An Interesting Decision

A very interesting decision was rendered by the Supreme Court of California a short time ago in a local case entitled "Hewitt against Dean."

The action was for the foreclosure of mortgage, and the defense set up in the answer of the defendants was the following agreement entered into at the time that the mortgage was given by the defendant to the plaintiff:

"For valuable consideration I hereby promise and agree to give credit for two and one-half per cent within the said one-half per cent interest on the mortgage note signed by Mrs. Cordelia R. Dean and G. L. Dean, in my favor, dated Oct. 26, 1887, provided that the said Mrs. Cornelia R. Dean, and G. L. Dean, shall, on or before the 15th day of December of any year after the present and during the continuance of the said note unpaid, present to me proper official receipts showing the payment of all taxes against the property covered by the mortgage securing payment of said note for that year respectively. R. E. Hewitt."

The purpose of the defense was to show that under Article 3 of Section 13 of the Constitution of this State, the defendants were released from all obligations to pay any interest whatever upon the note secured by the mortgage. This section of the Constitution referred to provides that "every contract hereafter made, by which a debtor is obliged to pay any tax or assessment on money loaned or on any mortgage, deed of trust or other lien, shall, as to any interest specified therein, be null and void." Section 1 of the same article provides that a mortgage by which a debt is secured shall, for the purpose of assessment and taxation, be deemed and treated as an interest in the property affected thereby. The value of the property affected by such mortgage less the value of such security shall be assessed and taxed to the owner thereof. The taxes so levied shall be a lien upon the property and security, and may be paid by either party to such security.

As to this the Supreme Court says: "Assuming that the tax upon the mortgage referred to in Section 5 is a tax "against the property" by virtue of the provision of Section 1 that the mortgage is, for the purposes of taxation, an interest in the property affected thereby, and that the tax levied thereon is a lien upon the property as well as upon the security, the agreement referred to does not contravene the provisions of Section 5. The agreement is solely on the part of the mortgagee, and is in no respect enforceable against the mortgagor, and it cannot, under any theory, be said to be a contract on their part, nor are they by its terms obliged to pay any taxes upon the mortgage." The Supreme Court further says: "It is well known that prior to the adoption of the present Constitution it was a universal custom for the mortgagee to incorporate into the mortgage a stipulation binding the mortgagor to pay all taxes that might be levied upon the mortgage, or the debts secured thereby. Such a provision engendered a vast amount of litigation, and the collection of this tax was stoutly resisted at all points; chiefly upon the ground that a tax imposed upon a loan, and also upon a mortgage was double taxation and unconstitutional. As a consequence of various decisions of the Supreme Court in this litigation, all money loaned upon mortgage security escaped taxation, and the owner of the land mortgaged was compelled to pay more than his share of the expenses of government. It was for the purpose of obviating this circumstance that the constitutional convention adopted the foregoing provisions of Section 5, Article 13, in order that a portion of the taxes might be collected from the mortgagee, and that the burden upon the mortgagor might not at the same time be increased. The provision thus incorporated into the Constitution was intended for the benefit of the borrower, but it is unnecessary to say that the results expected therefrom have not been realized. All experience has shown that the rate of interest is governed by the inflexible laws of trade, and it is regulated by the same law of supply and demand, as that which governs all other articles of commerce, and that legislatures and conventions are powerless in their attempts to change this law; that whenever the State enforces a tax upon a commodity the burden of the tax is borne by the person whose necessities require him to purchase, and not by him who holds it for sale. It is not necessary to add more than to state the proposition that whatever burden the State imposes upon money which is loaned is in reality borne by the borrower and not by the lender; that the lender in fixing the rate of interest for the loan will invariably add the amount of this tax to the market value of the money, and under the guise of interest, collect enough from the borrower to reimburse himself for the amount of the tax."

The Supreme Court therefore held that the agreement set forth was unavailable as a defense; and that the defendants were not released from the payment of the interest; and that the agreement was in entire harmony with the spirit of the Constitution.

California Wines.

California will soon lead all nations or sections in the production of wine and brandies, says Major Truman in a letter to a Chicago paper, excepting of course France, and that its northern counties are sending out light, dry red and white wines that only contain from 1 to 3 per cent more alcohol than the vin ordinaire of Bordeaux and the hocks of Germany and Hungary, and that these cheap Californias are being sold at many of our principal hotels and restaurants, whose proprietors themselves buy in bulk and bottle (and are too honorable to adulterate), demonstrates that these inviting and perfectly proper and harmless stimulants or beverages are pressing their honest way into public favor. From Southern California comes the ports and sherries and madeiras and other excellent heavy sweet wines, which, while they may not yet rank in taste and bouquet with the imported and manufactured ones, are absolutely pure and free from deleterious and unnatural stimulative. No one who has investigated this matter as I have, and who knows positively that not one bottle of still French wine in 500 which lands in New York has not been sophisticated or tampered with in some insidiously artistic way, need be ashamed to entertain his guests with the wines of America. Appoint, it is a curious fact that during the years so many thousands of vineyards of France were destroyed by the phylloxera that dandy country sent out increasing quantities of wine.

The Arizona Kicker.

GLAD TO HEAR IT.—At the meeting of the Common Council on Friday evening Alderman Jim Hill, who had been drinking too much, was ruled out of order and was asked to sit down. He refused and began an abusive speech. His Honor the Mayor (who is ourself) promptly threw him through the window onto the roof of Joe Williams's saloon, and he an hour or two the Alderman was supposed to be dead. He then rallied, however, and yesterday he was able to walk seven feet and get the whisky bottle out of the cupboard.

We are glad to hear that Mr. Hill is mending. We are glad he wasn't killed. We are glad that he will know better than to repeat his performance of Friday evening. As a town we are somewhat loose jointed, as many other Western towns are, but when it comes down to running the Common Council it's going to be run just as slick as any body of the sort in America, or his Honor the Mayor is going to perish by the wayside.

NO BONUS.—We have received an inquiry from a man in St. Louis asking what bonus will be given to those who come to Globe to start in business. No inducement of a financial nature has yet been held out nor is there talk of such action. Those who look the town over are satisfied that it is a good point. As the tax collector was shot last week taxes will be very low this year and perhaps for a time or two to come, and will the climate doesn't neglect business it changes twice a day. Land is very cheap, the two acres for our private graveyard only cost $4. Those who have tried agriculture are buying whisky by the gallon, and that's proof enough of the profits. Only one merchant has failed during the past three years and that was a mistake. There are many natural advantages and no drawbacks, and the young and energetic young man who has the determination to succeed can't strike it too low. That is, of course, he couldn't achieve success here selling hymn books—not right away—and he might find it uphill work as a dancing master. We refer to ordinary business—either by the barrel, gallon or glass.

BETTER NOT COME.—We have received a letter from Professor De Witt Thompson of Chicago asking as if this would be a good town in which to deliver an illustrated lecture on the Holy Land. We don't think so. We have found three or four people during our residence here who incidentally referred to the Holy Land in conversation, but we are satisfied that it is an unknown neighborhood to the great majority. The boys would be sure to get the name mixed up with holy terror and they'd take front seats expecting something as tall as a giraffe and as big as a hill to come out and yell. We know about what takes in this town and what has to fly after the first act, and we advise the professor to pass this town about seven miles away.

Secretary Blaine attended a strawberry festival in Washington one afternoon last week, and came near meeting with a serious accident. While approaching a large pavilion in which the greater number of the guests were gathered, he stepped on a narrow elevated board walk running along a driveway, to greet some friends. Among the latter was Miss Leiter, who, selecting a red rose from a cluster at her belt, extended it in the lapel of his coat. Raising his hat in acknowledgment, the Secretary of State made a misstep, his foot slipped off the board and his length was measured on the ground. He was at once helped to his feet and in response to anxious inquiries, declared himself unhurt. After mounting a short flight of steps the Secretary rested for about five minutes in a little reception room, and then insisted upon joining the company outside, with which he remained some time.

The New Road Law.

This is the last year of the old road system and many road masters. The law made by the last Legislature goes into effect on the first Monday of January next. It provides that each Supervisor District shall constitute a road district; that the Supervisor shall be ex-officio Road Commissioner; that sealed proposals shall be received for keeping in order and repair roads, culverts, etc.; that for the purpose of watering roads in any part of the county, the Supervisors may erect and maintain water works, and for such purposes may purchase or lease real estate or personal property, the cost of such work and the watering of the roads to be charged to the General County Fund, the General Road Fund, or to the districts benefited; that the Road Commissioner shall inspect the work done on the roads of his district and make written reports to the Board in January, April, July and October of each year; that the Road Commissioner shall receive as such 20 cents per mile, one way, for all distance he travels in performance of his road duties, with the understanding that in any one year he shall not receive to exceed $600—the present limit upon road masters; that in their discretion the Supervisors may appoint a Road Inspector for the whole county who shall receive not to exceed the total compensation of the Road Commissioners; that all contracts for building and repairing roads shall be let to the lowest bidder.

It has come to be generally acknowledged that water is the most effective and economical agency that can be employed in the maintenance of our public roads, and under the new law it will undoubtedly figure more conspicuously than it has under the old.

Thirteen Million Voters.

This is the greatest voting nation of the earth. There are more Americans who vote than the voters of any other country; they vote more frequently and elect by popular suffrage a larger proportion of their public officers.

In 1888 nearly eleven million four hundred thousand citizens voted for President. This year the total will be not less than thirteen million.

Whence comes this increase of more than a million and a half votes? From the people of six new States; from the newly naturalized immigrants; from a million young men who will for the first time record their preferences in a national election.

How are you going to vote, young man? You hardly know how much depends upon your answer to that question. Yet it is in general true that a man remains attached through life to the party which receives his first vote.

Those who study the political history of the country will discover that parties have changed but little from the beginning. There have been times of degeneracy and times of revival, periods of timidity and periods of moral courage, years of victory and years of defeat.

Through it all the division has been on nearly the same lines, and the aims and methods of parties have not changed.

It is, therefore, a mistake to think that in the coming election that man casts a sensible vote who looks merely at the personal character or the personal popularity of candidates. If you vote you must vote for one set of principles or another, whatever may be your intention in the matter.

You have more than six months in which to make up your mind. Deliberate, and decide. Study carefully, for upon you are probably making a choice for a lifetime.

Guaranteed Cure.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, upon this condition: If you are afflicted with a Cough, Cold or any Lung, Throat or Chest trouble, and will use this remedy as directed, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We could not make this offer did we not know that Dr. King's New Discovery could be relied on. It never disappoints. Trial bottles free at W. M. Higgins' drug store. Large size 50 cents and $1.

Willie has to go to Work.

Two or three days have now elapsed since Mrs. Frank Leslie and her husband, Willie Wilde, landed in London for the commencement of what will be for both of them an immortal summer vacation. It will be an important vacation for Mrs. Leslie, because before its termination and before she returns to New York an important question will be settled—whether her recent taking unto herself of a husband was or was not a mistake.

In one event she will bring Wilde back with her. In another she will leave him behind in London. If she brings her Willie back to America with her in the fall it will be on the clear understanding that he becomes a worker in the Leslie hive. During the years before she married him Wilde showed an earning power of $5000 or $6000 a year in the field of journalism. Mrs. Leslie will insist that the same earning power be brought into play again with a reasonable degree of earnestness. If Willie refuses to do this he will be left on the other side.

A Leader.

Since its first introduction, Electric Bitters has gained rapidly in popular favor, until now it is clearly in the lead among pure medical tonics and alteratives—containing nothing which permits its use as a beverage or intoxicant, it is recognized as the best and purest medicine for all ailments of Stomach, Liver or Kidneys. It will cure Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, and drive Malaria from the system. Satisfaction guaranteed with each bottle or the money will be refunded. Price only 50 cents per bottle. Sold by W. M. Higgins.

A company has been organized at Phoenix, Arizona, for the construction of the largest artificial reservoir in the world. The site taken is a box canyon 400 yards below the junction of Tonto creek and Salt River. The height of the dam will be 200 feet and it will back water sixteen miles to the Sierra Ancha mountains, making a capacity according to the report of the County Surveyor, of 105,058,000,000 cubic feet of water. Owing to the abundance of lime, rock, timber and other building material on the ground, the cost of building is not expected to exceed $500,000. The new reservoir will have the capacity to irrigate all the lands of the Gila, Verde and Salt valleys from the point where water is taken out to the Colorado river at Yuma. New York capitalists are in the scheme.

History of State Claims Against the United States.

The amount found to be due the State of California, upon the examination of the claims made by the Board of Army Officers appointed by the Secretary of War in pursuance of a resolution of the Senate, is $2,451,366. The basis of this claim is money expended in arming and equipping troops, transportation, etc., and for bounties and relief paid to enlisted men under the several Acts of the Legislature passed in 1863 and 1863-64. The amounts expended for arming and equipment, etc., is about $250,000; the rest was for bounty and relief. Bonds, known as the Soldiers' Relief bonds and Soldiers' Bounty bonds, were issued by the State, and the proceeds derived from the sale of the bonds were applied to the payment of the claims for bounty and relief. The amount expended for arming, equipment, etc., was paid from moneys derived from taxes levied upon in the same manner as other State taxes.

No part whatever of this money came from the School fund. Neither would it go into the State School fund, on the opinion of the San Francisco Bulletin, in the event of the State being repaid. Section 454 of the Political Code provides that the General fund shall consist of all moneys not especially appropriated to any other fund; therefore, this money not having been set apart to any fund, upon its payment into the State Treasury would become a part of the General fund and applicable to the payment of the ordinary expenses of the Government.

It is true that the State has paid interest on this money, but it was paid as interest on the bonds issued. It is also true that the State is even now paying interest thereon, but it is only on a small proportion of it. As explained thus: January, 1873, all the then outstanding bonded indebtedness of the State was refunded and bonds known as the Fund Debt bonds of 1873 were issued, and of this issue there is still outstanding and unpaid about $2,500,000. The Soldiers' Bounty bonds, and the Soldiers' Relief bonds outstanding January, 1873, were refunded, and though some of the new issue of bonds representing the war debt have been paid, there is still a large sum of the war debt, represented by bonds of 1873, upon which the State is yet paying interest.

The five per cent claim is for five per cent of the net proceeds received by the United States from sales of public lands within the State of California. The amount is $500,000. California is the only public-land State which has not received this grant from Congress for its Common School fund. The Enabling Acts for the admission of the public-land States contain a provision allowing the State five per cent on the sales of the land to be applied to school purposes. California being admitted without an Enabling Act, no provision was ever made for its allowance of the usual percentage from the proceeds of land sales.

Chile and Peru.

Under an arrangement made after the war between Chile and Peru the former was to have the nitrate beds for ten years. Then the ownership was to be determined by a plebiscite, or vote of the people, and the country which won was to pay the loser $10,000,000. The time expires next year, and the question which now agitates Peru is whether Chile will carry out the contract.

Mr. Hicks, our Minister to Peru, who has just returned to the United States on a visit, is decidedly skeptical about Chile's keeping faith. He says that Chile receives some $2,000,000 a year as export duties on the nitrate, and that he thinks she will be slow about giving them up, even for $10,000,000. He rather anticipates trouble over the settlement of the question of ownership, in which event Peru would probably get the worst of it again.

The Peruvian Government should have no difficulty in raising the money on the security of the nitrate beds, and if she pledges them to capitalists of another nation and Chile thus refuses to stand by her agreement there would certainly be a chance for a casus belli.

The experience of this country with Chile would tend us to induce the correctness of Minister Hicks' views. Chile will not surrender anything she gets her hands on unless she is compelled to, and Peru is not strong enough to fight her single handed. It is strange, says a San Francisco paper, that Peru did not take sides during the civil war in Chile, since if she had she might have made almost her own terms for the restoration of the nitrate beds.

They all Begin That Way.

She —"Mr. Nicefellow — Mr. George—George, I——"

He—"Say no more. I can only be a brother to you."

She—"But I haven't——"

He—"No, but I know what you were going to say. They all begin that way."

There is a deep mystery surrounding the fate of Louis Ackerman, who was strange disappearance from his home in Pomona on the evening of April 29th caused a sensation. Mrs. Ackerman is in a serious condition, caused by her husband's disappearance. Detectives who have been at work upon the case have found that for the last six weeks of his life Ackerman had made secret sales of some of his property, that he had about $7,000 on his person when he left home. His physicians and his wife think he must have been insane during the last few months. Ackerman was worth over $40,000 when he left Napa county in 1884, and has never been known to lose any money since. The disposal of his money in such a manner is a mystery as his own disappearance. Mrs. Ackerman and her children are left without funds and are dependent upon charity for the support. Ackerman was at one time ran a restaurant in Anaheim.

An editor once went to a home just blessed with an addition to the family to report a party. He met the hostess and asked after the baby's health, but being a little deaf and suffering with the grip she thought he was asking about the grip, and replied that though she usually had one every winter this was the worst one she ever had; it confined her to her bed for a week and kept her awake nights. The quill driver displayed his nervousness, and she added that she knew by his looks that he was going to have one just like hers.

THURSDAY..... MAY 19, 1892.

THE agitation for the sugar factory goes actively on in a quiet but not uncertain way. During the week many new shares have been added to the list, and the excellent showing made by the beets already in the ground in experimental crops warrants the assumption that ere long the entire complement of shares will be secured. A splendid site for the refinery buildings has been selected below town, and the tract, containing forty acres, has been presented to the corporation free of charge. Besides, sufficient water will be developed by artesian wells to meet all the requirements. The tract is in the very center of the artesian belt, and investigations carried on by Prof. Tucker of Los Angeles on Monday, demonstrate the fact that two giant streams intersect one another in the tract less than 300 feet below the surface. This is indeed a very flattering prospect, and will prove nothing short of a bonanza to the refinery corporation. It will result in giving the corporation forty acres of land for the refinery buildings free of charge, with not less than two million gallons of water thrown into the bargain. This should stimulate subscriptions, and not many days should elapse before we may be able to say that half the stock has been subscribed.

The young beets now growing give every indication of thrift and sugar-producing qualities. Experts pronounce them as fine as any they ever saw, the roots going straight down from twelve to fifteen inches into the soil. This is the nature of the sugar beet. With solid bodies of the required size, not too large, and long straight roots going down deep into the soil, and with luxuriant tops to extract their measure of vitality from the sunlight, there is every indication that we have here the best beet growing country in the world. Next October these beets will be put to their test, and it is not too much to say they will go to fully fifteen per cent of sugar. When it is known that beets in this valley have gone to eighteen and even as high as twenty-one per cent of sugar, this is certainly a very moderate estimate. It will be enough, however, to snap up all the necessary shares at that time outstanding, if at that time there be any such. These tests will embrace beets from Garden Grove, Westminster, Buena Park, Norwalk, Artesia, Fullerton and Anaheim—in fact from almost every section in the valley. While there is not the remotest doubt as to the outcome of the tests, they will be watched with peculiar interest nevertheless.

Even if every share be not taken before these tests begin to show what we can do in sugar production, we shall have a plenty of time to get the refinery up and in running order in time to handle next season's crop. The acreage set to beets in the valley ought to be sufficient, if the tests prove satisfactory, to equip not one, but half a dozen refineries. In the mean time, however, the subscriptions to stock are coming in at a satisfactory rate, and we expect soon to be able to say that half the number of shares have been secured.

MR. LITTLEFIELD has we believe given up the idea of carrying the Supervisor contest to the Supreme Court. This leaves Supervisor Schorn in absolute possession of the office to which he was elected at the last election. What we desire to say in this matter is this: The Supervisors have not deigned to draw lots for the long and short term as is required by law. Taking advantage of the fact that the Orange county bill contains nothing about drawing lots, they have ignored this important part of their duties and are now all long-term men! The claim is set up that the board is working under the Orange county bill, and have nothing to do with the law providing for long and short term officers. This is certainly an extreme view of the case, and we opine that before election day rolls round, there will be a plenty of talk about scandalous proceedings to compel the Supervisors to follow out the spirit if not the letter of the law. Again, the question is raised, if the Supervisors refuse to draw lots, and hold over, what precedent will their action have upon future boards?

Let the Supervisors draw lots for the long and the short term, and comply with the law.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA has thrown open wide the portals of the State to admit as guests the National Editorial Association, and has given our distinguished visitors a foretaste of what they may expect during their entire sojourn in the Golden State. It is not vainglorious boasting to say that California will entertain them as no other State in the Union would, for our reputation for lavish hospitality is so well established that what in any other State would be bragging is with us a plain and simple statement of facts which no one will dream of disputing.

The itinerary of our guests has been so arranged as to permit them to see something of the greater portion of California and to get an idea, if nothing more, of the extent and variety of our resources, present and potential. They will be given a glimpse of all our principal industries in active operation, though of course they cannot see the ripened fruit and grapes nor the processes of making them marketable. That they must take the word of their hosts and on their own judgment, formed from the acres of growing trees and vines.

We are entitled to ask of our visitors that when they return to their homes they shall tell what they have seen and learned in California. We throw our grand and glorious State open to them from south to north; we make no attempt to put a fine gloss on anything for the occasion, and all we ask in return of these men of brains, culture and skill in writing shall present to their thousands of readers a fair, unexaggerated account of California as it is. There is room for much improvement, we must all frankly admit, and we do not ask that our guests paint all their pictures rose-colored. If California can become generally known for what she is and what she is certain to be in the future, we shall be amply satisfied.

In the Nick of Time.

The nick of time to stop the course of bladder and kidney complaints is when the organs concerned exhibit a tendency to grow inactive. The healthful impulse toward activity that they receive from Hostetter's Stomach Bitters rescues them from impending danger, and averts such dangerous maladies as Bright's disease and diabetes. Sluggishness of the kidneys increases a liability to chronic rheumatism, gout and dropsy, and since the blood is filtered by these organs in its passage through them, the operation of the bitters serves a doubly happy purpose. The medicine acts without exciting, like the fiery stimulants of commerce. Malarial, dyspeptic, constipated and nervous invalids are thoroughly relieved by it. Since the advent of that shocking malady, la grippe, it has been widely demonstrating its usefulness as a curative and preventative of it.

Section 7.—If the said Western Union Telegraph Company shall fail, neglect or refuse to comply with any provision of this ordinance then and in that event all the rights and privileges granted to the said Western Union Telegraph Company shall be forfeited and this grant shall be null and void.

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

A Site Selected for the Sugar Refinery.

The Buildings Will Be Located Just Beyond the Southern City Limits—Satisfactory Progress Being Made in Forming the Corporation—Other News—Locating Artesian Water—Athletic Exhibition — Remick's Pony—Social and Personal Mention.

The Board of Directors of the Co-operative Sugar Refinery met in regular monthly session at their office on Tuesday.

The principal business transacted was the selection of a site for the factory. The tract chosen is the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 22, containing forty acres, and lies just outside the southern city limits. The tract is a gift to the corporation from the Stearns' Ranchos Company, a deed in escrow having been placed in the Bank of Anaheim.

Stanton & Van Alstine offered to donate a forty-acre tract a couple of miles below town, but the site was not considered available for the factory.

The location of the factory on the site selected will give general satisfaction to the subscribers to stock. An artesian well will be sunk shortly, and the tract got in readiness for building operations, which will begin in all probability at an early date.

The board received four bids from Los Angeles parties offering to furnish the labor and material for the factory buildings and to take bonds of the corporation at par in payment for them. The bids were filed for future consideration.

It was decided to issue a prospectus setting forth the advantages of establishing the refinery here. The same will be issued as soon as the matter can be printed.

The Executive Committee will meet again on Saturday for the purpose of appointing sub-committees to start the work of soliciting stock for the corporation.

Between seven and eight hundred acres have thus far been secured, and it is proposed to double the number within the next two weeks.

Locating Artesian Water.

George R. Tucker, the well known "water locater" of Los Angeles, was in town on Monday for the purpose of locating streams on the property below town selected as the site for the Co-operative Sugar Refinery. Mr. Tucker has achieved great success in his water locations in the Antelope Valley and other parts of Los Angeles county, and his investigations here were looked forward to with a great deal of interest. He uses a simple soft iron divining rod for water and a copper wire for oil. Either one of these he holds in his hands, and when approaching a stream the electrical current manifests itself in the wires, and when passing over a stream, the wire sways toward the body in a very positive manner. This electrical current makes itself apparent either while the operator walks over the ground or while riding in a carriage or other vehicle.

Starting out on Monday afternoon in search of artesian streams, the first water belt was found on West street, abreast of Mr. Wehmeyer's fine young vineyard. Here was found a stream 157 feet in width. Reaching the tract selected for the factory site, just below the Jewish cemetery, Mr. Tucker was driven across lots, holding his water rod in his hands. Suddenly when the horses were traveling at quite a brisk pace, he leaped from the carriage, saying "Here's water," and walked some two hundred feet with the wire swaying at every step. The stream was marked off, and other streams were then located. A site for a well was staked at a point where four distinct streams cross each other about 250 feet below the surface. The greater part of the afternoon was spent in locating the streams, Mr. Tucker walking over the entire tract. As soon as he emerged from the water belt his rod would remain stationary, then stepping back to the edge of the stream the electrical current would come again. In this way he had no difficulty in locating the course of the stream, its width, and to a certain extent its depth below the surface. One stream was found, two hundred feet wide, running from northeast to southwest; and another of a similar width, running from north to south, intersects it on the tract. At this point a big artesian well will be sunk.

Several of the party tried their hand with the divining-rod, including the reporter, who has no hesitancy in saying that, according to Mr. Tucker's theory, there is "thousands of water" in the tract. The rod swayed in his hands precisely as it did in Mr. Tucker's. Col. Everharty, H. C. Gado and Arthur Lewis also tried the rod, and are with us on the water proposition.

Mr. Tucker brings the best of testimonials with him, and, as stated above, has met with conspicuous success in locating streams in various parts of the country. On Tuesday he departed for Catalina, where he goes to locate streams for the Banning boys. He will also try the experiment of attempting to locate water under the ocean on the way over, which he has no doubt he can successfully do.

The Browning Reception.

Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Browning extended their hospitality most graciously to their many friends last Thursday evening by entertaining them at a reception given at the Hotel del Campo. The large dining-room, which was turned into a ballroom for the evening, was beautifully decorated with flowers. Dancing was indulged in by some twenty merry couples, who tripped the light fantastic to the strains of excellent music furnished by a Pasadena orchestra. Games at cards also served to pass the evening pleasantly. Refreshments were served by eight lovely young ladies—Stella Scott, Daisy Landell, Jessie and Winfred Melrose, Fozine Heimann, Zelina Bailey, and Bessie and Alice Bates.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Browing, Mr. and Mrs. L. Browning, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rimpau, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Ryan, Jr., and Mrs. R. Melrose, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Thacker, Mr. and Mrs. J. The New Scale Parasites.

The propagation of the newly imported parasites for the destruction of the red and black scale, which are in charge of Prof. Coquillett at Los Angeles, is being watched with much interest by the orange growers of this section. The black scale parasite, contrary to expectations, is not showing encouraging signs of reproduction, while the parasites for the red scale are increasing but slowly. There is no doubt at all that the latter feeds voraciously on the red scale, and the question that remains to be determined is whether it will propagate rapidly enough to be of any value. They do not produce as rapidly as the vedalia cardinalis, and are by no means as active as the latter insects. The recent cold weather, however, may have had something to do with this retardation. If the present warm spell continues for two or three weeks, however, an opportunity will be given of judging of the value of these new parasites under better conditions.

It has been noticed that the vedalia cardinalis has worked much more slowly this year on the white scale, although it is still doing good work, this being due to the cool weather also. On an average from eight to ten colonies of the parasite are being sent out daily to fruit growers in Southern California. Two large colonies have also been sent to the Bermudas, one large colony to Mexico and one to Tahiti. A colony will consist of from ten to fifty insects, and they propagate rapidly. Farmers receiving these colonies are especially requested to take pains in their care and propagation. The red ant is very destructive to small colonies of the vedalia, and farmers are cautioned against placing them on trees infested with the ants, or else take measures to destroy the ants. Mr. Scott, the Los Angeles Horticultural Commissioner, is always ready to supply colonies to farmers whose trees are infested with white scale.

Athletic Exhibition.

Next Saturday evening at Reiser's Opera-house patrons of the "manly art" will be given an opportunity of witnessing an athletic exhibition of more than ordinary merit. The first bout on the programme will be between Billy Maher, champion lightweight of Australia, and Tom Bernard, champion lightweight of Montana. The next "go" will be between La Blanche, the Marine, and Billy Shannon, the likely instructor of boxing in the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Shannon has many friends down this way, and is sure to be greeted with a large house. He will give the Marine a very lively and interesting go. The event of the evening will be a ten-round contest between Professor Lymburner of Fullerton and Frank Parcell of Salt Lake, whom Maher defeated in fifteen rounds in Los Angeles last week. Lymburner has got himself into the pink of condition, and promises to make it more interesting for Parcell than he did for Betts the other night.

Other local set-tos will be arranged for, and at the conclusion La Blanche will offer to stop or beat any middle-weight in the county in four rounds. It is whispered on the sly that the boys have a boxer coming in from the wilds of Arizona to go against the Marine and mix up with him. The programme is a good one, and the price of admission is low. There should be a large crowd in attendance.

Story of Remick's Pony.

Fisherman Remick didn't come out of his pony trade a winner after all. The pony was first taken up estray by our old friend George Turner of the pest lands, who sold it to a lady of the old colony, who in turn disposed of it to Remick for $25. The other day while Remick had the pony staked on the plains near Long Beach, being himself in search of fish on the bosom of the dark and deep blue sea, beyond Alamitos, the pony's original owner came along and took the pony along with him. When Remick returned from the sea, seeing his pony had disappeared, his consternation knew no bounds. He followed the pony's tracks to Long Beach, discovered the man with it and had him arrested. The trial came on at Downey last week, but the wise Judge ruled that Remick had no right to the pony, and that the man who had taken it from the plains near Long Beach was the rightful owner. Remick was taxed the costs of the suit, which amounted to something like $20. He was out his time, his money, his fish, his pony and everything else.

So he went down to the peat lands to interview the lady from whom he bought the pony. When she learned Remick's story she refunded the money and paid one-third of Remick's court expenses. Then George Turner paid a third of the expenses, and Remick was only out about $5 after all, not counting his time.

But he says he got $5 worth of experience, and that's enough for this time.

A Narrow Escape.

Two life-insurance men had a narrow escape from great bodily harm, and perhaps a violent and ignominious death, one day last week at Orangethorpe. They were out that way in search of business, and accosted Hugo O'Krafike, son of the Superintendent of our electric lighting system, who works on a farm in the neighborhood, and attempted to talk him into taking out a policy. Young O'Krafike didn't know what they were after, and was called to his employer, who cheerfishes a large-sized hatred against all insurance men, to come to his assistance. As soon as the old man saw the insurance men, it was all up with them. They went out of that place flying, only touching the high places. They escaped with their lives, but, the next time they set out that way, they had better take out policies themselves.

Vision of Fair Women.

Next Friday evening at the Opera-house occurs the Native Daughters' entertainment, for which such great preparations have been made during the past several weeks. The programme will include an adaptation of Tennyson's "Vision of Fair Women," which the young ladies assure us will be perfectly lovely. This will be followed by a comedy entitled "A Box of Monkeys," which the young ladies assure us will be ridiculously funny. Ice cream (Gardner's) and other refreshments will be served during the evening, and the entertainment will conclude with a social hop. The indications are that the affair will be one of the events of the season, and that a very large crowd will be in attendance. The young ladies deserve a crowded house, as they have been to great pains to arrange for the entertainment.

"Well, well, is that you? I did not know you in your new dress; it is a lovely piece of goods. Did you get it from the city?"

"Oh, no, my dear Mrs. Bryant, I bought it at H. Cahen's store. Did you not know that he has just received a lovely assortment of Coarderoy, Zephyrs, Chambray, Gingham, Oating Flannels and a lot of other new goods? Go and look at his show-windows and that will give you an idea of the goods you can find there."

Isaac Lyons has arranged his large and complete stock of Hardware upon his shelves and he requests the public to call at his store and inspect stock and prices. His hardware line is the largest and finest in the county. Buyers should see him before purchasing elsewhere. ap17-tf

—Schlange has moved his ice cream establishment into Pamperl's place, and next Sunday will serve ice cream in the garden. He will fit up tables and chairs under the trees, and his customers can have their cream served al fresco without extra charge.

—While Frank Smythe was riding his horse in North Anaheim one day last week, the animal stumbled and threw him to the ground, wrenching his left knee and otherwise bruising him about the body. He was confined to his bed for several days, but is now getting over it.

—The Prohibition County Convention met at Santa Ana last Saturday. Delegates to the State Convention and a new County Central Committee were elected. The Convention adopted resolutions instructing delegates in favor of St. John and General Bidwell at the head of the Presidential ticket.

—A petition numerously signed by the citizens of this school district has been presented to the Secretary of the school board, requesting that our portly and good-looking townsman, Charles Otis Esat, be considered a candidate for the vacancy in the board, to be filled at the election next month.

—"Haman" Hussman will have a chance to shave La Blanche again next Saturday evening. The last time Haman scraped the noted pugilist's chin he was so rattled that he gave him a towel to read and spread a newspaper about his neck before beginning operations. Fact.

—Joe Becher has been the happiest man in town during the week, all on account of a new arrival at his home. His wife presented him with a bouncing boy last Thursday, and the boys all "smiled" with the father on the strength of the happy event. Mother and child doing well, and the old man getting over it.

—Our last week's article on the political situation caused quite a stir among the politicians, only we didn't mean to say that Nichols was a Democrat. Of course the political invalids, who have been in the political hospital since the last election, were given no notice, but may be allowed to pese as caballos negros.

—Julius Schneider doesn't know what to think of the fumigators. They were at work in his orange orchard last Monday night, and some time in the after part of the night he got up to see how they were getting along. He found the entire outfit sound asleep. How long they slept, or had been sleeping, he knows not, but he went back to bed wondering how much his fumigating would cost him.

—Tom Scully was down from Rincon yesterday and dropped in to see us. He reports everything looking well up his way, and the country going ahead at a lively rate. Tom recently paid a visit to the Temescal tin mines and went down into the shaft. One hundred men are now at work in the mines and the development of ore is being made at a very satisfactory rate.

—A. E. McKay, or McDonald, who broke into the Catholic Cathedral in Los Angeles, blew open the altar safe and burglarized the premises, has been sentenced to ten years in the State Prison at Folsom. This is said to be the first conviction for a similar crime in the history of the State. McKay passed several days in Anaheim previous to the robbery, and while here inspected the bank premises. He is a noted burglar, and has served many years in prison. He took his sentence very hard, saying that he was 45 years old and that he did not like to die in prison.

—Some time ago Herman Dickel missed a lengthy piece of garden hose from his place on Palm street, and being of the opinion that it had been stolen along with the other hose that has lately mysteriously disappeared from different parts of the county, he notified the Los Angeles Chief of Police. On Monday Mr. Dickel received the information that his hose had been found in Los Angeles and the thief arrested. Yesterday he learned that it had been sent down to Santa Ana, along with a lot of hose that had been stolen from this county, and he will go over and get it. The hose thief, whose arrest in Los Angeles first prompted Mr. Dickel to write the Chief of Police, is said to have got away with 15,000 feet of hose in the past several weeks. He will doubtless go to jail for an extended term.

—Los Angeles appears to be permeated just now with a religious atmosphere consequent on the revival work of Evangelist Mills, who is drawing audiences of from 3,000 to 5,000 three times a day at Hazard's pavilion. A number of prominent citizens have been converted and made public confessions. All the leading business houses closed their doors for five hours yesterday to enable employees to attend the meetings. The City Council requested the Mayor to close the city offices on that day, appointing it as a day for religious meditation, and that he request by proclamation the cessation of all business. This however the Mayor refused to do, the offices remaining open, but nearly all the employes attended the services.

—Early Tuesday morning Deputy Marshal Bentz discovered some suspicious character prowling about the rear of Lyons' store. An investigation served to drive the fellow away. What he was after it is impossible to say, but as there have been one or two suspicious characters in town lately, rear doors had better be safely locked and barred.

—Alexander Henry entertained his friends at an enjoyable hop at his residence in West Anaheim last Saturday evening. As usual Alex did the right thing, and the lark was soaring are his guests took their departure. Everybody had a jolly good time—which could certainly not be otherwise when Mr. and Mrs. Henry do the honors.

—George Bell strayed into town one evening last week, and being overcome with melancholy sought the illusory consolation of the flowing bowl. He waxed uproarious and bellicose, and was in due time adjudged of the Cadi. Five dollars or five days. George put in five days cleaning the streets.

—Anaheim is rapidly acquiring a cosmopolitan population. Friday night we have a high-class social entertainment, participated in by some of our lovely young ladies, and Saturday evening we have an athletic exhibition participated in by some of our lovely pugs. You pays your money and you takes your choice.

—We have received a copy of the South Bend (Indiana) Tribune containing the announcement that David R. Leeper, formerly a resident of Anaheim, has been elected to the honorable position of Mayor of South Bend, having been inducted into office on the evening of May 9th. Mr. Leeper's many friends in Anaheim will be glad to hear of his political preferment.

—The Orange County Kennel, Gun and Rod Club held its first hunt last Saturday on the Alamitos ranch below town. About one hundred ladies and gentlemen were in attendance. The day's sport was pronounced a brilliant success by those who participated. The day was passed very pleasantly, a number of very fine races being run. A lunch was partaken of at noon, and late in the afternoon the party dispersed, very well pleased with their day's outing.

—Thacker Bros. have a force of about twenty-five men at work at their packing-house, besides a large force of pickers in the orchards. There is not a single idle man to be found in town. Two carloads of oranges are being shipped daily over the Southern Pacific. Every box of oranges shipped from here is stamped "Guaranteed free from frost." Our famous frostless orange belt is rapidly acquiring a world-wide reputation.

—It is announced that the California National Bank of San Diego, which some months ago suspended, will shortly pay its depositors a dividend of ten per cent. This will be pleasant news to Mr. Fowler and Mr. Colton, the first of whom lost $5,000, and the latter $50,000 by the suspension. It is expected that other dividends will follow, and that depositors will be paid something like 60 cents on the dollar. The suspension was a disastrous blow to San Diego.

—R. L. Cooke, the well borer, who is putting down an artesian well for Domingo Bastanchury on his ranch at the foothille north of town, informs us that the well is down 560 feet, in a rocky formation. The well has struck nothing but rock during the last 150 feet. The water rises to within forty feet of the surface, which is forty feet above the level. Mr. Cooke thinks that just as soon as he gets through the rocky strata he will strike a good flowing well, but he is prepared to go down 1,000 feet if necessary.

—Louis Holz was arrested last week on warrants issued out of Judge Fawcett's court at Westminster, one charging him with violation of the local option law, by selling liquors at his saloon at Anaheim Landing on May Day, and the other charging him with selling liquor to a minor. The trial was to have come up at Westminster on Saturday, but Louis obtained a change of venue to Santa Ana and the case will come up for trial some time next week.

—There is a movement on foot among some of the young men of this city and Fullerton to form a military class. It is understood the services of Billy Shannon can be secured at a nominal rate. The Fullerton class already comprises some two dozen young men of that place, and it is thought that the local class will contain as many or more. The movement may lead to the formation of an athletic club and the establishment of a gymnasium. The plan is a good one, and is meeting with cordial favor among the young men of the vicinity.

—An election for School Trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of Trustee Brown's term will be held in this school district on June 7th. Two gentlemen have been prevailed upon by their friends to make the race for the office, namely, C. O. Rost and T. J. Jones. Both gentlemen are "in the hands of their friends," as it were, and neither is a seeker for the office. Both gentlemen are estimable citizens, possessing excellent "material," and either of them would make a capital Trustee. As we can elect but one of them, the choice must be decided by the voters of the district.

—The Board of Directors of the water company met on Friday last to consider a proposition made by Leonard Parker, son of ex-Secretary Gardiner's bondsmen, for a compromise in the suit of the company against Gardiner and his bondsmen. Mr. Parker stated that he was willing to pay $400 or $500 to settle his part of the suit, failing to do which he would take an appeal to the Supreme Court. The judgment of the court in favor of the company amounts to $1,240, and the Directors decided that if Mr. Parker would pay half of the amount—the other of Gardiner's bondsmen being bankrupt—they would drop the suit. Mr. Parker has the proposition under consideration, but has not yet given an answer.

—Some days ago Charley Rasmell missed a razor from his room and a long search failed to reveal its whereabouts. A second one went the same way, and a third was purchased, which also disappeared. Suspicion rested on the fourteen-year-old son of O. V. Knowlton, who had been seen about the premises, and Constable Landell instituted a search of his home. The search revealed the missing articles, and also a watch that had been taken from Herr James' vest pocket while he was playing ball at school over a year ago. The arrest and commitment of young Knowlton would have followed, but for the promise of the boys' parents to look after him in the future. At their earnest solicitation the matter was dropped, but nothing but good behavior will save the youth from the Whittier Reform School.

—Col. Northam was in town on Tuesday, and conveyed to the Co-operative Best Sugar Company the deed to the forty-acre tract below town, selected as the site for the refinery buildings. The Colonel reports business good, but politics a trifle dull just now.

PERSONAL MELANGE.

Fred Hartung was down from Los Angeles last Friday renewing old acquaintances.

Ed. Atherton was in from the ostrich farm on Tuesday and reports the birds doing well.

Mrs. Holmes of Los Angeles is visiting with friends and relatives here, the guest of her sister, Mrs. John Hartung.

Messrs. Krueger and Turcke, who have been on a trip to the northern part of the State, have returned to Anaheim.

A. H. Decker was down from Los Angeles on Tuesday, looking into his real estate interests down this way.

A. J. Mead, formerly a resident of Anaheim, but at present a real-estate dealer of the Angel City, was in town on Tuesday on a short business visit.

Billy Carlisle was called to Los Angeles on Tuesday by the serious illness of his mother. Billy thinks of taking a trip to San Francisco in a week or two.

Mr. Pamperl left with his family on Monday for a visit to his old home in Austria. Their many friends in Anaheim wish them bon voyage.

F. J. Capitain was down from Los Angeles on Tuesday in attendance upon the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Co-operative Sugar Refinery.

Assessor Ross was over to see his friends hereaway one day last week. "Jake" is not troubling himself much about the election this trip, as he holds over for a couple of years yet.

Sheriff Gibson of Los Angeles was in town last Friday on a short visit. Mr. Gibson has the call on the Democratic nomination for Sheriff this year, and will run his opponent a very hard race.

Carl Bennerscheidt paid a visit to Chino on Monday and Tuesday, and found matters progressing nicely. The beets are looking much better, he thinks, than last season. The factory will probably start up operations in a month or so.

M. M. Poole of San Francisco, who owns a forty-acre tract of walnuts west of town, was in the city on Sunday. Mr. Poole is much pleased with his holding, and is of the opinion that we may expect a large immigration out this way in the next two years.

Our townsman Chas. Hilmer has taken his departure with his family for Fresno, where they will in future reside. We expect to see them back in Anaheim one of these fine days. We join their friends in hoping their lines may be cast in pleasant places.

Big Bentz has become a minion of the law. Marshal Steadman has appointed him his deputy, and now that he has had his hair cut pompadour he is ready to enforce the law with well down at high and low degree. Keep your eye on Bentz.

G. H. A. Goodwin of the Los Angeles Poultry Journal, a periodical which no poultry raiser in Southern California can afford to be without, was in town during the latter part of last week. He is a good-fellow came down on his bicycle, with which he makes frequent incursions into the country.

Will McGoffin will open a dancing school at the Del Campo Hotel next Friday evening, May 27th, at 8 o'clock. He will also start a class at Fullerton, the time to be announced later. Professor McGoffin is a good dancer, and can conduct the tripping of the light fantastic toe to a nicety. See his advertisement.

Madame Modjeska and Count Bozenta, who returned from the East last week, were in town on Saturday and Sunday, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Laugenberger. They have gone to their mountain ranch in Santiago Canyon, where they will remain until August, and where they will entertain many of their theatrical friends during the summer. The many friends of the Madame will be pleased to learn that her past season has been particularly successful. She is charmed to get back to her home near Anaheim.

Chris Saalwaechter returned last week from his trip to Cincinnati, whither he had been called some six weeks ago on account of the serious illness of his mother. When he left his Eastern home his mother's health was greatly improved and she is now on the road to recovery. Chris visited the World's Fair grounds at Chicago on his way back, and reports the buildings well advanced toward completion. He advises everyone visiting the Fair from the glorious climate of California to take a plenty of overcoats and blankets along, as the Fair grounds are some seventeen miles out of the Windy City, and the winds blow pretty raw from the lakes. It rained most of the time during his trip, and he also went through a snowstorm in Colorado, and is very glad to get back to sunny skies and pleasant weather.

RIMPAU BROTHERS.

DID BOTH OVERHEAR IT?

It was nearly service time on Sunday morning, and the church bells were tolling their cheery welcome on the frosty air. Pious souls, clad in furs and velvets and other forms of modern purple and fine linen, were hurrying to reach the scenes of their devotions.

Foster Millard was not a pious soul, and he did not hurry. He was not sure that he was going to church at all, and he sauntered leisurely along, with his hands in his overcoat pockets and his big collar turned high around his throat.

What a world it was, to be sure, and what a fool—but, pshaw!—that was all over now, and he was glad of it.

At this moment he became aware of a slight figure enveloped in fur coming down the cross street, and they met at the corner. She held out her hand with a gesture that bespoke embarrassment and uncertainty, and he took it gravely.

"I believe," he said, "it is quite a year since I saw you last, Edith."

"Yes," she said.

Millard turned and joined her in her walk.

"And I believe," he continued, "that I am very glad to see you."

Miss Arnold was silent on this point.

"You might, perhaps, say as much," suggested Millard.

"Are you going to church?" asked Miss Arnold.

"Well, I don't know, that is, I will go if you take me with you."

Miss Arnold hesitated a moment.

"Why, of course, if you like," she said.

Why shouldn't he like, wondered Millard. A pretty girl, good music and lots of people? What difference did it make that once—stuff! He had forgotten all that, and of course she had.

"Have you heard the new rector?" inquired Miss Arnold, evidently with an attempt at conversation.

"No," said Millard. "I have not been there. I am a heathen. You are a missionary. Perhaps I am an angel unaware though."

Miss Arnold laughed.

"That's a trifle mixed, isn't it?" she said.

"Well, perhaps," admitted Millard. "I'm not up in that sort of thing."

"But you used to go to church?"

"Yes, I did—when you took me. I have degenerated. If your theology admits of backsliding, I have backslided. I am now distinctly a heathen."

Miss Arnold laughed again.

"On the contrary, I think you have improved," she said.

"Ah!" said Millard, with faint sarcasm, "I really was not looking for a compliment."

They reached the church and the usher showed them to a seat. Miss Arnold kneeled on the cushion and leaned her head on her little prayer book against the pew in front. Millard watched her silently, as he had done so many times before. She made a pretty picture—dainty, fur wrapped and devout, and the hand that held the prayer book was very small indeed. One little lock of hair had spurned away from restraining hairpins and was curling prettily near her pink ear. He felt a curious desire to put it in place, and then he became conscious of two voices speaking behind him in not inaudible whispers.

"Isn't that Foster Millard with Edith Arnold in front of us?" asked somebody.

"Why, sure enough it is!" said somebody else. "I thought she jilted him a year ago."

"Hush, he will hear you!"

"They must have made it up. Queer, isn't it?"

The choir began to sing again, and the people all rose. Millard heard no more. Edith held her prayer book up to him, and they read the responses out of it. Like those flashes of previous existence that the philosophers talk about, it all came back to him—intangible, indefinite, and yet familiar. How often he had heard that smooth, full voice, reading the same old, sweet words of the Episcopal service. He seemed to take up the thread of life a year back, as if the year just passed had been a dream from which he was now awakening.

The Te Deum was over and they sat down again. Presently the two women behind began to whisper again. Edith was intent upon the service.

"Pretty bonnet she has," said one.

"A trifle too high, I think. They say she threw Howard Gale over too. I don't see what those men find in her. She is a perfect flirt."

"For that reason probably they like her."

"I suppose Mr. Millard took it too easily, and she wants to dangle him again."

"Dangle him?"

"Yes. You know what I mean—keep him around and abuse him."

"Hush! I'm afraid he heard you."

"No, he didn't. It would be a good warning to him, anyway."

Millard moved uneasily, and the whispers broke off suddenly. He wondered if Edith had heard them. He glanced at her, and she looked so unconscious that he concluded she had not.

The rector had commenced his sermon, and she was giving close attention. Millard listened awhile, but it did not interest him. He seemed to have heard the same sermon a thousand times, and his thoughts wandered away into other channels. They went back to the days when he had been wont to read the responses out of Edith Arnold's prayer book, and then he thought of the two women he had heard discussing his case.

He looked at Edith surreptitiously as she sat there listening so intently to the sermon, and he thought she did not look like a girl who would care to "dangle" any one. He knew he might be mistaken, for he did not claim to know women. No man does who has once thought he did. But certainly she did not look like a girl of that sort. He knew she had never seemed so to him, even at the last. But then who could tell? Perhaps she would like to "dangle" him, as they called it.

He wondered if he would care, and concluded that he would not; it might even be pleasant. Something suggested to him that he might let her try, and he favored the suggestion.

They rose to sing the last hymn, and then knelt a moment while the rector prayed. The organist played a low, solemn recessional and the people began to file out.

They passed the choir gallery as they went, and the tenor was helping the alto to put on her furs.

"See," said the alto, "there is Edith Arnold, with Mr. Millard in her train again. They must have made up. You're not looking at all."

"I have something better to look at," said the tenor.

"Oh"— said the alto, and then stopped. Millard turned his collar up again when they reached the door.

"Not a long service" he said, for want of anything better to say.

"No," said Miss Arnold absently. "Did you like the sermon?"

"Well, I don't know. I didn't hear much of it. I forgot to listen."

"Oh!" said Miss Arnold, very much as the alto had said it a moment before.

"I think the soprano would do better if she would leave out some of those trills and quirls," suggested Millard.

"Do you?" said Miss Arnold. "I don't know. I'm afraid I was not listening."

"Oh!" said Millard.

"I don't think I meant that exactly," said Edith.

"Meant what?"

"What you thought when I said I was not listening."

"I had no idea you did."

They walked along awhile without saying anything.

"Edith," said Millard at length, "did you hear what those women behind us were saying during the service?"

Edith looked up seriously innocent.

"What women?" she asked.

"In the pew behind us."

"I was listening to the service," replied Miss Arnold with dignity.

"Except when the soprano sang," commented Millard.

Presently they reached Miss Arnold's home, and he opened the little iron gate for her.

"You had better come in and see mamma," she said.

"Well, perhaps I had," said Millard. He wondered if he was beginning to be "dangled."

Mrs. Arnold and the little sister looked a trifle surprised as the two entered, but each received him cordially in her own way. Little sister slipped her hand into his and gave it a comforting squeeze. That was her method. They were alone when she did it, for Edith went to take off her wraps and Mrs. Arnold went somewhere after a few words with Millard. The latter reflected that he had come in to see mamma, but he did not say anything.

"Are you and Edith spoons again?" asked little sister.

Millard laughed helplessly and wondered what to say. Little sister relieved the situation.

"Because," she continued, without waiting for a reply, "because if you are, I am glad. I don't like the others near so well as I do you."

"Don't you? I'm so glad."

"Are you, really? Say, will you keep still if I tell you something?"

"Like the grave," said Millard.

"And never tell any one I told you?"

"Never."

"Not even Edith?"

"Not even Edith," said Millard solemnly.

"Well, then," said little sister, "I'll tell you. Edith's last beau doesn't come here any more, and I guess she wants another one."

"Oh," said Millard.

"Yes, and I thought perhaps if you knew you would come some more. I do wish you would. You don't snub me like the rest."

"What on earth are you two talking about?" asked Edith, coming into the room at this point.

"Don't you tell," whispered little sister.

"Of course not," said Millard gravely. "We were talking about the weather," he continued to Edith. "Your sister says it is not as cold as it was."

Little sister slid out of the room. "That was an awful fib," she said to Millard as she went out.

A couple of hours later Edith lifted her head from Millard's shoulder and looked up at him a trifle uncertainly.

"Foster," she said, "did you hear what those odious women behind us were saying during service?"

"I did, but you will remember that you did not. You were attending to the service."

"Hush! I am in earnest, Foster!"

"What is it?"

"What did my sister say to you in here?"

"I promised not to tell."

"Never mind, then. Did you believe those women?"

"No, Edith."

"Did you believe what my sister told you?"

"Partly. Not as she meant."

"You are a good boy. I should have believed them if I had been in your place."

"Why?"

"Because," said Edith slowly, "because I am not a man."—J. T. Newcomb in Boston Globe.
