MEDALS OF HONOR.

How often have the medals of honor been given to the soldiers and sailors who distinguished themselves by acts of gallantry and valor. The following is a list of the medals of honor given by the United States Government to its military and naval forces during the present war.

The first medal of honor was given by a joint resolution passed by both houses of Congress and approved July 13, 1862, authorizing the President to give to any soldier or sailor who distinguished himself by acts of gallantry and valor a medal of honor to be prepared with suitable emblematic devices, and to direct that the same be awarded in the name of Congress to such non-commissioned officers and privates as shall most distinguish themselves by their gallantry in action and their superior qualities during the present war.

This was followed March 3, 1863, by an act authorizing the additional issue of medals of honor for such officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates as have most distinguished, or may hereafter most distinguish, themselves in action, appropriating $50,000 to defray the expense of the same. The medal prepared was a five-pointed star, tipped with trefail, each point containing a cross. Around the center, in the middle, within a circle of thirty-four stars, America is personified as Minerva, with her left hand resting on the fasces, while with her right, in which she holds a shield bearing the arms of the United States, she repels Discord. The whole is surrounded by a wreath of two olive branches and a sword surrounded by the American eagle, and linked with the dependent star. A ribbon of thirteen stripes, blue and white, with a central stripe of plain blue, unites it with a clasp consisting of two cornucopias and the arms of the United States. The medal is of bronze, and the ribbon has as yet been made by giving medals of silver or gold where services of peculiar character have been performed. This medal is within the reach of the humblest private in the army, and is prized by its most distinguished officers. A large majority of those who have received the medal were enlisted men in the volunteer ranks during the civil war, but many have also been conferred upon members of the regular army, not only for heroic acts during the war, but similar deeds while engaged in fighting the hostile Indians in the arduous campaigns on the frontier. The medals of honor for the navy were authorized by an act of Congress passed in the latter part of 1861, to be awarded by the Secretary of the Navy to such petty officers and other non-commissioned officers as should most distinguish themselves by their gallantry in action in the navy during the war. It was a bronze in the form of a star with five points, with a device emblematic of Union crushing the monster Rebellion, around which were thirty-three stars, the number of States then in the Union. The naval medals were awarded to 320 persons. Those given in the army amounted to several thousand.—Chicago Daily Ocean.

STORIES OF BARBONS.

A few with some extraordinary tricks, but the most interesting of them is the story of the man who was killed by a bullet in the stomach, and who lived for several days after the wound, and who was finally killed by a bullet in the head. The story is told in a very interesting manner, and is worth reading for the sake of the facts it contains. The man was a private in the regular army, and was killed by a bullet in the stomach while fighting the hostile Indians in the arduous campaigns on the frontier. He lived for several days after the wound, and was finally killed by a bullet in the head. The story is told in a very interesting manner, and is worth reading for the sake of the facts it contains.

MIND AND MATTER.

The Effect of Extreme Heat on the Human Mind. The most interesting studies have been made upon this subject of the relation of mind to matter. It is found in all cases that the mind is affected by the temperature of the body. When the body is heated, the mind is affected in a certain way, and when the body is cooled, the mind is affected in a certain way. This is a very interesting subject, and is worth reading for the sake of the facts it contains.

The more physical temperature of a man on a hot day is not the measure of discomfort. In the busy season of the year, the human body is in a state of constant activity, and the mind is affected in a certain way. This is a very interesting subject, and is worth reading for the sake of the facts it contains.
