THE SEASONS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

(Southern California Christian Advocate.)

While the year in Southern California shows the same general divisions as in the States east of the Rocky Mountains, the causes at work as described in the last issue of the Advocate as modify and change them that only a nominal resemblance remains. The old names are given, but their forces have changed. The winter of the States is in one sense the winter of Southern California, that is, as the season of the lowest average temperature. Yet to the inhabitant of New England or of the Middle States it means a temperature far below the freezing point with vegetation dead and the land white with snow, while to the Southern Californian it means cool, pleasant days in the valleys with snow-capped mountains in the background while the sun looks down upon a land green with the new grass which comes to the earth with the early rains, while the orange orchards are tinging with the rich yellow of ripening fruit. A mistaken idea seems to exist throughout the East as to the character of the winter rains. This mistake seems to originate in the vivid descriptions of the tropical wet season as found in school geographies. Anywhere from the middle of October to the middle of November we expect the first rain. A gentle south wind sets in, clouds begin to drift across the sky and bank up along the mountain sides, then comes the rain, and after two or three days of broken rainy weather with a rainfall of probably two or three inches in all, fair weather returns. Within a few days the surface of the ground begins to swell with the sprouting of millions of seeds that have been lying dormant during the dry summer, and then as far as you can see over the broad plains, the earth puts on a coat of the richest green.

After a few weeks of warm sunshine, with an atmosphere cleared of the summer haze until the mountains a hundred miles away stand out against the sky like hills that are only a morning's drive from your door, another rain of two or three days' duration comes, or possibly in its stead occasional days of broken showers.

About Christmas we expect what we call a winter storm; a south gale beats along the coast, great cloud banks sail steadily across the sky, and as the wind dies away the rain begins, and for a week or ten days each afternoon and night give more or less of a steady rain, with the mornings overcast but not rainy. When the storm is over, it has brought probably six to eight inches of rain. This storm is generally followed by a month of almost continuously clear weather, when vegetation fairly leaps in its rapid growth. The storm which brought verdure to the valleys gave snow to the mountains, which now for hundreds of miles stand a great white wall against the sky. This is the stored-up water for the next season's irrigation. It is nature's reservoir whence comes the summer flow to the rivers.

Some time in February the December storm is repeated, and then lighter rains of two or three days' duration follow at intervals of several weeks until the close of the rainy season in April or May.

About the time the rains cease, the spring fogs begin to creep in from the sea over the lower-lying plains of the coast like as described in the last issue of the Advocate. These fogs are to vegetation a practical continuation of the rainy season. After a warm clear day the fog begins to creep in about sunset, which rests over the land like a great wet blanket during the night, clearing away shortly after sunrise. These fogs are warm and refreshing, so that it is pleasant to go out and drive in them. The fogs do not reach the higher places back from the sea, and the foothills along the base of the mountains. At this season invalids from the East who are sensitive to fog make their homes in the towns and health resorts away from the coast.

The summer is generally cool and pleasant. Linen and cotton clothing are seldom worn. The morning may be warm until ten o'clock, but then there is a breeze sets in, and the temperature is pleasant for walking or driving. At night a blanket is necessary for comfort. Two or three times during the summer a hot spell may come, when for several days the mercury at mid-day may reach 100 degrees, but generally the third evening the fog which has ceased during the hot spell rolls in again, and the heat is over. The reading of the thermometer which I have given is for Los Angeles city, eighteen miles inland. By the sea the heat would be less by 10 to 15 degrees; in the interior valleys greater by 5 to 10 degrees. In September the nights begin to grow cooler, but the middle of the day is still warm.

About this time the fogs often grow lighter, and during September and October the atmosphere is marked by a dryness which is very noticeable. Then come the early winter rains again.

The Way of the Transgressor.

NEW YORK, March 3.—A commercial reporter who has been up to Sing Sing tells how some of the more notorious inmates are getting along. Ferdinand Ward is running a little steam printing press that prints labels for cigars and tobacco packages, and notices to be posted about the prison. His mind is not on his work. His keepers say he worries all the time. Ex-Alderman Jahne is wrapping up tobacco packages for convicts. He has but one companion in the room with him. Alderman McQuade is counting shirts in the laundry department. Buddensieck, the "skin" builder, is too old and feeble to work, and spends most of his time in the hall. Occasionally he trundles a wheelbarrow around the yard, and does a little cleaning. Cowles, the book-keeper of Claflin & Co., who killed a hackman in a Broadway saloon last summer, is keeping books in the shoe shop. Brockway, the notorious forger, spends his time chiefly in the dispensary, where he reads alternately works on comparative anatomy and theology.

DISINFECTANTS.

The State Board of Health recommend the following disinfectants:

Roll sulphur (brimstone), for fumigation. This is a cheap and efficient substance for fumigating rooms; it is positively destructive to disease germs, when efficiently used.

Sulphate of iron (copperas) dissolved in the proportion of one and a half pounds to the gallon of water, is a cheap and reliable deodorizer and antiseptic for privies, cesspools, sewers, etc.

Sulphate of zinc, in the proportion of four ounces of sulphate and two ounces of common salt to the gallon of water, is efficient and harmless for clothing, bed linen, blankets, etc. It should be used boiling hot, and the articles to be disinfected plunged into it and thoroughly boiled.

Corrosive sublimate, in the proportion of a quarter of an ounce to the gallon, is an unsurpassed germicide and disinfectant, but has the disadvantage of being excessively poisonous, and therefore dangerous for general use.

Carbolic acid is of uncertain strength, is expensive, and experience has shown that it must be employed in comparatively large quantities to be of any use. It is also liable, by its strong color, to give a false sense of security.

HOW TO USE DISINFECTANTS.

1—In the Sick Room. The most available agents are fresh air and cleanliness. The clothing, towels, bed linen, etc., should, on removal from the patient, be placed in a tub of the zinc solution boiling hot if possible. All discharges from the patient should either be received in vessels containing the copperas or corrosive sublimate solution, or if this is unpracticable, should be covered with the solution. Unnecessary furniture, especially that which is stuffed, carpets, hangings, should be removed from the room at the outset if possible; otherwise they should remain for fumigation and treatment.

2—Fumigation with sulphur is the only practicable method of disinfecting the house. For this purpose the rooms to be disinfected must be vacated. Heavy clothing, blankets, bedding and other articles which cannot be treated with the zinc solution, should be opened and exposed during fumigation, as directed below. Close the room as tightly as possible, stopping up every crevice and keyhole; place the sulphur in iron pans supported upon bricks placed in washtubs containing a little water, set it on fire with alcohol or kerosene sprinkled upon it, and allow the room to remain closed twenty-four hours. For a room ten feet square at least two pounds of sulphur will be required; for larger rooms proportionately larger quantities will be necessary.

3—Premises, cellars, yards, stables, gutters, privies, cesspools, watercloasets, sewers, drains, should be liberally treated with the copperas solution; it is cheap and effective. The copperas solution may be easily prepared by hanging a basket containing about sixty pounds of copperas in a barrel of water.

4—Body and Bedclothing.—It is best to burn all articles which have been in contact with persons sick of infectious and contagious diseases. Articles too valuable to be destroyed should be treated as follows: Cotton, linen, flannels, blankets, etc., should be treated with the boiling hot zinc solution introduce piece by piece; secure thorough wetting, and boil for half an hour. Furs, silk, heavy woolen clothing, bedcovers and beds, which cannot be thus treated with the zinc solution, should be hung in the room during fumigation, their surfaces fully exposed, and their pockets turned inside out; afterwards they should be hung in the open air—beaten and shaken. Pillows, beds, stuffed mattresses, upholstered furniture, etc., should be cut open, the contents spread out and thoroughly fumigated. Carpets are best fumigated on the floor, but should afterwards be removed to the open air and thoroughly shaken and beaten.

Preventive Medicine.

Dr. C. R. Illingworth thus writes in the Medical Press: One of our great aims as physicians is to prevent disease; another is to cut short its course when developed. Our power in these directions finds full scope among that class of disorders now generally recognized as depending upon the reception, growth and development in the tissues of micro-organic life in one shape or another. By the continual suppression of the growth and development of these forms of cell life, we may, indeed, hope at length to erase the names of the diseases they cause from the category of those "ills that flesh is heir to." The diseases I refer to are scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, rheumatic fever, chicken-pox, small pox, syphilis, hydrophobia, yellow fever, et hoc genus omne.

The germicide remedy I have found to answer as a specific and prophylactic in such diseases is the bimoslide of mercury given in solution of potassic iodide. In all cases of scarlatina or measles occurring in one member of a family, I put the rest upon preventive medicine. Thus, for children I prescribe as follows: Bichloride of mercury solution, one and a half ounces; iodide of potassium, one drachm; ammonio-citrate of iron, one drachm; syrup, one and a half ounces; water to eight ounces. One or two teaspoonfuls to be given three times a day.

Girls, Cut This Out.

Rev. Sam Jones declares that "the best way to kill a man is to kill him with love." Girls, if you wish to do execution in the battle of life, remember this valuable hint. Paste it in your theater hats, ladies, and take the latter off once in awhile to read the words of the inspired preacher.

JACK AND JILL.

It was too funny for anything, but we were married. It didn't concern the world in the least, but it was a matter of no small moment to Jack and myself, as we came out of the little box of a parsonage, that we were actually man and wife. Dr. Pitcher, the Lutheran dominie, eyed us sharply as he came into the cozy study. How well I remember that morning! The sunshine fell across the window garden, with its fragrant flowers, and made a golden spot on the carpet at Jack's feet. In front of me was a Beatrice Di Cenci, after Guido, on the wall, and the sad, pathetic face haunts me yet. It almost seemed to speak to us, saying: "Children, you are so foolish!" Dr. Pitcher evidently thought so too, for he was a bachelor, and questioned Jack quite a while, but Jack was manly and frank, and he had a letter of introduction from good old Dr. Clark, who had known him from a boy, and so our dominie was satisfied.

It was very solemn after all. The serving man and maid came in as witnesses, and I nudged Jack as they looked at us in astonishment, as much as to say: "What do these children want to commit such foolishness for?" But we answered the questions, we took each other's hand, the good doctor prayed so tenderly, as if his own past had toned his words, and we went out into the sunshine, past the gray church, one, to climb the hill of life together.

Jack kissed me in the shadow of the tower, although I told him he shouldn't on to public street, and we turned our faces toward home. Jack was 20 and I was 16. No wonder you grow solemn and shake your heads, you older ones, and I believe the young folks will envy us now, but not by and by, perhaps, for life is a tough thing, and the hill for Jack and Jill was no exception. But we commenced to climb with light hearts; we were strong and young, and we loved each other. "Until death do part" did not seem a very hard thing to answer to from the doctor's lips.

We had four rooms to ourselves—a little bird-house of a tenement—kitchen, parlor and two bedrooms; yet what in the world we wanted of an extra bedroom one could hardly tell, as we were both orphans in this Western city, far away from any one we knew.

We were alone in the world, we loved each other, why not climb the steep hand in hand? Jack worked in a great flouring mill; his day began at 7 and closed at 6; what nice long evenings we had to study and read and dream! To be sure, Jack had only $40 a month, and had many sums in addition and subtraction to keep out of debt, but he said I didn't grow poor, and my Dutch ancestors certainly would not have been ashamed of me in that regard. I was accustomed to take my hair down at night to please him—it was blonde, the color of gold—and he called me "the Mermaid," so covered was I by the meshes of light. I was just a little proud of my hair, like a silly child, and used to tell Jack, jokingly, "If worst came to worst, I could sell that for bread." One evening our landlord came in, just as I had allowed the last coil to fall. He inquired of Jack if I was a younger sister. "My wife, Mr. Lane," said Jack, smiling. I thought it too bad that I looked so young, but my cheeks would be red, and I was as plump as a partridge.

But that first year sobered us a little; we found fate was no sentimentalist, and hard facts must be faced and conquered, if possible. I looked after the house, did the marketing, and planned to see how far twenty dollars a month would go in providing our food. The first month I spent thirty, which made Jack look sober, but the next I did better, until finally I was able with ease to do what I desired. Jack and I were determined to lay by something if we went hungry; we had dreams for the future, which we hardly breathed to each other. Of course we did not live in a very ample style; pastry and cake were not always on our table. I kept at a few things until I could do them well, Jack was patient, I had a good cookbook, was blessed with common sense, and kept bravely at it.

Perhaps you are quite tired of all this recital, but Jack and I lived it all, with hearty faith in God and each other. We had but little, but from that little we expected every ounce of happiness. I had a small library from my father, and when the curtains were dropped, the stand drawn out, and the lamp lighted—our "student," the one luxury we indulged in—the little kitchen was not a place to be despised by people like us. We read aloud in turn, a dictionary on the table for reference, and an encyclopedia in one volume, which we prized very highly. We found the reading aloud a good exercise, and we acquired valuable information. We went through Macaulay in this way—his essays and history, some of the British dramatists contemporary with Shakespeare, particularly delighting in Christopher Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus," Homer's "Iliad," in Bryant's translation, Mommsen's "History of Rome." Oh, we were very literary, Jack and I, that first winter! We had some hot discussions relative to the merits of the old English authors, and then with all, we took German. We could do the grammar about our work, there were many Germans in the mill, and we did get on quite a little in that throat distorting language.

You think it was all sunshine; if it had been, I should not be telling this story to you. You hope Jack never broke his crown, "but he did, all the same," as a little sprite at my elbow says about her playthings. Love, thank God, can last not only until death, but beyond; but the rainy days are quite necessary in the journey to make us thankful for the sunshine, if for nothing more. We were to have our share of dark days, but no one could take away from us the happy remembrance of that year of work and pleasure.

One day Jack came home in high spirits, the mill would stop a day for repairs. "Jill, we can have a holiday, and we'll have a lark." Our first day together since we came out of the little parsonage; how pleased we were, like two children let loose from school! We arose the next morning with the sun, we did the work together, and, arrayed in our best clothes, left our dear little home, with the sunshine flooding the tiny kitchen, and "Dick" in his cage singing as if he would split his throat in ecstacy. How happy we were! The people we met all seemed friends, and we danced along like two kittens on a frolic. Jack had proposed that we go to a city twenty miles away and spend the day. We reached the station in good time, and the express in half an hour left us at our destination and steamed away, hissing like some wild creature mad with fury. The people must have thought us half demented, for we raced about, into the book stores, looking at pictures, pricing fabrics at the dry goods houses, and altogether behaving shockingly for old, staid married people. But you must remember that Jack had only reached his majority, and Jill was but just 17. Ah, well, what a red letter day it was, with its autumn glories, the markets full o' blushing fruit, a glamour on everything! It seemed to Jack and I an enchanted land—everything was free to us; we could see and enjoy it all. We got our lunch at a little Dutch parlor, with a motherly attendant who evidently regarded us as two babes who had escaped our parents for a day. She accepted a ridiculously low sum for it all, and her broad, good natured face smiled all over when we went out. Every moment was just packed full of solid fun. Jack and I were speaking of it yesterday, after returning from Mrs. Lord's fashionable reception, how perfectly happy we were, and how it ended. But I must not anticipate.

In the early dusk, just as the lights began to twinkle along the streets and the people were trudging home from their toil, as the west was hung with flame, we were flying out toward the city where we lived! And how glad we were to return, just as eager as we were to leave in the morning; I thought how the kitchen would look, and what I would prepare for tea in honor of our outing.

Well, we were coming into the city, a little tired, but satisfied with our day. We were on the evening express, and it was always a scene of confusion when the train got in; two tracks on either side had their trains, bells were ringing, steam escaping with that hiss and swish of that is so deafening. It was quite dark, save as the headlights of the engines glared on us like huge red eyes; the crowd was great, and one was almost bewildered in the glare and noise. We had found our way out, Jack and I—poor Jack! but I had carelessly left my bag on our seat. It was Jack's present, and he rushed back after it. The rest is a blank, but I learned afterward that our train was late; Jack was coming toward me, a manly, handsome face, when there was a rush, a roar, glancing lights, and when I looked again Jack was down at my feet, white, limp and senseless, but, thank God, not dead. By some mistake the western express had passed without warning; he was past the rails, but the baggage car had struck him and hurled him, fortunately, away from the train. The bag was in his clenched hand, but I thought he had left me forever. The crowd surged in, a physician appeared, and he was borne into the depot. He revived a little, then went off in a swoon that seemed like death itself. They got him home on a mattress, and the worst was known; he had a compound fracture of the limb; the bones were set, and I was left alone. Not until the kind doctor had gone and the unknown friends, did I realize a little how our holiday had ended.

There was the kitchen with our table pushed against the wall, but I had prepared no tea, for Jack lay there so deathly pale, save a red spot on each cheek, and he did not know me. Oh, Jack! Will you die and leave your little Jill all alone? And then the tears came and I had a refreshing cry. After that I saw my work before me and prepared for it, praying that the good Lord would not leave me quite alone.

This was the case. Here was Jack confined to his bed perhaps for three months, possibly a cripple for life; he could earn nothing for the present; we had saved one hundred and twenty dollars, our rent was ten dollars a month; Jack had tumbled down and broken not his crown, but his leg—would Jill come tumbling after? I thought so for those first few hours, and then it came to me. What if he lay there in the last long sleep, and I could not wait on him any more? And I fell on my knees with sobs of thankfulness, ashamed of repining.

How quickly we adjust ourselves to sober fact! For two weeks Jack had a high fever, and much of the time he talked of that bag, and how sorry he was he could not get it. Every day he seemed to be sinking lower and lower, and the old doctor eyed me wistfully as he went out. I knew what he was thinking of—how young she is to be left alone. One night, after two weeks of almost ceaseless watching, I fell asleep by his side, my head barried in his arms. I was utterly wearied in that dead stupor that comes from long wakefulness. After midnight something roused me, the moon was looking in upon us, and the light made Jack's face look deathly enough. His hand about my hair had roused me. I felt his pulse; it was going down rapidly. God was good to me, had I slept on it would have been too late to have helped him. I remember what the doctor said, "When the fever turns, give him more brandy, or he will sink away." All night I fed him every half hour, the brandy and water, praying that I might be kept awake. With the morning sun he looked up. "Jill," he said—the first rational word he had uttered since he left me to rush into the car for that miserable bag—and then, goose as I was, I fainted dead away. When I came to myself Jack was in a natural sleep; he had roused but a moment, and then in utter weakness dropped off to sleep.

But the worst was passed; he began to mend rapidly. "The Lord has remembered you," said the doctor, solemnly. The next day a friend took the burden from me a little, and I hardly knew what was passing for several days. But it was a long way out of the woods yet. How slowly it was, after all, although Dr. Low said he gained wonderfully. Two months passed, and he could sit up but a short time in a day, but Jack had been working beyond his strength for months, and his recovery required time.

Half of our money was gone, and the future looked dark, but Jack was hopeful and cheerful, and I sat and read to him hour after hour, and we discussed the old familiar subjects again; all the time I was racking my brains to devise some means to eke out our fast diminishing purse. When four months had gone, Jack could limp about a little, but how thin and pale he was! We had just twenty dollars left, and that only by the strictest economy, and because the doctor would take nothing as a fee.

I had my hair down in the old way one evening; our landlord had just been in for the rent; there was but ten dollars left. I had ventured to broach our condition to Jack; I had tried not to trouble him with our financial matters. "Your hair is worth more to me than gold," he said, as he let it fall through his white hands. And then it flashed over me—the old joke—that I would sell my hair, if worst came to worst. The next day a neighbor stayed with Jack for a while, and I went out on business. I went into several hair stores, and when I came out of the last one I had forty dollars, but my golden hair, a yard in length, was gone. I cried a little all the way home, but "for Jack" I said. How he stared when I took off my bonnet! "Jill, Jill!" he cried, and his voice broke. "I had to do it, Jack; we must live, and I got $40 for it." But he turned to the wall and did not speak, only the sobs shook his frame, and he a man, but he loved the golden hair.

"Jack," I whispered a half hour later, "don't you love me a little without the hair?"

"Oh, Jill," he cried "to think you were obliged to do it!"

On the way home I had passed an art store, and some paintings in oil had attracted my attention. I had taken lessons—my father had been an artist—why could not I revive my skill and earn something now? I grudged the money for the material, but nothing venture nothing have, and so I began. I had some talent, I knew, and then Jack's pale face was an inspiration. It was at the time when rich people were crazy to have their china decorated by hand. My father's patient lessons were not forgotten, necessity gave me skill, and I surpassed myself. Dr. Low, on hearing of my desire and seeing some of my work, got an order from one of his rich patients. I succeeded so well with that that other orders followed; we would not suffer after all. The good God was pitiful—He cared a little for Jack and me.

I did not tumble after Jack, as the nursery jingle has it; my crown was safe, although bereft of its wealth of hair. Jack was well at last, with only a little hitch in his gait. He got a position in the iron works, and we bridged the chasm of pain and were started up the hill again. He limped a little, and I looked like a boy with my shorn head, but love had lasted, we had each other and were thankful.

"My brave Jill!" he said, when we sat down the first night after he was at work again, and he eyed me fondly across the little stand; and then coming round to my chair, "Sweet Jill," as he laid his love upon my lips.

"Don't be foolish, Jack," and I blushed as I did the first time he kissed me years ago.

We are old married people now—that is, if 26 and 30 can be called old—we have left the dear little tenement, prosperity came fast at last—Jack invented something that brought large returns. We have a house of our own, and more than $20 a month I can expend now. A little Jack and Jill scamper about the floor, and "Dick," the bird, is getting old. Jack and I have had many outings since that first—none that we enjoyed more, until its sad finale—none that brought its terror. We have had our trials—who does not? Jack says "my hair is more beautiful than ever," and other nonsense that is positively foolish for staid people like us. Though the honeymoon has lasted through all the years, the labors of to-day has brought no truer affection than we had in that old room, where life and death fought for Jack.

HAMBURG FIGS.

Probably as much misery comes from habitual constipation as from any derangement of the functions of the body, and it is difficult to cure for the reason that no one likes to take the medicine that is usually prescribed. Hamburg Figs were prepared to obviate this difficulty, and they will be found effective as well as pleasant to the taste of women and children. 25 cents.

ANOTHER MENACE TO LABOR.

Now that the restriction act and the Democratic party are in a fair way to solve the Chinese problem in its relation to labor, another danger springs up which may yet become the means of furnishing political platforms with a plank upon which ambitious politicians can walk into office. But we point with pride to the fact that this time it is not the Pacific Coast that can be charged with the introduction of the disturbing element into the field of labor, the cause of that act lies this time in the heart of the solid South, from which we expected better things. The case in brief is this: At Kingston, Madison county, Kentucky, lives J. B. Parker, who is described as a substantial farmer; but who is undoubtedly a fiend masquerading in the guise of a granger, who has successfully trained a number of monkeys to work in his hemp fields. (We may here remark that hemp is used in making rope, and rope is used to hang people like Mr. Parker.) The monkeys break and prepare the hemp for market, and do the work more quickly and better than negroes, and at one-fourth the cost. Only four months of time was required to train the animals. It seems that Mr. Parker has a brother who, when at Cape Town, South Africa, saw monkeys at work in the way described, and sent seven of them to the Kentucky Parker, who is so pleased with the work of the animals that he has sent for a lot more. Time it will be seen that the possible rallying cry of the future will be "The Monkeys Must Go!"

CHAGRINED CHEVALIERS.

Names and titles are sometimes misleading, and are the cause of much confusion and embarrassment. Thus we read that some thieves recently entered the office of the Minister of Finance in Paris, and the only things of value they found therein were some postage stamps. As a general thing, gentlemen who earn an honest living by larcenous industry, or industrious larceny, are not educated up to that standard which enables them to grasp the subtleties of language; and therefore the disappointed burglars in the instance referred to were misled by the title of their intended victim, and supposed that a Minister of Finance was really rich picking. Of course, the readers of the GAZETTE know better, and would not be apt to make the same mistake.

A conviction a case of the Dutch taking Holland has occurred in the Republican city of Sacramento which has elected a Republican Mayor. The one thing remarkable about this, however, is that, though a Republican city, it has for several years elected a Democratic Mayor, for no other reason than because he was an honest and good man. This same Mayor was a candidate for re-election, but as evil communications corrupt good manners, his defeat was doubtless caused by the presence of the legislators, who apparently have an official antipathy against honesty and goodness.

Medical science, as the GAZETTE recently remarked, is advancing with wonderful strides. It may be said to have reached the climax when the doctors can take out a man's kidneys, clean them nicely and put them back in their place to resume their natural functions. This recent case is supplemented by another where a sightless eye was taken from a man and the eye of a rabbit successfully transplanted in its place. If the profession could find a way to transplant the temper of an angel into the system of a vixen, a grateful people would rise up and call them blessed.

As a hint is mentioned the fact that over one hundred Winchester rifles were ordered by one house last week, and if the Legislature adjourns without effecting any relief from the self-evident partisan decisions of a riparian Judge of an adjoining county, water will be turned into the canals and maintained there by force. "Beware the wrath of a patient man."—Fresno Republican.

Well, the Legislature has adjourned without giving the relief asked for. Let the line of battle form at once, so that the cruel war will be over before the wane of the irrigating season.

It costs four millions of dollars a year to support the Royal family of England, and there is a growing feeling in that little kingdom that the people are paying too much for very indifferent service. There are several millions of American statesmen who would govern England far better than good Queen Victoria does for a great deal less money, and it is no wonder the Radical element in that country are beginning to growl loudly and deeply.

An action, in which the plaintiff will have the sympathy of many victims of the same fraud, has been commenced in Santa Clara county against a nurseryman who sold trees to the plaintiff six years ago, representing them as a well-known variety of cherry, but after six years of cultivation the fruit proved to be of an inferior and unmarketable quality. An honest nurseryman is the noblest work of God.

The death of Henry Ward Beecher on Tuesday, of paralysis, removes a remarkable man from the activities of life. A bold thinker, a peerless orator and an original preacher, his like will probably never be seen again. The grave should cover the unproved questionable acts of his career, and he should be remembered only for his talents and the good he put them to.

The California Aerial Steam Navigation Company has been organized in San Francisco. This balloonatic idea has taken the place of the perpetual motion craze. It only costs about $20 to incorporate.

THE BOND BILL.

There are so many projects mooted for the advancement and progress of Anaheim that the continued solicitation of subscriptions is a serious tax upon the more liberal-minded and progressive of our people. The measure known as Crandall's bond bill, enacted by the Legislature and now a law, was hoped to be a relief, it being generally supposed that it would enable the citizens of any incorporated town to hold an election and vote upon the question of levying a tax for a measure like purchasing depot grounds for a new railroad, for instance. We are inclined to think, however, that the restrictions in the bill would prevent a tax for any such purpose. The bill provides that when the legislative branch of any city, town or municipal corporation, incorporated under the laws of the State, shall determine that any public building, sewer or other improvement is needed by the city, and that the cost is too great to be met by the ordinary revenues of the corporation, it may by a three-fourths vote in favor of the ordinance, said ordinance to be approved by the Mayor or executive, call a special election and submit a proposition for incurring indebtedness, to the voters in the corporation. Provision is made for publication of a detailed statement of the objects and nature of the indebtedness, and the estimated cost of the improvement proposed and for giving notice of the election. At the election two-thirds of all those who vote will be necessary to authorize the indebtedness. It is provided that one-twentieth of the bonds issued shall be paid off each year, that the annual interest shall be paid when due, that the interest shall not be more than five per cent. per annum, and that the bonds shall not be sold by the city at less than par value. The following section of the bill provides for paying off the bonds and the annual interest:

The legislative branch of such city shall, at the time of fixing the general tax levy of said city, and in the manner for such general tax levy provided, levy and collect annually each year for the term of twenty years, a tax sufficient to pay the annual interest on said bonds, and also one-twentieth part of the aggregate amount of such indebtedness so incurred. The taxes herein required to be levied and collected shall be in addition to all other taxes levied for city purposes, and shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner as other city taxes are collected.

Other provisions of the bill are for the appointment by the Mayor or executive, of a commissioner who shall be confirmed by the legislative branch and shall be paid not to exceed $5 for each day of actual service. He shall give bond in the penal sum of $10,000. All contracts are required to be let to the lowest bidder and all acts conflicting with the provisions of this bill are repealed.

The resignation of Chas. A. Wetmore as Chief Executive Officer of the State Viticultural Commission was accepted on Wednesday. In appreciation of his services the grape growers of the State, through J. Dellarth Shorb, have presented him with a table service of solid silver.

John H. Wheeler, formerly Secretary of the State Viticultural Commission, has been appointed in Mr. Wetmore's place, and Clarence J. Wetmore has been appointed to the position vacated by Mr. Wheeler.

In those parts of the East where natural gas is in use, it is being substituted for the glorious climate of California. Near Pittsburgh, Pa., around the natural gas posts, within a radius of twenty feet, the grass has been as green all winter as in summer time. For over a month pansies planted near these posts have been in full bloom. A market gardener is raising asparagus in the open air by the aid of gas, and proposes to test its use in vegetables heretofore grown in greenhouses.

An interesting struggle is going on away up North over securing the Branch Normal School, the authority to build which was enacted by the Legislature. Gen. Bidwell of Chico has offered ten acres of land near that town, and the citizens of Gridley offer as an inducement to build at that place one million of brick.

Such is the demand for the olive oil made by Ellwood Cooper of Santa Barbara, that he has issued a circular stating that a pro rata distribution of his oil must be made to his customers. This demand for a pure article is encouraging to the owners of young olive orchards.

Capt. Eads, the famous engineer, died at Key West, Florida, on the 6th inst. of pneumonia. The gigantic ship railway scheme, of which he was promoter, probably died with him.

One of the curious phases of the present Lenten season is a combination of card-case and prayer book.

Deputy Assessors.

County Assessor Mason has appointed the following deputies: J. F. Steen, chief office deputy; E. B. Grandin, F. A. West, John C. Glidden, J. M. Guinn, A. M. Thornton, John B. Cook, A. J. Lenox, Los Angeles city; John Cubbon, Santa Ana; W. J. McPherson, McPherson; A. K. Coward, T. C. Mason, Norwalk; E. M. Mudge, H. G. Weston, Compton; — McLain, Downey; T. C. Hull, Westminster; Cyrus Burdick, Pomona; R. Melrose, Anaheim; J. D. Durfee, El Monte; J. S. Eckles, Citrus; M. W. Sennott, Cahuenga; Henry Yount, Tustin; J. D. Gilchrist, Pasadena; C. S. Hussey, Long Beach; W. P. Wright, Los Angeles; J. C. Barron, University; Geo. D. Barron, Downey.

The territory assigned to Deputy Melrose embraces Anaheim, Orangethorpe and Placentia School Districts. It will be convenient for both taxpayers and deputy if the former will call at the GAZETTE office and give in their list and pay poll tax.

Great as are the uses of advertising, the wonderful success of St. Jacobs Oil has been due chiefly to its power in healing pain. The true secret of success, after all, is merit.

A trial of an unprecedented nature took place in Kinston, N. C., recently. A young lady teacher was insulted and the school disturbed by a young girl in the school. Among other things she called the teacher a "pop-eyed fool." She was fined $20.

Ballard county bids fair to be the banner county of Kentucky, for there were recently born there in one week, to the wife of Patrick Clark, three 7 pound boys; to the wife of Tobe Elliott, three vigorous children, and to the wife of James Lawrence, five twins.

Dr. E. C. Rogers, who died early this month at Quincy, Mich., devised that his estate should be sold, and, after providing for some private bequests, distributed in the discretion of the executors among women of family whose husbands are drunkards.

The Tennessee House of Representatives, by a party vote, has passed the bill to increase the pension of soldiers of Tennessee. It provides that the pension shall be allowed to Confederate soldiers and Federal soldiers not pensioned by the United States Government.

At Bay Port (Mich.) Elder J. J. Cornish, a Mormon, of Salt Lake, has been laboring for several weeks, seeking proselytes. He has held several joint debates with the local clergy, some of which ended in ignominious and turbulent rows. At yesterday afternoon's debate Cornish hissed upon Rev. John B. Davis such a volume of personal abuse that the audience became panic-stricken, and in its efforts to reach the door several ladies were knocked down and tramped upon. After the exodus of the Gentiles Cornish baptized twenty-three converts. The village is in a state of constant dread, fearing that bloodshed will be the result.

The largest importation of foreigners made by one steamer for some time was landed at Castle Garden, New York, on Wednesday from the French steamer Cheribon. There were 1191 and all were Italians. They caused quite a sensation as they were hurried through Lower Broadway, across the City Hall Park, and up Centre street to the Italian quarter. The method with which the little army of cheap labor was handled was strongly indicative of the padrone system, and it was said about the Battery that their services had been contracted for in advance by the agents in Naples of several railroad and steamship companies here who have recently suffered from strikes. Local labor leaders will doubtless investigate these reports.

A sensation has been caused at Seabright (N. J.) by the action of a Methodist minister, Rev. Mr. Lake, in publicly reading Mrs. Ida Terry and Mrs. Georgia Phillips out of the church for dancing. When the notice was read from the pulpit many of the congregation exhibited signs of indignation and left the church at once. The ladies are only brides of a month, and the alleged offense was committed two weeks before their marriage, but has only just now been found out by the preacher. The affair has created much indignation, and many talk of forcing the parson to resign. It is alleged that he has also talked of expelling Clinton B. Fiske, a millionaire, and recently the Prohibition candidate for Governor, on account of his owning a part of a hotel where liquors were sold, but desisted through fear of the loss of Fiske's monetary support to the church.

News has been received from a lonely farming community on Cat's Fork, Ky., in Laurence county, of a terrible tragedy. Samuel Smith, aged 16, who had some difficulty with a neighbor—Stephen Hammond—armed himself with a revolver and went over to Hammond's following him into the house. Hammond then reached for his rifle, but Smith fired and killed him. Hammond's wife and children, a boy and girl, attacked the murderer, but he soon fatally wounded Mrs. Hammond, and, as the children attempted to escape, he filled them with bullets. Thinking he had killed the entire family, he fled to the mountains and has not yet been caught. Mrs. Hammond will die, and the children may not recover. It was an hour after the shooting before the neighbors came, attracted by the cries of the boy.

Wm. C. Hickman, originally of Philadelphia, but lately of Boston, has joined the American colony in Canada, he having, it is alleged, swindled a number of Boston capitalists out of between $30,000 and $40,000. Hickman claimed to have a formula for manufacturing an article called sugarine out of common starch. Sugarine was to take the place of ordinary sugar, to which it was equal in all respects according to Hickman's story. Sugarine could be made for 1½ cents per pound, and sold readily for 5½ cents. Several capitalists became interested and furnished considerable sums of money, which it is said Hickman converted to his own use. When he found he could no longer blindfold his dupes, he left the city for Montreal, where he now is. Hickman is said to be very well connected in Philadelphia.

Delays are Dangerous.

You say, well 'tis only a slight cold, look out, it may lead to an inflammation of the lining of the numerous air cells of the Lungs, this is Pneumonia; or to Spasmodic contractions of the fibers of the air passages, which is Asthma; or the inflammation of the lining membrane of the throat and tubes which pass through the Lungs, which in the first stage is called Bronchitis, and may lead to Consumption. The ladies of Livermore have an organization to promote tree-planting, which, with them, is not confined to Arbor Day, but is continued at seasonable periods all the year round. Livermore is favorably located, and only needs shade trees to make it one of the most desirable and beautiful regions for settlement there is in California. The ladies of Livermore have already performed a splendid work in the planting out of over twelve miles of trees.

Railroad Probabilities.

[Los Angeles Herald.]

The surveyors of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad Company, after running in several directions have finally set their grade stakes on an almost true bee line from Orange to Los Angeles, at the lower end of First street, where the main depot will be. This survey has been carefully made and a note of all land-owners kept, together with the area the road will take from each tract. The engineers say this route offers as fine a natural grade as could be wished for. It also passes through the richest of the Los Nietos section, being a part of the same belt embraced by the prolific walnut orchard of Mr. Burke, and the peach and apple orchards of Mr. Stewart and others. This road will place little homes of vines and orchards within reach of persons of limited means; and they will be as accessible as are those now on the street car lines, as the running time from the city to the new San Gabriel river will probably not be over twenty minutes. The purest of water can be obtained in that section from fifteen feet wells, and an inexhaustible supply for windmills at thirty feet. This last survey passes about half a mile east of Norwalk, through the Woolhead place, along the Lovell and Hamilton farms lengthwise, and crossing the New River at the southwest corner of the Tiffany place. This is a desirable point to bridge the river, as high water can scarcely damage the trestle because the stream has a straight sweep. To cross the river above the new county bridge would necessitate a trestle diagonally across and down the river, and a long cut on the opposite side of the stream. This would give a flood full career, and be apt to take away any bridge that could be placed there. The place of crossing selected is below the large bend where the floods exhaust their force and pass on quietly in a direct line. After leaving the river the line passes through Mr. Say's place, going across to the old river about a mile and a quarter above Downey, and crosses the river opposite the Logo ranch, and runs directly through the Gage farm; thence across the Laguna, direct to the lower line of Bixle Heights.

The Fur of the Rabbit.

The fur of the French rabbit is in great demand at this time of the year. It figures, moreover, under all sorts of names. The easiest form in which to present it is that of "Siberian fur," with the long hairs taken out it takes the name of "castor;" closely shorn by machine it sells as "otter." Two-thirds of all the furs sold, in fact, have acquired their beauty neither in the plains of Siberia nor the waters of the Arctic ocean, but on the back of the rabbit that disports itself on the fair fields of sunny France.—Fremde Zeitung.

—Grimshaw & Sorensen of Anaheim have been awarded the contract for building three thousand feet of flume for South Riverside. The cost of the work will be about twelve thousand dollars.

—A party of young ladies and gentlemen from Anaheim enjoyed a picnic among themselves at the Santiago Canyon on Thursday. Lewis & Co.'s four-horse omnibus was used as a conveyance. The young folks report having had a pleasant time.

—L. Ackerman, the proprietor of the Union House, has responded to a long felt want by opening an employment agency, where people wanting work, and people wanting workmen, can be accommodated instead of having to search all over town. We commend the enterprise to public consideration.

—The champion mumrod of Anaheim and vicinity is the youngest son of Alex. Henry of Fairview. On the first day of the week, in company with two other boys, and armed with only a Remington six barrelled pistol, he succeeded in bagging 43 rabbits, a coyote, a badger and a huge rattlesnake, and this was all done in the space of a few hours.

—When the people of Anaheim have somewhat recovered from the effect of their liberal subscriptions to the railroad depot site, the Building Association, the street car line, etc., the enterprise that should next engage their attention is an artesian well. It is the opinion of experts that the procurement of such a well in the heart of town is only a question of depth—and money.

—The work of planting and setting out vineyards has already been inaugurated in Anaheim and vicinity. Some of the pioneer vineyardists who dug up their old vines last year are preparing the ground for the planting of new vineyards, while others contemplate fallowing for a few years, as the ground in some instances was worn out. Mrs. A. Frohling is planting the north part of her tract, which has lain idle for several years, to vines.

—The Morris-Sullivan Mirror of Ireland Combination will appear at Kroeger's Hall to-night. The programme is sparkling and varied, comprising extracts from Moore's immortal melodies, character sketching, panoramas and scenical views of city, county and village in Ireland. The views of scenery will alone be a rare treat, for Irish scenery contains much of what is most picturesque, most pastoral and most vividly and variedly beautiful in nature. It is an entertainment of rare merit and well worthy of the patronage of lovers of music.

—A grand vocal and instrumental farewell concert complimentary to Miss Nellie Bancroft will be given soon by her many friends in Anaheim. Miss Bancroft has for a number of years been very prominent in all musical matters in Anaheim, ever ready without fee or reward to entertain the people with her brilliant performances, and now that she is about to leave us, to continue her musical studies, it is but fitting that the people of Anaheim should pay a slight compliment to her worth and talent by filling Kroger's Hall at her farewell concert.

—Will H. Dake, the rustling Secretary of the Pacific Mutual Aid Society of Los Angeles, was in town several days during the week and succeeded in adding a large membership to the society. It is a popular institution, based upon sound principles, and offers insurance at a minimum cost. It being a home institution it should receive the patronage of those of our people who desire life insurance. It numbers among the officers many well-known citizens of Los Angeles, among them E. F. Spence of the First National Bank, who is Treasurer, and Dr. Walter Lindley who is Medical Director.

Railroad "News"

If one travels throughout the county with attentive ears he will gather in plenty of rumors regarding the railroad situation. It is a peculiarity of the case that there are so many men who know, or profess to know, all about the purposes and plans of a company which proverbially keeps its plans to itself. These rumors, therefore, are not worth printing, and as we are one of the few who know nothing concerning the railroad company's plans, we cannot give any "news."

It may be as well to remark, however, that there seems to be an irreconcilable conflict between the able, industrious and indefatigable reporter for the Associated Press at Santa Ana, and the attorneys and officers of the Atchison Company, and it will be interesting to note the outcome to see whether the rural correspondent or the Directors control the operations of the company. His latest bulletin, published yesterday, disposes effectually of Orange's pretensions. Here it is

SANTA ANA, March 10.—The town of Orange is excited over the report that the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad would locate the junction of the Riverside, Los Angeles and Santa Ana Railroad at Orange. Three surveys have been run, one to Anaheim, one to Orange and one to Santa Ana. The original intention was to make Anaheim the junction of the two roads, but the plan has been abandoned. The latest survey makes Santa Ana the shortest distance from Bolwell Point, and this survey will be adopted, and Santa Ana will form the junction for both railroads.

The only reason we have to doubt the authenticity of the above statement of plans and purposes is found in the complaint filed some weeks ago by the R., S. A. and L. A. R. R. in the matter of condemning the right of way through the San Joaquin rancho. The complaint stated that the point of junction was near Anaheim, and the fact that the complaint has not been amended would seem to show that it is possible the correspondent above quoted is "counting" his chickens before they are hatched."

—The Judges of the Superior Court have agreed upon a division of the legal business of their courts.

Judge Gardiner is to take charge of the probate, insolvency and appealed cases from Justices Courts, together with inquisitions of lunacy.

Judge O'Melveny is to take half of the criminal business and all the civil cases when a jury is demanded.

Judge Cheney will take half of the criminal cases and one fourth of the civil business which is now heard by Judge Brunson.

Judge Hatton will take the remainder, which means that he will have to attend to the greater part of the civil business, as in all probability this arrangement will throw the burden of the law calendar, as far as civil cases go, on him. In other words, he will have about three-quarters of the civil business, as it will be impossible to determine what case will demand jury trials.

This arrangement will go into effect on the opening of the April term.

—The Town Board of Health went on an inspecting tour among the back yards yesterday, and found a very filthy condition of affairs in places where they least expected to find any violation of sanitary laws. The Marshal gives notice in our advertising columns to day that offenders will be rigidly prosecuted. Official warning and interference should not be necessary to awaken people to a sense of duty in this regard, and it is to be hoped they will see the necessity for complying with the reasonable request of the Board of Health. On another page will be found described the disinfectants recommended by the medical fraternity.

—We yesterday saw a lot of oranges and lemons grown on R. J. Northam's ranch in North Anaheim which were being packed to send as an exhibit to the Citrus Fair at Colton. In size, color and cleanliness, the fruit was unquestionably the inferior of none grown in Southern California. There was not the faintest suggestion of smut or scale of any kind, and we challenge a comparison of this fruit with any that will be exhibited at the Colton Fair. If premiums are offered we predict that Mr. Northam will secure the highest.

—Malvern Hill Post, G. A. R., desires to get the names of all soldiers buried in Anaheim cemetery, and find some difficulty in getting the required data from the official register. It will be considered a favor if those who know the names of the soldiers buried in the cemetery referred to will send them to Rev. G. A. Irvin, Chaplain of the Post, as soon as possible.

—The newly-organized Anaheim Brass Band met for the first time on Tuesday evening in Kroger's Hall to practice. Before long the citizens of Anaheim will have the opportunity of hearing some soul-stirring music, as the present members are conceded to be good musicians.

—Buena Park is the symphonious name of a new town to be laid out on the ranch of Mr. J. A. Whitaker, about six miles from Anaheim, on the line of the San Diego and Los Angeles road. Full particulars of this new enterprise will be given next week.

—A two-inch water pipe has been laid along Center street to the Center tract, so that the expected population in that part of town can now get an abundance of pure domestic water.

—Col. George H. Smith, of the law firm of Glassell, Smith & Patton of Los Angeles, is a prominent candidate for the Supreme bench to fill the vacancy caused by Chief Justice Morrison's death.

—Jim. Smith, Constable Smythe's colored capture, who robbed Ey & Groat's barber shop, plead guilty, and has been sent to State Prison for two years.

—S. A. Dennis, the painter, has a first-class buggy which he offers for sale very cheap. See adv.

To the Business Men of Anaheim.

The GAZETTE enjoys a very satisfactory circulation. It is probably read as extensively as any country journal in Southern California, and among its readers are a large number of people in the East and elsewhere who form their ideas of Anaheim from what they see and read in these pages. Such being the case, it is probably unfortunate for the welfare of the town that its paper is so prosperous in the way indicated. It is very rarely indeed that we allow a word to appear in these columns complimentary to the paper, and we ought to be pardoned at this time for remarking that in its editorial and local columns it is, at least, as faithful and able an exponent of the interests of Anaheim as it is possible for a journal to be. Critics of the Smart Aleck order there doubtless are to whom this journal has many imperfections and who are certain that they could "run it" very much better than the present management; but as long as we receive the commendation of those whose good wishes are worth having, we can bear the carping of jaundiced critics with indifference and equanimity.

But we began this unusual sermon for the purpose of saying that those strangers at a distance who read the GAZETTE, and take their ideas of its business proportions from the advertising columns—which ought to be, and generally is, accepted as indicative of the business aspects of the place—must be driven to the conclusion that Anaheim is a very insignificant and one horse village. The GAZETTE enjoys the questionable honor of containing less local advertisements than any other paper in California, and this not because there are fewer business houses here than in other places where newspapers are published, but because—Heaven knows why!

It is fortunate for the publisher that he finds other remunerative fields for his industry, for if he relied upon the patronage of the business men of Anaheim his bread would need to be made of very coarse flour, and the oleomargarine would be very thinly spread. And again, if it was not for that happy circumstance, the publisher would find it quite impossible to respond to the almost daily demands upon his time, talents and purse to assist in public enterprises of every imaginable kind. It is repugnant to us to speak of these matters, and in the sixteen years during which we have published this paper we do not think a single reference has been made to the gratuitous services we have freely given to enhance the interests of the town and of the business men of whom we make mild complaint; and it is not likely that we will refer to the matter again. But the fact remains that common gratitude, if not business tact, should induce a more liberal policy towards a paper and its publisher whose services can always be commanded for the public good.

The ideas above set forth were suggested by an editorial in the San Bernardino Times, a valued exchange which enjoys quadruple the advertising patronage of the GAZETTE, and yet whose editor is not pleased. He says:

> We have been told of a "business" man in town who boasts that he only spent four dollars in advertising last year, and prides himself upon the fact. It is needless to say that he further saves money by not subscribing to any of our local papers, but gets his news from the East where he gets a country paper at the publication office for a dollar a year. We do not suppose that a man of this kind would send his Thanksgiving turkey, but if we were his neighbor we should take good care to see that our chicken coop was locked up at night. He belongs to a certain class, and it is a class that is just as dishonest as the law will allow them to be, who profit by the public labors of others. They will buy property and allow it to lie idle in order that their neighbors may make improvements, and increase its value, then will sell for the increased value that has been put upon it by their neighbors' enterprise, and boast of their shrewdness. They are barnacles who cling to the community and retard its progress; they reap what others have sown, and regard their dishonesty as business shrewdness.
> Newspapers are public property, more so than any other class of business enterprise. They work for the upbuilding of a community. The efforts of the publisher and the means of the proprietor are invested for this end, and they are supported by the community for its advancement. In this city for years the press has labored steadfastly to the end that we should have prosperity, that our county should settle up, that business should be increased. We have sent out thousands of sample copies for which we never had or asked remuneration, all of which was for the sole purpose of spreading intelligence about our town and valley. Articles from the local newspapers are copied far and wide over the land, and San Bernardino is known where it would never be heard of were it not for their efforts, and then we find "shrewd business men" who make their boast that while enjoying a good trade, the result of the newspaper labors, they have only spent four dollars a year with them. Is such a man to be trusted? He would give short measure in dry goods, short weight in his groceries, and think that in cheating a customer he was as shrewd as in cheating the papers of what is justly their due. The newspapers have been supported in their efforts by some of our business men; they have worked to create the business which all enjoy, and yet we have here a man who boasts that he has done no part toward it, while sharing in the results. Suppose the whole community were like him and the papers were all frozen out, where would his business be? A community cannot live in the nineteenth century without a newspaper, nor can the newspaper live without patronage, and God help that community which is possessed of many men who boast that their yearly outlay for printer's ink is only four dollars.

A Climatic Map.

One of the most useful of the many publications issued by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company is a Climatic map which they have just published for gratuitous distribution throughout the Eastern States and Europe. The object is to give the health, pleasure and home seeker of those countries a clear idea not only of the very moderate climate of California, but particularly its equability. It is compiled from the best obtainable authorities, and is in all respects a valuable publication.

Scabs.

The man who slaps his fellow citizen on the left arm nowadays is apt to get cussed or licked.

It is the proper caper for society young ladies to get vaccinated on the leg. This explains the new gait adopted by the afore, said society young ladies.

Supervisor Rea has appointed Dr. Ballard as Quarantine Officer for Anaheim. Fortunately, his services in that capacity have not been required, but it is wisdom to provide against contingencies.

There are two cases of small-pox at Santa Monica, one at Compton and two at Ranchito. Rumor assigns the disease to several other localities, but Rumor has a bad reputation for truth and veracity.

There is not now and has not been any small-pox in Anaheim. This denial seems to be necessary in view of the rumors which locate small-pox all over the county.

The situation in Los Angeles is thus summarized: There are 14 cases in the small-pox hospital, 10 quarantined and 3 dead; total, 27. Wednesday 4 of the 8 convalescents were discharged from the hospital, and 2 new cases admitted, leaving 12 in the hospital. Fourteen other cases are quarantined at various points. The number of deaths has not increased; so the total number of cases to-date is 33.

The Herald of yesterday says:

> We are glad to say that all cause for alarm with reference to small-pox is now over. The authorities have the visitation well in hand, and there is not the slightest danger that the disease increase or spread beyond their control. Besides, it is well ascertained that it is variola of a very mild type. This is shown from the fact that all the cases in the hospital yield readily to treatment, and that the number of discharges cured is 66 per cent. of those received, as was the case yesterday. No further deaths are reported from the disease, so that out of thirty-three cases reported from the start there have only been three deaths. This is certainly not an affliction that should cause the slightest public uneasiness; much less should it have given ground for the panic-stricken many people a few days ago.

Great Expectations.

Rural California.

Anticipating the remarkable growth which Southern California is now enjoying the Rural Californian three years ago said: "Within five years it will be difficult to buy first class land, with water, suitable for orange culture, for less than one thousand dollars an acre, in Southern California." The paper was laughed at for making the prediction. We believe more thoroughly than ever that our guess was a good one.

But the guess is yet a very long way from being realized. We do not suppose that our contemporary will dispute the fact that the land in and near Anaheim is as well adapted to orange culture as any other locality in Southern California, and yet this land can be purchased at from $100 to $150 per acre, with water right. This is altogether too cheap for land of such excellent quality and such desirable location, but the owners persist in selling it at those figures.

It should be borne in mind, too, that there is nothing speculative about the capacity and adaptability of the soil of Anaheim. For nearly thirty years it has yielded abundantly of grapes and latterly to a large income to a large population. Its orchards of more recent planting are thrifty, vigorous, free from scale and profitable, and the fruit compares well with that grown in the most favored spots. And we repeat, there are hundreds of acres of land of this quality yet to be had at from $100 to $150 per acre.

The Street Car Company.

The Directors of the company have decided to issue half-fare tickets which will be sold for the use of school children. These tickets are in the form of a card marked into forty squares, each square representing a fare which will be punched by the driver. The cards are sold for one dollar, and can be purchased from the Secretary or the driver. Children can only ride for half-fare by presenting these cards, as cash fares remain at five cents for everybody.

Personal Paragraphs.

Mr. Rey, of the firm of Palmer & Rey, type founders and dealers in printing material, was in town this week on a visit to his friends, Amerige Bros.

Dwight Whiting is in town, the guest of his cousin, Dr. Ballard. Mr. Whiting is the owner of Los Alisos Rancho near San Juan Capistrano, a property of about 9,000 acres which will enhance in value to a fabulous sum by the building of the Atchison and S. F. roads to San Diego.

The Anaheim Evergreen Nursery.

At the above nursery this season is to be found a larger, better and healthier lot of trees than ever before, which is saying a great deal. Among the trees on hand are YEARLING ORANGE TREES, NORTHERN FRUIT TREES, ORNAMENTAL TREES, CYPRESS, BLUE GUM AND PEPPER, all of which will be sold in lots of from 1 to 10,000, at prices which defy competition. No scale; no disease. This will be guaranteed. An inspection of the stock is invited. TIMOTHY CARROLL.

An Interesting Work.

The GAZETTE is in receipt of the two volumes of "Perley's Reminiscences," under which title is gathered a mass of social, anecdotal and political reminiscences gleaned during a residence of sixty years in the National capital. The volumes are beautifully bound and will adorn any library. The illustrations are numerous and of more than ordinary merit, while the letter text is extremely interesting and enjoyable. We append a couple of anecdotes to show the style in which the books are written:

John Holmes, although rude in speech and at times vulgar, was the humorous champion of the North. Ever on the watch for some unguarded expression by a Southern Senator, no sooner would one be uttered than he would pounce upon it and place the speaker in a most uncomfortable position. John Tyler one day thought that he could annoy Mr. Holmes, and asked him what had become of that political firm once mentioned in debate by John Randolph as "James Madison, Felix Grundy, John Holmes, and the Devil." Mr. Holmes rose at once. "I will tell the gentleman," said he, "what has become of that firm. The first member is dead, the second has gone into retirement, the third now addresses you, and the last has gone over to the Nullifiers, and is now electioneering among the gentleman's constituents. So the partnership is legally dissolved."

Mail robberies were not uncommon in those days, although the crime was punishable with imprisonment or death. One day one of Reesides's coaches was stopped near Philadelphia by three armed men, who ordered the nine passengers to alight and stand in a line. One of the robbers, then mounted guard, while the other two made the terrified passengers deliver up their money and watches, and then rifled the mail bags. They were soon afterward arrested, tried, convicted and one was sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary, while the other two were condemned to be hung. Fortunately for one of the culprits, named Wilson, he had some years previously, at a horse car near Nashville, Tennessee, privately advised General Jackson to withdraw his bets on a horse which he was backing, as the jockey had been ordered to lose the race. The General was very thankful for this information, which enabled him to escape a heavy loss, and he promised his informant that he would befriend him whenever an opportunity should offer. When reminded of this promise, after Wilson had been sentenced to be hanged, Jackson promptly commuted the sentence to ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Board of Supervisors.

The petition of Dreher and Thomas for a street railroad at Pomona, was allowed withdrawn and their franchise abandoned.

A communication from J. R. Paul, referring to the burying of indigent dead at Santa Ana, was referred to Supervisor Rea.

On motion of Supervisor Macy, Supervisors are authorized to take all necessary precautions to suppress noxious or contagious diseases that may be detected in their Districts, by appointing health officers, or by quarantining localities where diseases exist.

G. W. Townsend was appointed Road Overseer of Vernon District, and H. F. Gardiner of Orange District.

A petition for the construction of a bridge across the Santa Ana river at Yorba, was received.

All streets and alleys in the town of Norwalk, were declared public highways.

The County Recorder was allowed five deputies at $100 per month each, three at $75 per month, and seven at $50 per month for the month of March. The Recorder named the following: N. S. Averill, Arthur Bray, D. E. Barclay, J. Torrey, Jr., George Bagbee, Mrs. C. Halberstadt, Mrs. C. H. Adams, Miss M. Clancy, Mrs. E. Teal, Mrs. E. Wiley, Miss A. L. McCullough, Miss L. A. Richardson, Miss Grace Farnsworth, Mrs. E. A. Johnson and H. H. Rubens.

The time for hearing the viewers' report on the Santa Ana and Trabuco road was set for April 7th, at 10 A. M.

A petition was granted to change the boundaries of New Hope and Westminster by taking section 17, township 5south, range 10 west, from Westminster Road District and adding it to New Hope Road District.

The County Assessor was allowed twenty-eight deputies for the month of March at $50 each.

Fast Growths.

Editor Baker, of the Santa Ana Standard, is moved by the GAZETTE'S true story of remarkable growths to record the following facts:

About six or seven years ago a man living near Orange set out two olive posts on each side of his gateway. They grew rapidly as they were near his ditch, and two years ago the owner sold us his crop of berries on the two trees amounted to ten bushels. Any one who doubts this story can't eat pickled olives. Up at Modena they tell of a fellow there who a few years ago by mistake planted an olive cutting wrong end upwards, and now the little thing has developed into a huge tree with the roots all on top hanging in a lovely mass like the branches of a weeping willow, while the ground every season is literally swelled with the charming fruit. Any man who don't believe this is a liar and don't know how to make hash.

Boiled Oranges.

Many of the street orange peddlers in San Francisco have of late been resorting to the practice of boiling their stock in trade in order to increase its value as a salable commodity.

An orange that has undergone the boiling process increases in size and improves in appearance generally, but it does so at the expense of its flavor, for it becomes worthless as an edible. They can generally be detected by the absence of any smut on the skin, the oranges looking as though they had each been the recipient of a careful hand-polish. Those who do not care to be victimized had better beware of an orange that is too clean.

This is a new wrinkle in the chapter of fraud.

The extraordinary popularity of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the natural result of its use by intelligent people for over forty years. It has indisputably proven itself the very best known specific for all colds, coughs, and pulmonary complaints.

SUNRISE.

The east is blossoming. Yes, a rose,
Vast as the world, with not a thorn,
Sweet as the promise of a woman is,
Blows and reaches, and widens and grows,
Large and loud blossoms, up from the sea,
And out of the sea, as a blossoming tree.

Richer and richer, so higher and higher,
Deeper and deeper it takes to the sky,
Brighter and brighter it pushes through
The space of heaven and the place of stars,
Till all is red as a rose can be,
And my rose leaves fall into billows of fire.

Then beams reach upward as arms from the sea;
Then lances and arrows are aimed at me;
Then lances and arrows and spears and bars
Are heaped and shattered and strewn on the sea;
And, scattered and shot, the tower and spire
Start from the flames like tongues of fire.

Needed Advice for Some Librarians.

Let the public library be considered by its librarians as a hospital for crippled minds, quite as much as an aid to those persons who rationally understand and appreciate it. There need not be fewer catalogue cases with their sparse and grudging notices, but near the catalogues, and among the readers, there ought to be active and helpful librarians whose sole duty should be to furnish oral notes and advice in extenso.

Two of the main uses of the policeman are to direct the stranger and help the feeble. The great retail stores have their floor walkers, who point you to the elevator or lace counter with insistent unction. Railroad corporations have discovered that index signboards and intricate time tables are riddles to many persons of more than ordinary intelligence, and have therefore supplemented these devices in large depots with an oral information man who succeeds in adjusting the passenger service of the road for the purpose wants of individuals, and not merely to the presumptive wants of that abstraction, the patron. But where, in our American public libraries, is there a like officer, whose chief duties are to set right a perverted reader, to direct a lost reader through a crowd of 100,000 books to the friend he is seeking, to tell all the connections to be made, and all the delays to be endured on the "Iron Road to Learning"?—E. H. Woodruff in Boston Traveler.

French Scheme of Taxation.

The French taxation scheme is a curious thing to an American. Everything is taxed, and the taxation is both direct and indirect. There is a house tax paid in proportion to the rental. The privilege of working at a trade or a profession is taxed. There is a land tax, and there is a tariff on articles imported from abroad. There is also the octroi tax, which makes every article brought into a city pay a duty, and there are revenue stamps for bills, checks and receipts. If a French farmer brings a dozen eggs into Paris he must pay a tax upon them at the entrance to the city, and if his wife carries in a pound of butter she pays a percentage upon it before it can be sold. Funeral marbles are taxed, and the government makes all of the tobacco made in the country.

It is very poor tobacco, too, and the prices show that the revenue from this source must be very large. The government of Paris also does the pawnbroking of the city. The interest charged is from 9 ¼ to 12 per cent, and the pledges can not be redeemed until one day after the money is paid back. With such taxation this no wonder that France has an immense revenue, and that its expenditures are extravagant. Last year it is estimated more than $700,000,000 were collected and spent, and I don't believe there is much lying awake among French politicians in thinking what shall be done with the surplus.—Frank G. Carpenter in Cleveland Leader.

The Porter's Wages.

The company that I work for would make itself popular by paying its porters good wages instead of requiring the traveling public to pay us. There is a sliding scale of wages paid to porters. It all depends upon the run. A man running between St. Louis and Chicago, for instance, is given, say, $15 a month. He is sure of a full car, and each passenger means to him twenty-five cents. Take a car on the Southern line, where the palace coaches are not patronized much, and you will find the porter getting from $10 to $20 a month, because that is all they have to depend upon. The company does not say that the price of a berth is $2, a nigh, but it is an awful small man that would faff to give the porter his quarter. I am sorry for the conductors. They can do a great deal for a passenger, but they are not allowed to accept gratuities, and their pay is never over $75 a month. I would rather be a porter any day than a conductor.—Pullman Porter in Globe Democrat.

How To Probe His Fast.

After Succi had completed his thirty days' fast, the Italian papers reported with great minuteness his efforts to recover his lost weight. The first day he was rather cautious in his diet, limiting himself to three dishes, but on the second day, as one paper said, "it would have been difficult to count the number of his meals." Large crowds assembled in front of the restaurant where he ate, and admired his appetite. It is, then, not surprising to hear that Succi's appearance is visibly improving. Color has returned to his face, and his skin is no longer drawn tightly over the bones. Immediately after taking the first cup of bouillon he grew very well in the face. Strangely enough, his head diminished so much in size during the last two weeks of his fast that his hat did not fit it, and he had to line it with paper to keep it in place.—New York Evening Post.

Electricity In a Gambling House.

In a gambling house at Moscow it was found that electricity had been invoked to swindle innocent players. Immense sums have been lost, and the victims being certain that they had been robbed, but not being able to prove it, they laid the matter before the police. This led to an investigation, during which it was discovered that the walls and ceilings were covered with a certain kind of paper on which stars were stamped, and that among the stars on the ceiling many holes had been bored. In the room above, a man living on the floor could see all the cards, and by means of wires connected with the shoes of the person who was cheating he could signal to him his opponent's "hands."—New York Graphic.

The Modesty of Royalty.

Queen Victoria is very strict in the matter of court etiquette. She even makes grammatical rules. She wishes to be referred to as Her Majesty, not as her Majesty. This is more modest than the requirement of Russian royalty, which has the names of the imperial family printed on the title page of the orthodox prayer books in big capitals while the name of God appears in small type.—The Argonaut.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

IT LOOKS LIKE COFFEE.

But Proves to be Only a Wicked Imitation—Something Else Interesting.

"That is not coffee," said the reporter.

"Who said it was?" replied the jolly, rosy cheeked grocer. "Are there any marks on it to indicate that it is coffee?"

"No, not particularly; but it certainly looks like coffee and tastes entirely different."

"Ah, you have hit the nail on the head," continued the grocer with a smile. "It would not do to let everyone know it, as it might shake people's confidence in their grocery store. That bag, a few beans from which you have just tasted, contains an imitation of coffee. It is nothing more than flour, and poor flour at that, which has been shaped like the coffee bean and baked brown. If you will take a genuine coffee bean in your hand and put it alongside the imitation, you can see that there is a difference in the color and the shape is also different, but this is nothing as the various kinds of coffee vary in shape and size. The flavor of course, is not there, but the way the imitation is sold does not require its presence. The grocer is not a foolish man. He does not sell these flour beans for coffee. This would give the business away. But when trade is dull and the grocer must have something to occupy his mind, it is a pleasant recreation for him to mix a quantity of the flour beans with the genuine coffee. Then it cannot be easily detected. Only just enough of the flavorless bean is used to make a little profit. This is not quite one half.

When the honest housewife who buys whole coffee so as to get it pure, grinds up this mixture and the odor steals out from the mill, her eyes snap and she laughs at the people who are foolish enough to buy the coffee which is ground at the store, and can be easily adulterated. The taste of this compound is not unpleasant and it will not injure any one. Even the baby can take it with impunity. If the coffee were drank plain its weakness would be noticeable, but being usually taken with milk and sugar the fraud is not detected. Years ago all the coffee was ground in the grocery, but adulteration was carried on so extensively that the practice was established of buying the whole bean. This led some inventive Yankee humanitarian, who believed that too much coffee is bad for the nerves, to bring out the flour bean.

"Here is something else interesting. See these beautiful samples of cloves and peppers. Imported? Well, no, not exactly. They are home made to suit the trade. They look good, but there is but little flavor to them. Some one thought it was a shame to waste the beautiful and nourishing cocoanut shell, and conceived the idea of heating it and then grinding it to a fine powder. This when artistically mixed with various kinds of oils makes a good spice for pies and other good things. It is a growing industry and well patronized. Some of this powdered shell, after being flavored and made into a stiff paste, is passed through moulds into the shape of peppers and cloves. These, when mixed with a quantity of the genuine article, give about all the flavor that it is safe for a person to take, and the grocer does not lose anything, but goes on paying his pew rent and building rows of houses, the same as if there were a little cream in the cheese, a small quantity of sugar in the glucose, and a taint of butter in the oleomargarine."—New York Tribune Interview.

Swimming by Instinct.

In the tideless, sun warmed Mediterranean, in the coral bound lagoons of the Southern ocean, or by the grove clad banks of the Burmese rivers swimming becomes both a luxury and a second nature. Let those testify who remember the untrammeled urchins flinging themselves from the bows of boats in Malta harbor to dive for and secure the coins flung from the deck of some newly arrived vessel or disporting themselves day after day in the fetid, drain polluted waters of the Dockyard creek.

Let travelers bear witness who, with possibly some humorous exaggeration, have told us how in Burmah toddling infants can swim at least as soon as they can walk, and how a mother, too busy for the time to look after her youngest born, will cheerfully and confidently place it in the river to amuse itself with its playmates, and when she has leisure will swim about among the gambolling children until she has found her own and brought it to land. In such a case as this there can be but little teaching; swimming must come almost naturally—shall we say from hereditary intsinct, developed by the constant calls made upon it and transmitted from generation to generation?—Chambers' Journal.

The Mathematics of Waiters.

After the dinner was over the waiter brought the check. Mr. Watterson handed it to me, saying:

"How much is it?"

"Three thirty-five," said I.

"How do you know?" said he.

"Because it says so on the check."

"That does not matter," said he, "add it up and see how much it makes."

"I did so, and found that the total was, $2.75 instead of $3.35, as charged in the footing.

"Of course," said Mr. Watterson. "I knew it was wrong; nine out of ten are wrong."

I asked him if he thought the mistake was an intentional one. He gave me a look of supreme disgust at my ignorance, and exclaimed: "It is the most contemptible piece of small swindling in existence, and they nearly all do it, because it succeeds, as most persons simply glance at the total and pay the amount set down. They never think of adding it up to see if it is correct. Green fellows like you are taken in as fast as they come along. There is no remedy for it. When you detect the swindle and call the attention of the waiter to the fraud, he apologizes for the 'error,' and the matter stops there."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Pope's Proposed Improvements.

At a recent papal reception at the Vatican, Leo XIII informed his visitors that he purposed continuing the improvements at the Lateran Basilica by restoring the ancient portico near the Sacristy, known as the Porticus Lateranensis, and he charged the architect, Vespignani, to follow most carefully the original lines in executing the work. The pope added that he hoped at a future time the ceiling of the Basilica would be restored to its original form. He also announced that on the anniversary of the dedication of the Basilica, the two splendid organs which are being built for it will be used for the first time. They contain 72 stops and 4,568 pipes. One will have three manuels, the other two. The space each will occupy will be 36 feet frontage by 32 feet 10 inches in height, and the same in depth.—Chicago Herald.

A Mindreader's Feat.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Washington Irving Bishop, the famous mindreader, gave a peculiar trying test of his power this afternoon at the Hoffman House, in the presence of members of the press and of the theatrical profession, doctors, lawyers and others. He borrowed a brooch from Mrs. Frank Leslie, which he gave to a committee of four gentlemen, previously chosen from the audience, telling them to conceal it anywhere within a mile of the hotel. The committee drove off in a carriage, returning after half an hour's absence. Bishop was then blindfolded. This was done by tying cotton batting around his eyes, then a black bag was put over his head and fastened around his neck. A two-seated open carriage was waiting at the door, and in this Mr. Bishop and three members of the committee took seats. Bishop took the reins and drove off through the great crowd of people and vehicles, guiding the horses with remarkable dexterity, considering that he could not use his eyes. Just near the southeast corner of Grammercy Park he stopped the vehicle and alighted, the committee following. A large crowd had run after the carriage all the way from the Hoffman House, and Bishop had hard work making his way through the throng that flocked about him. He crossed the street and proceeded along East Grammercy Park until he reached the entrance to the Grammercy Park Hotel, into which he turned without hesitation, walked into a room and placed his hand on a vase which rested on a table. He held his hand there for a few seconds and then requested that the vase be removed. His wish was complied with and he picked the brooch up from the table where it had been left by the committee.

A Genial Restorative.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are emphatically a genial restorative. The change which this great botanic remedy produces in the disordered organization are always agreeable, though surely progressive, never abrupt and violent. On this account it is admirably adapted to persons of delicate constitution and weak nerves, to whom the powerful mineral drugs are positively injurious. That it initiates these processes which result in the re-establishment of healthful vigor is conspicuously shown in cases where it is taken to overcome that fruitful cause of debility, indigestion, coupled as it usually is, with biliousness and constipation. Thorough digestion, regular evacuation and abundant secretion, are results which promptly and invariably attend its systematic use. It is, besides, the best protective against malaria, and a first rate diuretic.

WORTHY

Of Confidence.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine that, during nearly 40 years, in all parts of the world, has proved its efficacy as the best blood alterative known to medical science.

SARSAPARILLA (extracted from the root of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla) is its base, and its powers are enhanced by the extracts of Yellow Dock and Stillingia, the foibles of Potassium and Iron, and other potent ingredients.

IS your blood vitiated by derangements of the digestive and assimilatory functions? Is it tainted by Scrofula? or does it contain the poison of Mercury or Contagious Disease?

THE leading physicians of the United States, who know the composition of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, say that nothing else so good for the purification of the blood is within the range of pharmacy.

ONLY by the use of this remedy is it possible for a person who has corrupted blood to attain sound health and prevent transmission of the destructive taint to posterity.

THOROUGHLY effective renovation of the system must include not only the removal of corruption from the blood, but its enrichment and the strengthening of the vital organs.

RELIABLE witnesses, all over the world, testify that this, work is better accomplished by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA than by any other remedy.

BLOOD that is corrupted through disease is made pure, and blood weakened through diminution of the red corpuscles is made strong, by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

PURIFYING the blood and building time in serious cases, but benefit will be derived from the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA more speedily than from anything else.

MEDICINE for which like effects are falsely claimed, is abundant in the market, under many names, but the only preparation that has stood the test of time, and proved worthy of the world's confidence, is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce has thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

TRADE S.S.S. MARK

About twenty years ago I discovered a little sore on my cheek, and the doctors pronounced it cancer. I have tried a number of physicians, but without receiving any permanent benefit. Among the number were one or two specialists. The medicine they applied was like fire to the sore, causing intense pain. I saw a statement in the papers telling what S. S. S. had done for others similarly afflicted. I procured some at once. Before I had used the second bottle the neighbors could notice that my cancer was healing up. My general health had been bad for two or three years—I had a hacking cough and spit blood continually. I had a severe pain in my breast. After taking six bottles of S. S. S. my cough left me and I grew stouter than I had been for several years. My cancer has healed over all but a little spot about the size of a half dime, and it is rapidly disappearing. I would advise every one with cancer to give S. S. S. a fair trial.
