane would kill him that he did not tell his father when he got home. The next day Mr. Gates heard of the matter and started out to chastise young Doane, but his wife interfered, and the matter will be adjusted by the Courts.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—A Daily News' Havana (Ill.), special of November 16th says: John B. Walters, a farmer living near here, while at work in the field to-day, was approached by his nephew, whose name was not learned. The nephew told him that he had murdered his (Walters') wife, and then fled. Walters went to his home and found the statement true. A large posse of citizens is in search of the murderer. No cause for the deed is assigned.

FRESNO, Cal., Nov. 18.—Last night a messenger came from the mountains and reported the killing of Henry Lafevre by J. S. G. Musick and his son, J. L. Musick. The report is that Musick and his son stopped at the log camp of A. H. Akers yesterday at noon, in White Deer Valley, and were invited to stop and take dinner. While at dinner Henry, son of A. J. Lafevre, rode up. Seeing him the Musicks got up from the table and seized their weapons and ran out of the back door. In a few seconds a shot was heard and when Mr. Ackers went out he found young Lafevre lying on the ground, dead. In the meantime the Musicks departed. For a long time trouble has existed between the Musicks and Lafevres. Last year old man Musick was shot, he claimed, in the back by young Lafevre, but on the trial the elder Lafevre swore that he did the shooting and that he did it in self-defense. The quarrel grew out of the possession of a piece of land. It is reported that the elder Lafevre is also killed or missing, his horse having been found riderless in the mountains. Of this no authentic information has been obtained.

LOUISVILLE (Ky.), Nov. 18:—Martha Robinson, colored, was arrested last night for a horrible crime. She heated a stove red hot, stripped the clothing from her child aged 2½ years, and laid it on its back on top of the stove. After a time she took it off the stove, carried it to a factory near by and laid it in the hallway. The cries of the child were heard by the officers, who arrested the woman. When asked why she committed the crime, she said she wanted to get rid of the child. It will die.

DEADWOOD (D. T.), Nov. 18.—In a quarrel at Lead City, this evening, Timothy Coleman struck Boyd Hicklen under the ear with his fist breaking Hicklen's neck, killing him instantly.

BIRMINGHAM (England), Nov. 18th.—William H. Cunningham, a workman at the Birmingham rolling mills, left work this morning, walked over to the blast furnace, ascended to the mouth of the stack, and awaited the moment for charging. When the bell was raised he threw off his hat and leaped head foremost into the furnace. Deceased was formerly of Kentucky.

FOREST CITY (N. C.), Nov. 18.—A serious conflict occurred near here to-day between two parties, composed of prominent citizens of the county. During the fight Barnes King shot William Tuttle, who in turn nearly blew the top of King's head off with a shotgun. King died soon after. John Hailer then dangerously wounded William Tuttle.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 17th.—The Times Opelike (Ala.), special says: A serious riot occurred here last night, in which Jim Roberts, Chas. Dix and Chas. Griggs were wounded. Pistols and shotguns were used. The row lasted all night, and the destruction to show-windows and lamps is considerable. It seems to have grown out of a general dislike for the city government. About a hundred shots were fired.

The New York Tribune says: In the midst of ecstacies of delight inspired by the election at Cleveland, the Democrats of the metropolis find themselves confronted with the most perplexing puzzle of modern times. It is all about the Coroner. William H. Kennedy was elected to that Tuesday. To-day it turns out that there are five gentlemen answering to this name residing in this city, with several wards to hear from, two at least lay claim to the office, and propose to have it or have the reason why satisfactorily explained to them. One of the contestants is a vender of beverages and the other an undertaker.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Secretary Teller has affirmed the decision in the case of the State of California ex rel D. W. Thompson vs. Girard Gesak et al, involving 640 acres of land in Los Angeles Land District, Cal. taken on appeal from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in favor of the claimant.

HOW TO WIN HIM.

The Horse Editor and the Poetical Young Lady.

Chicago Tribune.

"Is the hymeneal-happenings editor in?"

A very pretty young lady stood in the doorway and glanced in an appealing way at the occupants of the room.

"Hymeneal means something about getting married, doesn't it?" said the horse reporter.

"Yes, sir," replied the young lady, "but I don't want to marry"——

"Oh, I know you don't," said the friend of Maud S. "Girls never do. They spend most of their time trying to escape from the dreadful abyss of matrimony into which countless young men are endeavoring to plunge them."

"The object of my visit," said the young lady, "is to see some editor in regard to a poem, and it occurred to me that perhaps the gentleman for whom I asked might be the person having such matters in charge. I have met with a sad disappointment, and have written this poem in commemoration of the event."

"I'm sorry he got away," said the horse reporter; "but perhaps you were lucky to lose him. There isn't anything in this poem about the brown mantle of October resting lightly on the hills, is there? Or the deep green of the pines reflected against the turquoise bloom of an Autumn sky? Because if there is we can't take it. There is more brown-mantle-of-October poetry stowed away here now than the widow-cleaner can use in a year. If you've got anything about the white messengers of Heaven drifting silently down through the keen air, or the gaunt outline of the lifeless oaks standing haggard against an unpitying sky, we might do business with you. Our stock of November poetry is rather light this season. If you could ring in something about a bootblack dying on the steps of a banker's residence Christmas eve, while inside the house the wassail bowl was going round, it would be a daisy."

"I'm afraid my poem will hardly meet the requirements you suggest," said the young lady, "because the theme is a sad one, and the treatment is naturally in accord with this fact. I can read it to you, however."

"Nothing about 'put away his little rattle' in it, is there?"

"No, sir."

"Nor 'the beautiful summer is dead,' alas?"

"Certainly not."

"Well, then, you may read it," and the horse reporter settled himself in a critical attitude.

The young lady produced a roll of manuscript and read as follows:

And this is the end of all, Ernest! The end of our happy dreams.
A walk to the quiet graveyard, where the snowy marble gleams;
Tablets of blighted hopes, and broken hearts that moan
For their buried loves, and the weary years that must be lived alone.

You go back to the world, Ernest—men's hearts so seldom break—
And under new stars, in new skies set, soon
other ties will make;
But I go back to a desolate life—no man can ever be,
Though I roam the wide world over, what you were to me.

And this is the end of all. Good-by! Perhaps it had caused less pain
To have gone our separate ways without seeing each other again.
For want of one little word, Ernest, lives
often drift apart;
You spoke that word, but it came too late;
it only broke my heart.

"Nice, ain't it?" remarked the horse reporter when the reading was finished. "Are you the girl that's been up to the graveyard and taken a look at the tablets of blighted hopes?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ernest is going back to the world, is he? What has he been doing in St. Louis all this time?"

"I hardly think you appreciate the circumstances under which the poem was written," said the young lady.

"Oh, yes I do. Ernest is your young man, and you have quarrelled with him because he only called you his tootsey-wootsey eighteen times instead of twenty, as you had figured on. You think your heart is broken, and you want to get even by breaking other people's hearts with your poetry. That's wrong. Just now the world seems desolate, and the horizon of your life is o'ercast with leaden clouds. But time heals all wounds, and in about a month from now, when some other young man mentions oysters, the chances are you will beat the record getting your sealskin jacket off the hat-rack."

"You are very much mistaken, sir," said the young lady. "My love is no ephemeral passion."

"Do you still want Ernest?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I can tell you how to get him."

"Oh! can you?" asked the girl enthusiastically. "I shall be so thankful if you will."

"You take this poem," said the horse reporter, "and send it to him. Then drop him a line saying the papers have agreed to print it for you. If he doesn't weaken when it comes to having his name mixed up with a lot of graveyards, blighted hopes, broken hearts, and a desolate life, I shall miss my guess."

"Do you really think so?" asked the girl.

"Yes; really and truly."

"I will tell you whether or not your plan succeeds," she continued.

"Never mind that part of it," replied the compiler of the 2:30 lists, "the scheme will work all right. Come around again after you are married, and I will give you a point or so how to keep Ernest at home nights."

From "The Times."

Editor of the Times:—The statements recently published in your valuable paper has created much excitement in this city among the class who own and use horses, and after reading your request that all should write you who had been benefited by the letter published, from Dr. Bates, in regard to the remarkable success he always had with Kendall's Spavin Cure, I decided to write you my experience with it. My first knowledge of this remedy came through a visit to the office of the Massachusetts Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. This society was the first to use Kendall's Spavin Cure in Boston, and I was informed by Chas. A. Carrier, a gentleman in whom I had the utmost confidence that they had never used anything that worked so well for spavins or any lameness in horses, and he stated that he gave it to poor men who had lame horses and would agree to use it, and in this way he was enabled to get along without prosecuting them, as it was sure to cure when persevered with. Some time after this I received a very severe injury to the knee joint, and the high recommendation which Mr. Carrier gave of Kendall's Spavin Cure, gave me so much confidence in it that I used it for my knee with the very best of results, and since that time my faith has been so strong in the merits of this remedy that we will not be without it in the house. I have tried it since that time for foot-rot, sore teats and warts on my cows' teats, also for a general liniment for my horses and in my family and I sincerely believe, with all those who have written you before, that there never was so good a liniment for both man and beast ever discovered before. Hoping you will continue to give us more light on this subject from,

Yours very truly, ROB'T C. AYER.
Boston, Mass., Oct. 1, 1881.

Woman's rights are obtaining recognition in Norway. The parliament has just passed a law, which the King has signed, giving women the privilege of attending the universities and applying for degrees in all the arts and sciences; but the right to hold office in the service of the State and of participating in the competitive examinations for such positions is not yet accorded to them.

A Chance for Fun.

The "latest thing out" in the way of something to afford home amusement for winter evenings, or a side-show for church fairs, consists of a sort of Magic Lantern that doesn't require pictures on glass. The Polyopticon, as it is called because it will show up so many different things, makes use of ordinary newspaper pictures, family photographs, chromo cards, home-made sketches, etc., and thus affords a new use for the collections of pretty cards which so many have been industriously making. Though patented, it can be made and sold at one fourth the price of a good Magic Lantern.

Among the books of Popular Medical Literature which have become widely known and appreciated by the general public, none maintains a steadier sale or more favored place in the opinion of the press and the people, than "PLAIN HOME TALK" and "MEDICAL COMMON SENSE," by Dr. R. In bringing out their complete illustrated edition of nearly 1,000 pages, bound in cloth, at the remarkably low price of $1.50, the publishers have insured for themselves prosperity in "large sales at small profits," and for the public the boon of good and instructive reading at a price within the reach of all book-buyers. Religious cranks are getting plentiful. The latest is a young man of Montreal named Fallon, who died last week after fasting twenty-two days, under the delusion that God had commanded him to do so.

"It's all nonsense to suppose that you can go serenely through this life without physical suffering. WEEKLY GAZETTE.

SATURDAY.....NOV. 25, 1882

FACTS FOR SETTLERS.

Last week we spoke of the fact that land in the vicinity of Anaheim was far cheaper than similar land in other parts of the county. From the number of sales lately made, there is no doubt that we will soon be deprived of this argument in writing paragraphs to induce immigration. Land is steadily increasing in value—we know of more than a dozen tracts which were rated at $50 an acre three months ago and which cannot now be bought for $75 an acre. It is evident, therefore, that it would be wise for new-comers to this county to buy some of this Anaheim land while the price is yet reasonable and within the reach of people of moderate means.

There is probably no land under the sun which can be put to more varied uses. This is the home of the vine. No better wine was ever made in California than that which has just been made by the thirty or forty wine makers of Anaheim. Nor can better raisins be found anywhere than those made in this vicinity. This industry is yearly assuming greater proportions here. It has been heretofore insignificant for the reason that the wine grape was made a specialty, but since it has been demonstrated that there is a profit in raisin making, more attention has been paid to that industry. Orange trees grow luxuriantly, and in North Anaheim are orchards in no respect inferior to any in the county. Apples, peaches, pears, and nearly all northern fruits are grown with results which rather surprise people who come here with the idea that only semi-tropical fruit excel. We have the word of an old gentleman, just arrived from Illinois, that the apples grown in Anaheim are larger and have a finer flavor than those grown in that State. Apricots, a fruit which is destined to become the most valuable product of this county, grows here to an almost phenomenal size and the trees are very productive. We have the testimony of the Superintendent of the Los Angeles cannery that the best apricots received at that establishment last season came from Anaheim; and this tribute is all the more valuable because of the large area of country from which the cannery was supplied.

There are in this vicinity large tracts of poor, sandy soil, which unthinking people would unhesitatingly pronounce worthless. But we beg to remind our readers that ten or twelve years ago seven men out of ten who came to Los Angeles county pronounced as only fit for sheep pasture the very land which is to-day worth from $75 to $300 per acre. These sandy, almost arid, tracts will yet be valuable groves. It is just the kind of soil on which are the finest olive orchards of Europe; nay, it is even more fertile than the soil along the Mediterranean, whence comes the most famous olives. Too little attention has been given to this tree, but when once the people understand the immense profits of olive culture, and appreciate the fact that the tree grows and flourishes on soil almost too poor to raise anything else, we may expect to see the olive as largely planted as the grape and the orange.

AN ECCENTRIC FAMILY.

That portion of the English nobility who answer to the name of Queensbury have from a remote period had the faculty of keeping their names before the world. To be famous is a worthy ambition, but there are some kinds of fame which are of questionable benefit. There was one Marquis of Queensbury who was noted throughout all England for his ability to knock out the best pugilist that ever did battle in a 24-foot ring, but that was at a time when prize fighting was not so disreputable a profession as it has since become. It is related of this particular Marquis that having "sassed" a brawny coal peddler, that individual invited him to step down and 'av it out on the roadway. Handing the reins of his drag to his lady companion, he sailed in, whipped the coal merchant in fine style, resumed the reins, and drove off as calm as if nothing unusual had happened. "That must either be the devil or the Markis o' Queensbury," the discomfited coal man is reported to have said.

Coming down to the present time, and omitting mention of the eccentricities of other members of the family, we find that only last week the present Marquis of Queensbury attended the first presentation of Tennyson's new play, "The Promise of May," and in the midst of one of the scenes he rose and denounced the play as a gross outrage upon the fraternity of freethinkers and atheists, of whom he is a shining light. He harangued the audience until he was forcibly ejected from the theatre. It may be that his love for notoriety had less to do with his outbreak than a natural indignation at the sentiments of the play. The main plot of the play (which, it may here be remarked, has proven a flat failure) is something like this:

Phillip Edgar, a young gentleman with atrocious, socialist, freethinking sentiments, comes to Steer's happy homestead, and despite the suspicious hatred of Farmer Dobson, Dora's admirer, seduces Eva and abandons her. She disappears, leaving a letter expressing her intention of drowning herself. Six years elapse, during which Dobson's suit to Dora has not improved, when Edgar, with the addition of a slight mustache and beard "grown during my travels abroad," returns to the farm and gives himself out as a Mr. Harrold. He shows a newspaper to Dora announcing the death of Phillip Edgar. "'Tis true," he says aside, "it is my father's death." He makes love to Dora, whom, in violation of his pronounced objection to matrimony as to all effete institutions, he intends to wed by way of compensation for her sister's seduction; but Eva, who had not drowned herself, has returned and overhears the freethinking gentleman's declaration of love to Dora, recognizes him, and having previously informed the audience that the doctors say her health is affected, falls dead, exclaiming that she forgives him. Dobson, whose previous attempt on Edgar with a pitchfork was frustrated, now appears with a big stick, and is held by Dora that he is, after all, the better gentleman, and is requested to see the freethinker off the premises.

Tennyson's idea seems to have been to cast opprobrium on the class holding liberal ideas," and he has certainly succeeded in incurring their hearty displeasure.

And now comes the Marquis of Queensbury's sister, Lady Gertrude Douglas, with her contribution to the family's various escapades. A London dispatch of the 19th instant says that her ladyship has scandalized society by disclosing the fact of her marriage to a baker. We on this side of the water may see nothing startling in this union, more especially as the husband is said to be a good baker; but the English aristocracy are doubtless paralyzed with horror at the union of one of their set with an artisan.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Langtry is to play in a San Francisco theater. She will "draw" better in San Francisco than she would in Anaheim. We have a surfeit of beautiful women here already.

At the coming session of the Legislature a bill will probably be introduced to declare the adulteration of wine to be a misdemeanor, and punishable by a fine. The Napa winegrowers are already discussing the details of the bill and will doubtless see that it is pushed through to final passage.

The Railroad Commissioners have made another mighty effort to reduce fares, but like all other attempts, it has proved abortive. Cone, at a meeting held some time ago, offered a resolution reducing fares to four cents per mile. The matter came up on Tuesday. Beerstecher opposed the resolution; Cone favored it; Stoneman has resigned. Result, a deadlock.

San Diego has had a peck o' trouble first and last about railroad matters, and it is again in a stew. The California Southern Railroad Company has a clause in its articles of incorporation which says: "The place "where its principal place of business is to "be transacted is at the city of San Diego." But, after the manner of railroads, it proposes to nullify this clause by removing its office to National City on December 11th, and as a sop to Cerebus it has caused to be erected in San Diego a passenger station which cost $500! But notwithstanding this evidence of liberality and good will, San Diegans refuse to be comforted.

The high price of hops which now prevails will probably have the effect of increasing the area devoted to their culture. But it is only a few years ago that hops brought such a low price that many yards were abandoned, and the fact should not be lost sight of that, like every other commodity, hops fluctuate in price. The following table of prices, for the last seventeen years, is from a recent compilation in a New York paper:

Year.	Selling price.	Year.	Selling price.
1866	55c.	1875	13c.
1867	60c.	1876	36c.
1868	20c.	1877	11c.
1869	25½c.	1878	12½c.
1870	17½c.	1879	40½c.
1871	55c.	1880	25½c.
1872	45c.	1881	30½c.
1873	42½c.

Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. To the latter class belongs Perry Belmont, one of the New York Congressmen. He and Blaine had a wordy passage during some investigation or other at the last session of Congress, and straightway Belmont became famous. Not only did he gain prestige among the Democrats, but he gained an admirer in Roscoe Conkling. Blaine offended Conkling many years ago by comparing his walk to the strut of a turkey gobbler, and since then the two men have not spoken. It was enough for Conkling to know that Belmont hated Blaine, and that the latter desired Belmont defeated for re-election. Conkling personally told Townsend, the Republican opponent of Belmont, that he would labor to elect Belmont and to defeat him (Townsend). What a tremendously dead political duck Conkling is!

The Railroad Tax Cases.

San Diego Union.—A. B. Hotchkiss, Esq., attorney for the Southern Pacific Railroad, has received a note from E. B. Ryan, Esq., dated San Francisco, November 17th, in which the latter gentleman says: "Owing to your exertions in behalf of San Diego county, I have drawn vouchers for our whole tax for 1882." So San Diego county receives the full amount of tax assessed against the railroad, without contest or demur. Common sense in our case has been productive of decidedly more solid results than a moonshiny contest for a "great principle." And Mr. Hotchkiss merits the good will of the community for his judicious and sensible course.

Nevada City, Nov. 20th.—The Board of Supervisors have authorized the District Attorney to effect a compromise with the Central Pacific Railroad Company, on a basis of 60 per cent. for the taxes due to this county by that corporation of the last two levies. The Supervisors have left it with the same officer to bring a suit for the full amount if he deems the latter course preferable.

The tax case of San Mateo county against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company has been advanced on the calendar of the U. S. Supreme Court and will be heard about December 19th. Hon. A. L. Rhodes will argue the case for the county, and the Railroad Company has employed Roscoe Conkling and Senator Edmunds to defend it.

—The San Diego Sun says: "Our young friend Eugene Shaffer [brother of Geo. B. Shaffer of the Bank of Anaheim] returned on Thursday evening from an extended visit to Anaheim. He has been suffering for some time with a sore hand, from the effects of what has heretofore been considered rheumatism. About three years ago he was accidentally shot in the afflicted member, and becoming convinced that the ball yet remained therein, he yesterday sought the advice of Dr. Gregg, who, after probing, succeeded in taking out a small 22-calibre pistol ball. The latter had entered at the wrist joint. It was extracted from between the middle fingers, having penetrated that distance during the time specified."

A DAIRY AND FRUIT COUNTRY.

The Special Advantages of Westminster and Garden Grove for Those Industries.

As your regular correspondents have turned their attention to other pursuits, I give you a few notes lest your readers may think Westminster too quiet. After two months absence in the East I find here healthy signs of progress, and great hopefulness in future developments. A recent purchase of forty additional acres by a resident of a year's standing, who came originally from Central New York and then from Colorado, was accompanied with the remark that this was the best dairy country in the United States, favored by both climate, soil and water. Stock have been perfectly healthy this year, and feed has been plentiful. In fact the weediness of this section, which is so evident to strangers after seeing the clean tilled orchards and vineyards of the dryer foothill lands, testifies to the quantity of feed that has grown, and the quality is steadily improving. A number of new pastures have been inclosed the past year, and more are in progress.

It seems evident now that the development of Westminster, including Garden Grove, will be in the double direction of fruit and stock; the best land in bodies for fruit, and the mixed and interior lands fenced in for alfalfa and natural pastures. Visitors from the foothills admire our rosy apples, immense grapes, and delicious pears. Apricots and peaches have yielded famous crops, beyond a market, and the glut has prepared the way for dryers next season. French prunes have borne good crops. Hungarian prunes are a beautiful fruit, as the Gazette knows, but the difficulty of finding a market for the fresh fruit will probably make them unprofitable, as they are not as well adapted for drying as French and German or Italian. Japan persimmons bear well, and the fruit is delicious, and while they will carry well, their future as a marketable crop is still uncertain. Our specialties in fruit must be apples for winter use, pears, apricots, nectarines, prunes and peaches. We are justified in expecting the higher lands to give way to us in profitable apple and pear culture, and we can equal if not excel them on the others. Our damp nights have prevented raisin making on any large scale, but our muscat grapes are so much larger than in almost any other locality that we believe we have a future in that direction by the aid perhaps of sun dryers.

In these two directions of fruit and stock great progress is manifest. The one does not interfere with the other. The character of our lands point to both together on every farm. In this way the inferior lands can be put to profitable use. The mixture of alfalfa, salt grass, burr clover, tule, Bermuda grass, millet, ryegrass and bunch grass makes the best of feed. Even the alkali wastes are now coming into value in this connection, and the free use of artesian water is helping the growths. The grass known as blue joint or ryegrass is rapidly spreading, and gives the first green feed in the winter. We consider it our best natural pasture grass. This, with the Bermuda and the bunch grass, will grow in all soils, even the most alkali, with water, and when once started will spread indefinitely, except when stopped by plowing. The time is approaching when most of our waste lands will be fields of living green. The time has gone by for undertaking to farm defective lands. They have a certain value as pastures, and as such will pay as large a percentage on their valuation as the best lands in the county. We are also satisfied that the period of deterioration of defective lands is past. There was a time when either water, or simple cultivation, by removing the surface covering, and facilitating evaporation, brought up alkali on a considerable part of our lands. The area of good land proof against this seemed at one time to be gradually decreasing. But now the process is reversed. A judicious use of water, and cultivation, is now restoring land. By use as pastures, with abundance of water, even the wastes begin to have a positive value. Alkali is certainly decreasing. We can therefore fairly invite settlers to something definite, for after these ten years of experimenting we know whereof we speak, and can show the proofs of it. We have also learned what to plant on and how to use the defective lands. And if, as is asserted, the area of corn land in Illinois is decreasing, and the area in grass increasing, and the same change is being made in New York, because grass is more profitable, we certainly have something to depend on here for solid prosperity.

Our neighbors on the mesa lands bring their young stock and dry cows here for pasturage. We can take good care of them. Our butter, cheese, beef and pork go out to a hungry market. Our corn is fed at home, or sent abroad and brings rich returns. But besides these, on our lands reserved for fruits, we can raise more alfalfa, pears and grapes and as many apricots, peaches and prunes to the acre as they can. Even if we do not raise oranges profitably, and are still experimenting for raisins, have we not in these other points a counterbalancing advantage. Our superior healthfulness for almost all persons not far advanced in consumption, and needing strength, must be conceded in the end. The air is moister, cooler, and more invigorating, and the uncontaminated artesian water and fresh sea breeze drive away fevers. The time is surely coming when these points will be appreciated. Strangers neglect their own interests by not inquiring into them. Investments here at present prices of improved and unimproved lands will pay largely in the near future, both in net returns and increase of values. What our people now need to do is to use all their natural pasture lands for stock, and increase their planting of tested varieties of fruit, and to show that they discern the signs of the times.

Recent purchases of real estate have been made as follows: Thomas Edwards, 80 acres at $20; Wm. Clark, 40 acres at $12½; R. S. Hazard, 40 acres at $15; Robert Eccles, 80 acres at $25, and Jas. A. Smith has engaged 40 acres at $45 and E. P. Justice 20 acres at $22½. Other sales are in progress, but not in a shape to be reported. R. S.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

At Martinez, during a drunken quarrel, Dario Juarez stabbed and killed Frank Martinez.

Miss Naomi Angell has been elected Superintendent of Schools in Mono county by a vote of 929 to 521 for her opponent, Mrs. C. W. Sullivan.

Vincent Clarke, a thirteen-year-old boy, was shot and killed at Desert Station, Nev., last week while playing with an old rifle, supposed not to be loaded.

William McKay, a harvest hand working near Princeton, Cal., had his brains crushed out last week by falling from a loaded wagon, the wheels of which passed over his head.

In Fresno county, on Sunday night, William Teague shot John Burnett and then killed himself. Burnett's story is that he was sleeping with Teague, and the latter got up during the night and shot him. Teague is thought to have been insane.

The fruit-drying establishment of Crawford, at Sebastopol, five miles from Santa Rosa, burned down Sunday afternoon. The loss is about $5,000; insured for $1,500. The fruit growers in that vicinity are supplying means for a fresh start.

A Frenchwoman who lives with her three sons near San Gorgonio Pass, San Bernardino county, has been arrested for attempting to wreck a train. She and her interesting family placed rocks on the track. The engine jumped the track, but fortunately the cars were not overturned. Detectives wormed confessions from the boys. The object of the attempt was plunder.

A disease similar to pinkeye has made its appearance among the horses in the northern part of San Joaquin county. John McNeill, a farmer on Old River, near Tracy, has lost two valuable animals within a week. He has three others that will not recover. Another farmer in the northern part of the county lost five and had to kill the sixth a few days ago. The afflicted horses refuse to eat and grow thin. They live less than a week from the time the symptoms first appear, and while they become emaciated in the body, their legs swell to a great size.

A San Joaquin farmer recently advertised that his wife had left him without just cause. The wife retorted with a card in a Stockton newspaper, stating that one of the reasons why she left him was "personal uncleanliness on his part, he having acknowledged on one occasion that he had not bathed himself for over five weeks." She states that she has other reasons, but does not give them. If disinclination to bathe can be set up as a good ground for divorce, we may look to see a lively lot of litigation, especially in the dry season.

An attempt was made Wednesday night to fire the town of Guernevilla, Sonoma county, by H. H. Haas, the business manager of S. Schloss, a merchant of that place. The would-be incendiary placed cans of coal oil under the store of O. Morrison and also under the Postoffice near by. He was detected while in the act of setting fire to the oil by parties who had been watching his movements. He fled and was fired upon twice before capture. His supposed intention was to secure the insurance on the stock of goods in Schloss' store, and to get rid of his rival, as the store of Morrison adjoined that of Schloss, and he fired the former to avert suspicion. Haas is now under arrest at Santa Rosa, charged with arson.

Los Angeles County Sunday School Association.

This body of Sunday School workers held its second convention in Santa Ana this week. The convention was presided over by Prof. T. N. Wells, Vice President of the Santa Ana district. The address of welcome was made by Rev. H. J. Parker of Santa Ana on Tuesday evening and was responded to by Rev. A. J. Ekin, the congregational clergyman of Los Angeles. Rev. F. H. Robinson, of Anaheim, was elected recording Secretary. On Wednesday various questions relating to Sunday School work in the county were discussed. The discussions were enlivened by the earnest words of Miss Almira Losee, well known throughout the United States as a zealous Christian worker.

There was a large delegation from various parts, particularly the southern portion of the county. The convention was a success in the purpose for which it was intended. Anaheim and Westminster districts were well represented.

The Mussel Slough Troubles.

Hanford, Nov. 22.—The meeting called to-day to confer with Mr. Tully and to consider steps towards the final adjustment of the disputed land claims was largely attended. At 11 A. M. Mr. Tully briefly and earnestly thanked those present who aided in his election and repeated the pledge, previously made, to do all in his power while in Congress to aid his constituents whether they had given him their votes or not. The afternoon was consumed by those in contest with the railroad discussing a basis of settlement. The basis proposed is not to be made known at present. A committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Tully, Sumner and Glasscock, our new Congressmen, were appointed to confer with the railroad authorities about an equitable compromise, and a committee of five settlers, composed of Messrs. H. S. McQuiddy, B. F. Burr, J. J. Doyle, Thos. Chavers and W. H. Docker, were chosen to consult with the former committee. Major McQuiddy leaves soon to attend his trial set for next Monday.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 22.—This evening Robert Mayfield and Alexander King, colored men, were lowered into the stack of a furnace in which the fire was supposed dead, to make some repairs. The fumes overcame them and they dropped upon a hot mass of ore and coal below and the bodies were reduced to cinders.

—Leonard Switzer, living on Aliso street, Los Angeles, has been arrested for beating his wife. This brutal offense is becoming painfully frequent in the city.

MADE BY JACKSON & TRUMAN, San Francisco.

THE GREAT STORM

Of January 12th, 1882, which injured or destroyed scores of Windmills in Los Angeles County proved conclusively that the

is the only one that can stand, uninjured, a heavy gale. Although some of nearly every other manufacture was destroyed, so far as known every one of the California Mills put up by the undersigned escaped injury. These Mills are so strongly made and so perfectly self-regulating that, when properly put up, it is almost impossible for a storm to injure them. It is also superior to other Mills in having an ADJUSTABLE STROKE, (4 different lengths) in the same and consequence of its work, in the beauty of its design and finish and in the marvelously low price at which it is sold. I will furnish these Mills with Pumps and Tanks and set them up in complete running order at the lowest possible rates. For further particulars call upon or address

Kleinigkeiten.

—Mr. J. T. Stewart has bought a complete set of well boring tools, and is now fully prepared to undertake expeditions after water. Read his advertisement.

—The cargo of the schooner Kitty Stevens is now being unloaded at the lumber yard of Saxton & Cox. It comprises 165,000 feet of redwood lumber.

—The case of the People vs. E. M. Davidson, implicated in the recent murder of the Chinaman near Orange, has been set for trial in the Superior Court on December 21st.

—The talk of a street railroad between the town and the depot is again revived. It is possible that the road will be built in the near future.

—J. J. Ayers, for ten years editor of the Los Angeles Express, has severed his connection with that journal. It is said he has the "inside track" for appointment as State Printer.

—All the suits pending in the Justices' Courts of Los Angeles city against violators of the Sunday law, and which have been pending since last March, have been dismissed.

—Christmas is coming. The various stores have already taken on a holiday look; but what interests the children most is the contents of three large cases of toys received by Mr. Luedke during the week.

—The death of Mrs. Edwin S. Saxton is noted elsewhere. For nearly five years she had been confined to the house, and death was to her a release from weariness. It came to her without pain, but quietly and expectedly.

—The Porcupine is the suggestive name of a new weekly paper published in Los Angeles by E. W. Dugan and Horace Bell. The latter is editor. He appears to be a facile, venomous, pungent writer, reckless in his statements and careless of the consequences. As a result, the Porcupine is interesting.

—Two horses were stolen from Wm. Sears, near Westminster, on Thursday evening. They were found in a Los Angeles livery stable on Tuesday, having been sold to the stable proprieter by a man named Dominguez who has been arrested and held for trial.

—A mare valued at $300, owned by Mr. J. W. Brackett, died of lockjaw a few days ago. On going to the corral one morning last week, Mr. Brackett found the mare impaled on the tines of a hay-fork, which had pierced her breast, and despite every precaution lockjaw supervened.

—Dr. E. L. Cowan returned on Saturday from his Eastern tour and has resumed the practice of his profession. He brought with him some valuable dental instruments; and his office is now even more fully supplied than it was before the disastrous fire which destroyed it.

—Many vineyards are now being pruned. For the information of amateurs in grape growing, it may be said that there is no pressing hurry about pruning; there is time yet for a week or two. The work is under way now for reasons of convenience rather than because it is the proper season.

—County School Superintendent Hinton gives notice that an examination of teachers will be held at Good Templars' Hall, in Los Angeles, commencing December 20th and continuing three days. Applicants for certificates are required to be present at the commencement of the examination.

—The wife of Josiah Smith, the murderer of his son, was arrested by the Westminster authorities as accessory to the crime, and after a preliminary examination before Justice Aldridge she was sent to the county jail to await trial on a charge of murder. The trial of Smith, which was set for last Wednesday, has been postponed until Tuesday, December 12th.

—Finding that the climate of Pomona affords him great relief from asthma, Mr. Con Howe has decided to remove from Garden Grove and establish himself at the first named place. In order that he may be saved the expense of freighting his goods, he offers them at cost for the next two weeks. His store building is also offered for sale, and to a live business man this is a first class opening. See advertisement.

A $20.00 Bible Reward.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for December, among which is the following:

We will give $20.00 in gold to the person telling us how many verses there are in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision) by December 10th, 1882. Should two or more correct answers be received, the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner December 15th, 1882. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the Christmas Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published. This may be worth $20.00 to you; cut it out. Address RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Penn.

An Exploded Bugaboo.

If you ask why this section has not progressed as rapidly as other parts of the county, you will probably be told that the reason is "the water question." This water question has been a great bugaboo, and we cannot escape the conclusion that it has been hurled at inquirers through malicious and jealous motives. And candor compels us to say that our own people have been in the past too prone to exaggerate the matter and flaunt it in the face of strangers. How is it that the south side of the river has attained such prosperity with no more water than this side of the river? Three times more land is irrigated by the Orange ditch than by the Anaheim, North Anaheim and Yorba ditches combined, and yet each side of the river gets the same amount of water. Is it not a fact that the former scarcity of water was due more to bad ditches and waste than to lack of quantity? It is now known that such was the case, for since the completion of the Anaheim Water Company's new ditch there has been little trouble from lack of water. Good ditches and a careful and economical distribution of water have practically solved the water question; and all that now remains to be done to stimulate the progress of this section is to secure a more perfect unity of purpose among the people of this side of the river. A house divided against itself will not stand; half a dozen water companies pulling half a dozen different ways and all at once, is not exactly the correct thing. But notwithstanding all this, there is no longer anything in this water question to frighten people, and the individual who holds it up as a scarecrow is engaged in very small business.

Buruel Point Mill.

The Buruel Point Flouring Mill is turning out a fine quality of flour—the best, our baker says, which is in the market. There is no reason why this should not be, as there is probably not a mill in California which can compare with it in point of improved machinery, and the wheat grown in this section, skillfully treated, must of necessity rank with the best.

There is nothing like "modern improvements" to knock romance out of time. Those who visit the Buruel Point mill expecting to see only an enlarged prototype of the stereotyped country mill, with its lazily-revolving, moss-covered wheel and all the usual adjuncts, will be disappointed. The turbine wheel has superseded the one of olden time, and its whirr and power are tenfold greater. To one unaccustomed to such things, it seems impossible that a small stream of water—probably not more than 500 inches—can furnish the motive power for such machinery as is contained in this mill. But there is no wasted force; science takes care of that. A jet of water hardly thicker than a pin propels a sewing machine; and a stream as thick as a lead pencil causes a printing press to make thousands of revolutions every hour.

In the past few years there have been great improvements in flour making machinery, and all these improvements have been incorporated into this mill. The result is that their flour has already acquired a reputation which makes the demand fully equal to the capacity of the mill. It may be noted that two-thirds Sonora and one-third Australian wheat has been found to make the best flour.

—It is to be hoped that you will not linger so long at the fatted turkey as to incapacitate yourself for active work at the ball on next Thursday evening. The Order of Chosen Friends, under whose auspices the ball will be given, have a right to expect that their friends will rally in numbers and assist in making the affair a brilliant finale to the enjoyments of Thanksgiving. The supper at the Planters' Hotel promises to be one which will cast in the shade all previous efforts in that line. Tickets to the ball and supper can be purchased from any member of the Lodge.

—Messrs. C. B. Polhemus and Moses Hopkins, both of whom are large owners in the Stearns' Ranchos, were in town yesterday. The grand reservoir scheme was fully explained to these gentlemen, and it is to be hoped that they were impressed with the practicability of the enterprise and the benefits that will result from its consummation. The assistance and counsel of the owners of the Stearns' Ranchos is needed in this matter, and we are loth to believe that they will withhold their aid when once they comprehend the necessity of the undertaking.

—The alarm of fire yesterday morning at 9 o'clock was caused by the issuance of smoke from the cellar of a dwelling house on Adele street, owned by Mr. J. Backs and occupied by a Mexican family. A small quantity of hay which was stored in the cellar was set on fire by some children who were playing among it, and the result was a thick, heavy smoke which made it difficult for the firemen to work in the cellar. The fire was eventually extinguished with but little damage to the house. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

—The brother of the late S. A. Sheffield arrived from Faribault, Minnesota, on Monday evening, and the funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Sheffield is recovering from the attack of fever which prostrated her last week.

Little Claude Sheffield, aged about 5 years, who had been very sick for a couple of weeks, died on Thursday night.

—In walking along the railroad from Anaheim to Santa Ana a few days ago, it was found that a portion of the rail had been torn from the track and cast aside. The man who made the discovery reported to the section men, and the track was promptly repaired. It is probable that pure maliciousness was at the bottom of the outrage.

Fresh Limburger cheese, imported direct, has just been received by Jos. Robinson, Center Street.

A WRATHFUL WOMAN

Who Will yet Make it Uncomfortable for Charles Jones.

Mrs. Sophronia Swinford is the alliterative name of a lady who keeps a whiskey saloon in San Jose, and who has been furnishing the papers of that city with a toothsome scandal which, in the dearth of other news, serves to fill up several columns of the papers aforesaid. Ordinarily, the doings of a lady saloon-keeper in a village as remote as San Jose would receive but brief mention in the columns of the GAZETTE, but in this particular instance there is a local interest in the affair from the fact that the buxom Sophronia lived, moved and had her being in Anaheim and Los Nietos for a number of years, and at that time was rated at "fair to middling" in the social scale.

The "shameful episode," as the San Jose papers call it, is reported with an amplitude and plainness of language which we cannot imitate. Briefly, therefore, it appears that Mrs. Swinford, who is described as "a fine-looking, full-formed woman," on the morning of the 16th instant entered a livery stable at San Jose and demanded to see an hostler named Charles Jones. Her manner was aggressive; she had blood in her eyes and a pistol in a convenient pocket. Jones was discreetly absent, and after informing the gaping crowd which had assembled that Jones had drugged and assaulted her daughter, she returned to her saloon, where she subsequently permitted a reporter to interview her. She gave that individual a great deal of personal history. She said that her name was originally Mrs. Peck; that Peck died and she married a man named Oscar George. She was divorced from George some years ago, and married Swinford. She had some daughters which she had endeavored, heretofore successfully, to bring up respectably, and although she kept a saloon she had endeavored to so conduct it as not to sully her daughters' purity. On the morning of the 15th instant, Jones asked her daughter Clara Peck, aged 16, to take a buggy ride, to which the mother objected, as she expected a visit from some young men and wanted Clara at home to do the agreeable. The daughter promised to be gone but a couple of hours, and thus gained the mother's consent. They did not return, by a large majority, but stayed away all day and all night. The pair were found at a place called Smith's Creek by two friends of the family who were sent to search for them, but the girl was drunk and rebellious and would not return home with them. Mrs. Swinford, on being informed of their whereabouts, started in a buggy for Smith's Creek in the early morning, and on the road she met Jones and Clara, who were returning home. She halted, stood upright in the buggy, and drawing a very nice nickel-plated British bulldog revolver, presented it at Jones and thus kept him quiet while she expressed her opinion of him. She confessed that she used language which is usually represented in print by — — — — —, but excuses herself on the ground that she was very much excited. Jones promised to drive the girl home, which he did, and then spent the balance of the day in dodging the irate Sophronia, who did not give up her search for him until she learned that he had skipped to San Francisco. Clara confided to her mother that Jones made her drunk, and that she was not responsible for subsequent occurrences. The young reporter who interviewed Mrs. Swinford is solemnly convinced that if Mr. Jones had not shaken the dust of San Jose from his feet, he would ere now be in the place of future punishment to which such scoundrels as he are supposed to be condemned.

THE WIFE'S STORY.

A reporter of the Los Angeles Herald has been interviewing Mrs. Josiah Smith, (now confined in jail) regarding the recent murder of her son. Following is the interview:

Reporter—Mrs. Smith, you are here to answer to the charge of assisting in the murder of your own son? Have you any objections to stating to me what impelled you to this act?

Mrs. Smith—I had nothing to do with it, sir. If I could have prevented it I would. My husband told me about an hour before he did it that the Lord demanded a sacrifice of us, and that our boy had to die. I begged him to spare my boy; I cried, and besought him to consider well what he was about to do, but all the answer he made me was that Jesus Christ had died for us, and the Lord had told him that our son had to die for His sake.

Reporter—What did your husband do after he had refused to yield to your request?

Mrs. S.—He called my boy out of the house and told him that he had to die for our Savior. The boy asked him if the Lord had commanded us to starve and Josiah told him "Yes." Then the little fellow knelt down and I knelt down by his side, and his father stood up. He raised the knife, looked hard in the boy's face and then drove the knife into his breast. Oh! It was awful, once it was done!

Reporter—What do you mean? Do you mean to say that the slaying of one of your children did not seem awful to you?

Mrs. S.—No! I felt bad a little, but when he told me what he was going to do it did not seem to me so terrible. It was only when I saw the boy fall over and a great stream of blood come spurting from his body that I felt how terrible it all was.

[Here the woman went on to narrate the circumstances of the death and burial in almost the same words as her husband, which account was recently published.]

Reporter—Had your husband ever been a religious man? Had he ever shown any symptoms of religious insanity?

Mrs. S.—No, sir. He was not a religious man. He believed in God, but did not follow any religion. He took to reading the Bible a great deal a few weeks before this all happened and used often to read me all that they say in the Bible about the sacrifices to the Lord. I begged him not to read them so much, but they seemed to have a terrible fascination to him. He would read over and over again about the Lord commanding Abraham to sacrifice his son Isaac, and how He sent a ram to be the victim. He got to talking to his old father, who is now 78 years old, and he said to him: "I am the Lord."

His old father argued with him when he saw the way he was going, but it was no use and my husband would go on saying that he had God in him.

Reporter—How long have you been married to this man? Has he been a good husband to you?

Mrs. S.—This coming December will be sixteen years. I have no complaint to make against him, for he has been as good a husband to me as a woman could want. He was always kind to all of us and did all that he could to keep us from want. But just before he did it, he said that we must all fast and he would not let us eat anything. The boy asked him frequently if God had ordered us all to starve and he always said He had. If it had not been that my head was sort of dazed and if the boy had not given in at once, I might have prevented the killing, though he was mighty bent on it.

Reporter—How did your husband's talk on this subject of sacrifices affect you?

Mrs. S.—Well, I used to feel that if the Lord commanded me to starve or kill people, I would not do it. But when he would talk to me and persuade me that a good wife should think as her husband did, I got so as to think that what he said must be right.

Reporter—Do you never think of your murdered child?

Mrs. S.—Oh, yes, sir; I often do. I am always thinking of him, and I can hear him at all times asking to be brought in and laid on his bed, and begging for a little water before he died. I have his face before me all the time and I hear his voice in my ears day and night.

Love in the Country.

Soon the season will be here when the rural beau takes his sweetheart and treats her to gum drops, oysters or ice cream. After rambling about all day, the lovers return home at night happy, but thoroughly worn out and perhaps sick. On all such occasions, a gentle dose of Swayne's Pills should be taken to insure a healthy system for the coming day. They prevent the approach of illness, and stimulate the digestive organs to a natural condition.

Hoppin.

As Messrs. Rowland, Kays, Johnston and Wm. Lacy were returning from their visit to the oil wells on Mr. Rowland's ranch last Sunday, an unfortunate accident happened, which resulted in the breaking of Mr. Lacy's leg at the ankle. It appears that at a bad incline in the road one of the horses shied, which threw the wagon in which these gentlemen were driving on its side, precipitating its occupants to the ground. All were more or less shaken up and bruised, but Mr. Lacy found that his leg had been broken by the fall. He was brought to town and his leg splintered and was yesterday suffering little or no pain.

Hon. J. D. Hines, presiding in Judge Sepulveda's department of the Superior Court, yesterday approved the official bond of John W. Broaded, County Treasurer-elect, with the following sureties: I. W. Butter.

Mr. Robert Hall, butter inspector in Ohio, says: "When butter is properly churned, both as to time and temperature, it becomes firm with very little working, and it is tenacious; but its most desirable state is waxy, when it is easily moulded into any shape, and may be drawn out a considerable length without breaking. It is then styled gilt-edged. It is only in this state that butter possesses that rich, nutty flavor and smell, and shows up a rich, golden-yellow color, which imparts so high a degree of pleasure in eating it, and which increases its value manifold. It is not always necessary, when it smells sweet, to taste butter in judging it. The smooth, unctious feeling, in rubbing a little between the finger and thumb, expresses at once its rich quality; the nutty smell and rich aroma indicate a similar taste, and the bright golden, glistening, cream colored surface shows its height of cleanliness. It may be necessary at times to use the tier, or even use it until you become an expert in testing by taste, smell and rubbing."

Plant Figs.

Let us urge the planting of figs in variety and plentifully in all homesteads in California where the fig will mature. Children seven years old can plant cuttings of fig trees that will bless them and the older members of their families bountifully when 10 and 12 years of age. It pains us to ride over one of God's most fruitful countries in the dry and thirsty season and find only one place in many where people have blessed themselves with tree of any kind. Thousands are shadeless and without fruit in our great valleys who can in three or five years have plenty of bearing fig trees by sticking a few cuttings in the ground this fall and taking a little pains only with these sources of healthy food. Plant fig trees!—[Rural Press.

The Congress that has been sitting in Saragossa, Spain, to discuss the best means of combating the phylloxera has been most interesting. The insect has caused extensive ravages in the north of Portugal and the provinces of Estramadura, Malaga and Catalona, in Spain, despite the severe legislation which enforces the isolation of infested vineyards, the destruction of tainted plants, and other precautions. The opinion of the wine growers was divided on the question of American vines and on the remedies for the phylloxera. France, since the phylloxera has ravaged half of her vineyards, has imported since 1877 from 87,000,000 to 100,000,000 gallons of Spanish wines, chiefly for her own home consumption. She only exports to England a little over 7,000,000 gallons, and to the rest of Europe and America hardly three times that quantity.

Sure Cure for Corns.

A. C., who has tried it, is authority for the following: Take one-fourth cup of strong vinegar, crumb finely into it some bread. Let stand half an hour, or until it softens into a good poultice. Then apply, on retiring at night. In the morning the soreness will be gone, and the corn can be picked out. If the corn is a very obstinate one, it may require two or more applications to effect a cure.

Some graceless thief entered the Congregational Church at Santa Cruz the other night and carried off a green worsted table cover, a handsome vase, and an ebony flowerstand. He had made a comfortable bed on the floor by piling up pew-cushions, and left behind him a lot of cigarettes, part of a bottle of whiskey and a pile of cobblestones the size of a man's hat.

OILING WAGON WHEELS.

Allan E. Smith reports to the Farmers' Review an experience in oiling wagon wheels and other woodwork: "I have a wagon of which, six years ago, the felloes shrunk so the tires became loose. I gave it a good coat of hot oil, and every year since it has had a coat of oil or paint, sometimes both. The tires are tight yet, and they have not been set for eight or nine years. Many farmers think that as soon as wagon felloes begin to shrink they must go at once to a blacksmith shop and get the tires set. Instead of doing that, which is often a damage to the wheels, causing them to dish, if they will get some linseed oil and heat it boiling hot, and give the felloes all the oil they can take, it will fill them up to their usual size and tighten the tire. After the oil a coat of paint is a good thing to keep them from shrinking, and also to keep out the water. If you do not wish to go to the trouble of mixing paint, you can heat the oil and tie a rag to a stick and swab them over as long as they will take oil. A brush is more convenient to use, but a swab will answer if you do not wish to buy a brush. It is quite a saving of time and money to look after the woodwork of farm machinery. Alternate wetting and drying injures and causes the best wood soon to decay and lose its strength unless kept well painted. It pays to keep a little oil on hand, to oil fork handles, rakes, neckyokes, whiffletrees, and any of the small tools on the farm that are more or less exposed."

A man was carrying a coon he had caught when he met three little boys in the road. All of them said excitingly and at once, "Mister, give me that coon, give me that coon, Mister?"

"Well, boys, I'll tell you what I will do. If you will tell me the party you belong to and why, I'll give it to the boy who gives the best reason for his faith." "I'm a Republican, because that party saved the Union," said one. "I'm a Greenbacker, because that party is in favor of plenty of money." When the time of the third boy came, he said: "I'm a Democrat, 'case I want the coon."

So little is heard about the industries of Tennessee nowadays that most people will be surprised to learn that, while two years ago hardly a pound of dried fruit was shipped from Chattanooga, the dealers in that city alone have handled so far this year over 750,000 pounds. Knoxville and Nashville are going into the business extensively, and lesser places more modestly.

WHITE MOUNTAIN CAKE.—One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, one-half cup of corn starch, one cup of flour, the whites of six eggs, a little vanilla, two teaspoonsful of baking powder. Bake in layers. Frosting for above: Take the whites of five eggs, twenty tablespoons sifted sugar beaten very light; a little vanilla. Spread between layers and outside of cake.

TOMATO CATSUP.—Skin one peck of ripe tomatoes; put into a kettle and boil them, then strain through a seive. Return to the kettle, take off the scum that rises, then add one teacup of brown sugar, one-third of a teacupful of salt, a dessertspoonful of cloves, the same of cayenne pepper, and cook till quite thick, then add one and a half pints of vinegar. Keep well stirred toward the last.

TOMATO TOAST.—Run a quart of stewed ripe tomatoes through a colander, place in a porcelain stew-pan, season with butter, pepper and salt and sugar to taste; cut slices of bread thin, brown on both sides, butter and lay on a platter, and just as the bell rings for tea on Sunday add a pint of good sweet cream to the stewed tomatoes, and pour them over the toast.

ADAMS, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1882.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., Gentlemen:—Having used a good deal of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with great success, I thought I would let you know what it has done for me. Two years ago I had as speedy a colt as was ever raised in Jefferson County. When I was breaking him, he kicked over the cross bar and got fast and tore one of his hind legs all to pieces. I employed the best farriers, but they all said he was spoiled. He had a very large thoroughpin, and I used two bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the bunch entirely off, and he sold afterwards for $1,800 (dollars). I have used it for bone spavins and wind galls, and it has always cured completely and left the leg smooth.
It is a splendid medicine for rheumatism. I have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the works. I was in Watertown, in Kendall's drug store, in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent there. I tried to buy it, but could not; they said if I would write to you that you would send me one. I wish you would, and I will do you all the good I can.
Very respectfully, E. S. LYMAN.
