Duties of the Marine Band.

The Marine Band is considered in a manner to belong to the President of the United States. It is always at his disposal, so that the finest music at his command whenever he desires to listen to it. At White House receptions it is on hand with its most melodious strains. Every member of it must enlist in the ordinary way, serve five years as a private at $13a month, after which he may be promoted through the grades of first, second and third class musician. A first-class musician gets $36 a month; a second-class $21 a month, and a third-class $17 a month. The leader draws $90 a month. There are thirty musicians and ten privates in the band. Every man of them gets $48 a year extra for playing in summer at the grounds of the Capitol and the executive mansion. The first place in the list astonishing that first-rate musicians should be willing to serve for such small pay. The fact is that, as a rule, the men enlist for the sake of the practice which they obtain from five years' service in the Marine Band. After serving out this term they have become attached to the organization and seldom remain with it. They enjoy many privileges which go far to make up for the small remuneration which they receive. They are permitted to earn money outside by concerts and otherwise, in this way making a great many dollars.

Completely Uprooted.

How many remedies there are which merely relieve without uprooting disease. The contrast with sterling medicines which such publishers afford, not only enhances the delight of the former, but serves to emphasize the folly of employing half-way measures when thorough ones are available. A marked instance of this is the effect on the case head, of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases of chills and fever and bilious remittent, and on the other of ordinary remedies in maladies of this type. By the bitters, malarial complaint in every stage, and of the most malignant type, are completely conquered and lose their hold upon the system. They are rarely, if ever, dislodged by the ordinary resources of medicine, although their eventual conquest may unquestionably be mitigated through such means. The same holds good of indigestion, biliousness, kidney complaint, rheumatism, neuralgia and debility. By the bitters they are cured when many remedies fail.

Historic Battlefields.

Two historic sites of imperishable fame are to be purchased and preserved in commemoration of great events in the life of the nation. One a Valley Forge and the other Gettysburg. One is associated most critically with the Revolutionary War, and the other with the turning point in the War of the Rebellion. A million dollars has been appropriated by sixteen States to secure the purchase of the latter field of strife, and a bill is pending to acquire the Valley Forge entombments, which are still in existence.

Whatever happens in the progress or decadence of nations, the sites of battle-fields cannot be carried away. They only undergo change. Cornfields, woods and towns take possession of the ground which was trodden down by the serried ranks of the combatants, scarred by the missiles of artillery, and saturated by the blood of the wounded and dead. Most of the scenes of carnage in the United States, Canada and Mexico have already undergone this peaceful transformation. The sites can be described, but their aspect of horror has vanished. Time and nature mercifully heal the wounds.

Hardly a dozen square miles of Europe can be singled out over which armies have not marched or on which they have not been marshaled in camps or to do the fray. The records go back to the classic ages, over two thousand years, and every century teems with the annals of dreadful clash of arms in the field or under the walls of fortified cities. Except in the case Waterloo, no attempt has been made to wrest these sites from their lapse to a natural state. Waterloo has only a few mounds and monuments, and the rest is waving corn, pasture and wood, very picturesque, but quite conjectural as to phases of the great struggle which laid low the scourge of Europe. It is with difficulty today that the battlefields of the contending Roses or the parliamentary and cavalier forces can be traced. Much is guess work as to details. The field of Flodden dominates as peaceful a spot as may be seen in the North part of England, and that of Bannockburn, with its setting of hills and castle rock, owes more to Burns than natural suggestion of what was there arbitrated with frightful slaughter. So, says an entertaining writer in the San Francisco Call, with Gettysburg, Valley Forge and all other scenes of war. Nature will beautify and conceal the trenches and furrows, and those who fight battles ever again will have to rely upon history and painstaking topographical research.

Our Debt to Russia.

That we are under tremendous obligations to the house of Romanoff is recognized by every American who knows the history of his country. Whatever may have been the motive which led Catherine II to join the so-called League of Neutrals, the result of the act was to complete the discouragement of the British ministers, to break the stubborn will of George III and to compel the acknowledgement of American independence. Whatever, again, may have been the purpose controlling the mind of Alexander I when, braving the anger of Napoleon, he refused to enforce the Berlin decrees against the American vessels thronging the Baltic ports, there is no doubt that he rescued from ruin our commerce. We accepted redemption at his hands; we profited by his protection, and it behooves us to remember it.

The services of the house of Romanoff to the American republic culminated in the stand taken on our behalf by Alexander II at a crisis when our national existence was at stake, the French emperor having set forth all his influence at Westminster to persuade the British government to join him in intervening on the side of the southern confederacy. Then it was that the czar, who freed the Russian serfs, caused his embassadors at Paris and London to announce that, if France and England undertook to assure the destruction of the American union and to perpetuate the regime of slavery in the western hemisphere, they would find Russia arrayed against them. Nor was that friendly interposition of Alexander II confined to words. Simultaneously with the utterance of diplomatic warning a Russian fleet was directed to proceed under sealed orders to the harbor of New York, and a Russian fleet was dispatched to the bay of San Francisco. For us, for the American republic, for the consolidation of our union, the czar made known his willingness to fight, and there is not the shadow of a doubt that his willingness averted a catastrophe.

Growing Asparagus.

As for making one bed a light deep soil is best, and yet asparagus will grow almost anywhere; the ground should be thoroughly and deeply plowed and then furrows opened up at least six inches deep about three and one-half feet apart and in the bottom of these furrows plant good strong one or two year-old roots about fifteen inches apart, placing the crowns of the plants so that they will be about two inches under the general surface of the ground when it becomes thoroughly leveled off. For ease of cultivation it is better not to fill up these furrows entirely at the time of planting, just lightly covering the crowns of the roots; after they sprout and begin to grow well, attaining a height of two or three inches, it will be time for the first hoeing and either by horse cultivator in larger fields or by hand hoe in small beds, some of the earth may be tumbled into the trenches and cover up the weeds and save hand weeding about the plants.

It these furrows are not entirely filled up at the first hoeing, so much the better, as it will give an opportunity to repeat the operation the second hoeing becomes necessary. It is a good plan after planting to spread along these furrows some well-rotted stable manure or some high-grade chemical fertilizer rich in nitrogenous matter. After the first year all fertilizers should be broadcasted and thoroughly worked in with hoe or cultivator; liberal feeding and thorough culture will bring abundant crops of asparagus. It is the most economical vegetable to grow in the family garden and is so profitable that I often wonder why more is not planted out.

The Handling of an Appropriation.

The Los Angeles Times has secured a copy of an itemized account of the State Board of Horticulture, certified to by its secretary, as to the expenses of Albert Koebele on his recent trip to the Sandwich Islands and Australia in search of predaceous insects. It shows expenses aggregating $4337.18 out of an appropriation of $8000 made for the purpose by the Legislature of 1889 91. The fact that it cost in 1891 92 nearly three times as much as a similar expedition undertaken by Mr. Koebele in 1888 is enough to pique the curiosity of the public and warrant an investigation. The former expedition occupied eleven months, we believe, and the latter fourteen, but the difference in time does not account for the difference in the bill. While the latter expedition was undoubtedly undertaken with a desire to achieve good results, the fact remains that it turned out a failure so far as the importation of bugs went, as our readers have already been advised. On top of this failure, the State Board of Horticulture applied to the last Legislature for an appropriation of $10,000 to be expended in another Australian bug chase. We are glad to state that this last demand was not honored. When the horticulturists of the southern counties presented a memorial, asking that the appropriation called for be placed in the hands of the United States Department of Entomology or the Agricultural Department of the State University for expenditure, it is said that members and attaches of the State Board of Horticulture were very angry, and declared that if they were not to have the disbursement of the money they would defeat the appropriation altogether. The appropriation was defeated.

The Times has made something of an investigation of the expense bill of Prof. Koebele's last expedition, with such facilities as are at hand, and we have no hesitation in saying that the more light is thrown upon the matter the more astonishing it becomes. Nothing short of an official investigation would show that there has been actual crookedness in the handling of the funds; but we take out such a prima facie case as demands attention from an investigating committee of the next Legislature. It is the opinion of several gentlemen who are familiar with Australian prices (one of whom was a Government commissioner in Koebele's first expedition,) that board bills, hack hire and other items are charged double in many instances and never at less than 75 per cent over what they should have been. Hotel bills average about a £1 a day, whereas it is stated that there are very few hotels in Australia that charge such a price. Railroad fare is charged up at around price, while it is a well known fact that on the Australian lines, which belong to the government, an accredited representative of a foreign State is entitled to free transportation. Prof. Koebele knew this, for he traveled on passes during his former expedition.

People conversant with the case are loath to charge that Koebele has been benefited pecuniarily by the swelling of his accounts, if they have swelled. The opinion is rather that some one in authority above him has been trafficking upon his necessities, and that he could not have secured the appointment of entomologist under the act of 1890 91 had he not previously agreed to the rendering of an account on the plan of "what the traffic would bear." Deputy Commissioner Merry says that Koebele's reputation was good while he was associated with him at the Melbourne fair of 1888.

But that is not the matter under discussion. The question is how much of that $4,337.18 has been absorbed by inflated and fictitious items! It looks as though $1200 to $1600 had been consumed in the "velvet" in the items of board and hack hire. There is a margin of $60 in the matter of steamer fare between San Francisco and Melbourne, as the books of Spreckles Bros. would show. Who got the velvet?

This is a matter in which the whole State is interested, inasmuch as the whole State was taxed to supply the appropriation. But it was in behalf of the fruit interests that the money was appropriated, and the orchardists of this end of the State feel that they have been doubly aggrieved, and they are determined to probe the matter to the bottom. If speculation can be shown they will not rest until the guilty parties are nailed by both ears to the pillory of public execration.

Can This Be Gus Schade?

Los Angeles Express.

"Be you the manager hyar?" inquired a man of the ticket agent in the Spring street office of a pretty well known railroad system. The inquirer was evidently a native son of some county in the back tier. His rural simplicity was very striking. The frost was on his whiskers and his hair was in the shock—in fact a veritable crop of luxuriant alfalfa peeped out from under his paso hat, and his whole personality was redolent of the free air and shimmering fields far from the maddening crowd.

"I'm not manager; I sell tickets," said the agent.

"Well, you're the feller an' I want to talk business with yeh. I'm not foolin', either. I've got a crowd uv fifteen an' we all want to go to the world's fair. Now what—"

"Oh, of course," broke in the agent affably, with views of fifteen big fat fares with only a $2.50 cut each; "it will cost you $97.50 per capita."

"Purtyspity! what's that?" asked the man from way back.

The agent explained with his customary suavity, but bit the remains of his cigar in two in an effort to keep from smiling broadly.

"What I want ter know," said the inquirer, "is what it will cost us to go in a box car where we can put our stove, grub and beddin', and live ekonomical but comfortable like. We hain't never been robbed and don't intend to be. We'll take a tent along with us an' camp out on the World's fair grounds an' do our own cookin' all through. Now I don't see why you can't take us through for the same price as you would a carload of oranges or hogs."

The agent began to take interest in the case and simply remarked that the chances of getting a place to camp out on the world's fair grounds were not promising. He referred the economical excursionist to the freight agent for further particulars, but at last accounts the box car reservation for the crowd of fifteen had not been made.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Over two-thirds of the orange crop of Riverside has been shipped. The total number of carloads sent out is nearly 1,900. There will be probably 400 more carloads of the late varieties. The market the last week is decidedly improved.

The Superior Court of Los Angeles county has rendered a decision to the effect that a nurseryman who sells trees that are not of the variety represented is responsible to the purchaser for damages. There ought to be something more than the mere money involved put upon the tricky nurseryman for a penalty, for the grower, in ascertaining at the end that he has been swindled, has wasted three or four years of valuable time.

A firm of Baltimore grain dealers have exported to France 100 tons of American hay, said to be the first shipment of its kind to European markets. It was sent on an order as a sample of American feed product to see if it will suit the French demand. France and the United Kingdom suffered a severe drought last season, and the hay crop was almost a total failure. It is said the present drought in England is without precedent since 1818.

After waiting for the Burlington and Rock Island to compromise their private troubles the Atchison, late last Wednesday afternoon, announced its rate as $37 50 for the round trip between Denver and Chicago. It becomes $17 50 round trip to Missouri River points, to be put into effect Thursday morning. Unless another string is attached to this notice it will have a tendency to knock the bottom out of the World's Fair rates from all over the west. The great question troubling the roads is, if the lower rates now in force out of the World's Fair, how are they going to get them back again after the fair is over?

The steamer Brigsmore, unloading coal at San Francisco for the Southern Pacific Company, had a narrow escape from destruction last Saturday. When the bottom of one of the wings was reached a valise was uncovered containing fifteen pounds of dynamite and a cocked revolver. These implements of destruction were ingeniously arranged, so that when the ship should be tossed by the waves, or the coal removed, the trigger would be pulled and an explosion result. By a happy chance a small piece of dynamite got under the hammer, thus preventing the discharge of the weapon. The supposition is that the dynamite was placed in the steamer by union sailors.

The case of Dr. W. F. Perry of Perris vs. the Los Angeles Times-Mirror Company for damages in the sum of $25,000 in consequence of the publication in the Times on February 9th last of a libelous article concerning plaintiff was tried in Department 1 of the Superior Court in San Diego last week before Judge Torrance. No answer to the complaint was made by the Times-Mirror Company, although Stephen M. White was retained as counsel for the defense. Default was entered in the case on April 11th, and May 15th was appointed as the day for trial. The case was subsequently continued until last week. After hearing the evidence Judge Torrance rendered a judgment for plaintiff in the sum of $5,000. Perry is a prominent resident of Perris, and the scandal with which his name was associated attracted a good deal of attention at the time. Two hours after the judgment had been rendered an answer was received from the Times by mail. The answer is that the newspaper had been mailed by a correspondent and that further investigation shows the charges made are untrue. The answer also sets up that there was no malice in the publication. But the answer came too late. It will now be necessary to set aside the judgment before the Times can gain admittance to the court for purposes of making an answer.

Monarchs of the Ocean.

When will the speed of the "ocean greyhound" reach its limit? is the question often asked in this age of Atlantic flyers. No sooner has one leviathan steamship been launched than there is talk of another being built to outdo her. The Cunard Steamship Company in its new vessel, the Campania, which arrived in New York on its first trip from the other side a few days ago, has outstripped all its rivals.

The dimensions of the Campania are enormous. Her length over all is 620 feet, her breadth 65 feet, and her estimated horse power is 30,000. She made over twenty-three knots an hour on her trial trip, which is equivalent to more than twenty-seven English miles. Shipping interests are to wonder what this leviathan of the deep was successfully launched, and thought that ship-building had reached its acme of perfection.

During the past week, however, rumors have been spreading abroad that the White Star Company has in contemplation a new vessel which will put into the shade the rival Campania, and even make the Great Eastern look small in comparison. The name of the new vessel will be the Gigantic, and she will not belie her name. The White Star Company is keeping the matter very quiet and refuses to give definite particulars about its new vessel.

It has leaked out that the Gigantic is intended to be the swiftest and largest steamship afloat. Her length will be 760 feet, her beam 68 feet and her engines will develop 45,000 horse-power. The new vessel will thus be longer than the Great Eastern, but her beam will be fourteen feet less.

The horse-power of the Great Eastern was only 7500 while that of the Gigantic will be 45,000. This is an enormous difference, and is an example of the vast strides that have been made of late years in mechanical engineering.

The Gigantic will, it is expected, make twenty-seven knots an hour, and will be able to make the run from Queenstown to New York in a little over four days. The White Star owners hope the Campania to do is to cross the Atlantic in five days, so that if the Gigantic can do it in four days there will be a complete revolution in ship building.

THURSDAY..........................JUNE 8, 1893

MR. H. T. FINCK, the well-known musical critic of the New York Evening Post, who is a brother-in-law to our well-known fellow-citizen Max Nebelung, arrived from the East on Monday, accompanied by his wife, and both were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nebelung until this morning, when they took their departure for San Diego, to remain a day or two before leaving for the north. Mr. Finck is an author as well as a musical critic, having produced five volumes, and enjoys a very high reputation among the writers of the metropolis. He is off on his usual summer vacation, and is here for the purpose of gathering data for a new edition of his book, "Scenic Tour of the Pacific Coast." He will visit the Yosemite and go as far north as Sitka, the Alaskan trip being undertaken as much for Mrs. Finck's pleasure, she never having been so far north. Mr. Finck has lately brought out a volume on Wagner, combining an historical sketch of the romantic life of the master, as well as a comprehensive review of his works, of which he is as well qualified as any man in the country to speak. The book has already attained a wide celebrity both at home and abroad, and has been especially well received by the press and public, maugre a two-column snarl about it in the London Saturday Review, which is never known to speak well of anything American. In winter Mr. Finck's time is taken up entirely with his duties as a musical critic, and those who know what this means on openings nights in the height of the operatic season will readily conceive that, though he has his assistants, his duties are necessarily arduous. Yet his paper ranks with the best in the metropolis in its art, music and dramatic departments. Sometimes he "samples" a dozen theatres of an evening, which to a novice would seem in the nature of sight-seeing indeed, but to a critic it is drudgery—sometimes he is awfully bored, but he must see what is "going on" nevertheless. Mr. Finck is a charming gentleman, of scholarly attainments, extensive travel and wide observation. He has been seven times across the Atlantic, travels extensively in this country every year, knows all the New York newspaper men of note, and is withal most pleasant, agreeable and companionable. We are sorry his limited vacation precludes the possibility of his remaining with us longer, but he has to hurry on in time to make his Alaskan trip and let Mrs. Finck view the wonders of the Muir glacier, and get back to New York in time for the opening of the operatic season in the Fall. Next year he goes to Europe, and the year after expects to visit California again, when we hope it will be permitted him to remain with us longer than in the present instance.

MRS. FRANK LESLIE has begun an action for divorce from her husband Willie Wilde. The couple were through here with the National press clubs last year, when Wilde set himself down admirably as a vulgar upstart. Mrs. Leslie met and fell in love with Wilde, who is a brother of Oscar Wilde, two years ago. There was a quiet wedding and a brief honeymoon. Willie exhibited a fondness for liquor from the start, and on his wedding night became beastly intoxicated and continued the spree for a week. He would not get up until dinner time, although Leslie would be out on business at early hours. When he left his teeth on the bureau, forgetting to put them in his mouth, it gave him an aged and repulsive look, which was very disagreeable to her; neither was it agreeable to her to foot the bills at the Lotus Club for liquors, amounting to from $50 to $70 per week. Willie was a high flyer. At a performance at a New York theater, after repeated trips out to "see a man," during and between the acts, he arose in the box occupied by his wife and a party of friends and insisted on talking to and ordering the actors about on the stage. This enraged the audience so that it was proposed to put him out of the theater, but he saved them the trouble by going out unassisted. Since the suit was begun Mrs. Leslie declares that she has been in receipt of from three to six letters weekly from "Willie" in which he has begged and coaxed to be taken back.

THE Secretary of the American Sabbath Union, Dr. George, has recently expressed himself to the effect that Congress "must and shall immediately pass a stringent law" prohibiting the transportation and distribution of mail on Sundays. The New York Herald answers the gentleman in the following short but summary manner: "When Stephenson began to operate his first railroad he was asked by a member of the commission, if it would not be very bad if a cow would stray on the track in front of the locomotive? His only answer was, 'Yes, indeed, very bad for the cow.' Mr. George is playing the part of that quadruped, and we are sorry for him. Why should the transportation of mail on Sundays be any worse than that of passengers on street cars? If we have arrived at that point, then let us carry out the whole plan just as reasonable—no more mail, letters, papers, streetcars, hacks, telephones, telegraphs, nor even a walk on Sunday. For all trespassers we might erect a 'stock' on Union square and a 'whipping post' on Madison square. If this would not be enough we might make preparations to cook some of our trespassing citizens in boiling oil, or some other such methods in vogue three or four centuries ago. But after all we think it much better if Dr. George would keep away from that track, because as Mr. Stephenson said, 'It might be very bad for the cow.'"

THE contest between the southern horticulturists and the State Board of Horticulture promises to be a protracted and bitter one. The contest was precipitated by President Elwood Cooper, who introduced a resolution to boycott the southern part of the State because of the expenditure by the State Board of Horticulture. The proposed bug expedition to Australia was opposed by the fruit growers in this section. Southern horticulturists have taken up Mr. Cooper's gauntlet and say they will stop at nothing short of a complete reorganization and reformation of the State Board, which they charge with incompetency and worse. On the first page this morning will be found a reference to the expenses of Albert Koebele on his recent trip to the Sandwich Islands and Australia in search of predaceous insects. This shows expenses of $4,337 out of an appropriation of $5,000 made by the Legislature of 1890. It is shown that this expedition cost more than three times as much as a similar expedition undertaken by Mr. Koebele in 1888. The conclusion is that at least $1,200 to $1,600 of the amount has "disappeared." The general impression is that Mr. Koebele did not profit by these over charges.

The Lost Pegleg Mine.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ingram and Mr. Seabold, a Baptist clergyman of San Diego, left that city Saturday for a rich mine discovered by Mrs. Ingram seven months ago on the desert, to more fully locate it and secure information necessary to obtain a title to the property. It is believed to be the lost Pegleg mine. The ore assays $3,500 to the ton and the vein is four feet wide. Four claims have been staked off by Ingram, each fully 1,500 feet long, and water can be secured in abundance close at hand. The location is given as in the Cocopah mountains near the proposed route of the San Diego and Phoenix railway. The present expedition is merely to secure information necessary to filing definitely upon the claims already staked off. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram have spent nearly three years in the desert looking for the mine, and were leaving in October when guided to the mine by an Indian. Ingram stayed at the foot of the mountain, having little confidence in the story of the Indian, but his wife climbed to the place designated and brought back such rich specimens of ore that Ingram carefully prospected the field and he is confident they have a bonanza. They knew Pegleg Smith, and received from his physician such information as to the location of the mine they were confident it really existed. Much excitement exists at San Diego over the discovery.

Robbing the Grower.

Orange News.

We were permitted yesterday to examine a statement just received by one of our orange growers of the returns for two carloads of oranges lately marketed in the east—one carload at Chicago and the other at Boston. The account stood as follows:

Two carloads of oranges.........		$1,194 61
Packing..............................	$212 80
Commission.........................	174 21
Freight..............................	697 00
Cartage..............................	15 00
Total..............................$1,099 01
Draft to grower..................	95 60
		$1,194 61

The fruit was seedlings of good quality. This gives the grower about 15 cents per box for his fruit. Oranges of this quality are retailing in eastern cities at 30 cents per dozen, at which rate this shipment would leave a nice plum of $1,600 between the commission man and the consumer. It will be noticed that all those operating between the grower and the consumer have good pay for their labor. Is it any wonder that orange growers have become tired of this manner of doing business and have determined to take the matter of marketing their fruit into their own hands?

At Montreal, Canada, last week Lee Stanton, an English painter, bought for $2 at a railway sale of unclaimed baggage a valise containing $107,000 worth of fully paid-up stock of the Western Gas Improvement Co. of Chicago. The valise belonged to Louis Halberstadt of Narrville, Ill., who died in Brookville, Ont., in the fall of 1891 from the effects of drink. A large amount of money and jewelry, which he was known to have had before his death, was missing. It is believed he was robbed.

Some interesting legal questions are involved in connection with the redistricting of Supervisorial districts in San Bernardino county, arising out of the formation of Riverside county and the removal by law of Supervisor White from the board. The latter says that when a vacancy occurs the election of a successor shall be held on the fifth Tuesday thereafter. In the present case the question arises whether the vacancy took place on the day when the new officers of Riverside county were declared elected or on June 5th, when the county officers began the legal business of the new county.

Mr. Gilbert is in charge of the work, and has a force of men uncovering a ledge. The indications are good, and they expect to get at least a twenty-foot face, which will in all probability increase in size as they get further into the hill. The crude asphalt will be conveyed from the hill to the refining kettles by means of long chutes. The company also expect to clean out two or three of the oil wells on the premises, and possibly sink one or two more. If the asphalt is found in as large bodies as Mr. Gilbert expects they will put in a large plant for the manufacture of asphaltum pipe.

LATE NEWS OF THE WEEK

Wilson & Lamme Scorn to Work Without Pay.

A Sharp Response to the Irrigation District's Invitation to Look Out for Them in the Courts for Nothing —The Horse Reporter Descants on Arizona Charley—Water Board—Coroner Ey and His Note Which Was Assessed—Mr. Arimond and the Old Tea Kettle—Other Items—Social News and Personal Mention

The Board of Directors of the Anaheim Irrigation District met in regular session on Tuesday. Present, Directors Korn, Staley, Stadtegger and Carroll. Absent, Mr. Porter.

The Secretary read the communications received since the last meeting. Among them was one from Wilson & Lamme, the former attorneys of the district, in reference to the suggestion of the board, that inasmuch as a suit had been brought against the district, and it had been alleged that improper steps had been taken under their advice, they assist the present attorneys, Messrs. Brousseau & Thomas, and their services to be given free of charge. Messrs. Wilson & Lamme look upon the suggestion with haughty scorn, and insist that there must be some mistake made by the Secretary in transcribing the resolution asking them to act without pay. They write that it cannot be possible that the board could make such an unreasonable request, and add further that they are not in the habit of giving their services free, and say the nearest they ever came to working for nothing was while in the employ of the district, after their $5,000 salary had been cut in twain. Their letter refers incidentally to the discourtesy of this missing item, and says that when they came to act as the legal advisers of the district they did not undertake to guarantee that no lawsuits would be brought against the district. Further, the retention of their services after Brousseau & Thomas had been employed to defend the case might be construed as a reflection upon the ability of the latter, and so, coupled with the interesting fact that there will be no money for their services in sight, they refuse to act. They feel themselves free, however, to accept retainers from the other side in all matters against the district, except in so far as may refer to the legality of the formation of the district, and if they appeared in the suit it would be in defense of the district. Further they say that when the condemnation suits of the district are brought in court they will appear and ask pay for their services in preparing the condemnation papers. The letter was filed.

The salary of Wilson & Lamme was originally $5,000 per year, but latterly was reduced one-half, and subsequently still further reduced to $100 per month, and $1,250 for each of the condemnation suits. Brousseau & Thomas serve for $600 per year.

A communication was received from Dr. Harris in reference to the bonds. The bond buyers are still anxious to purchase the securities, and will undoubtedly do so as soon as the suit questioning the legality of their issue shall be decided. The demurrer of the district in the suit will be argued before the Superior Court at Santa Ana to-day.

The Treasurer reported a balance on hand amounting to $3,121 84.

Messrs. Stadtegger, Staley and Porter were appointed a committee to draft by-laws, to report at the next regular meeting.

The following bills were audited and ordered paid:

F. A. Koro, salary	$12 40
B. V. Garwood, salary	46 13
Geo. Stadtegger, salary	14 80
Theo. Staley, "	10 30
W. A. Witte, "	10 03
Tim Carroll, "	12 50
Theo. Staley, "	24 00
Jos Backs, rent	5 00
Total	$135 75

ARIZONA CHARLEY.

HIS FIN DE SIECLE REPRESENTATION OF AN APACHE RAID REPULSED BY COWBOYS—THE OLD STAGE COACH.

You may talk about your Booth and Barrett tragedy, your Mary Anderson de Navarro, Ada Rehan and her silver statue, about Patti, Remenyi, Baron Chevrail and Paderewski—but give us Arizona Charley every time! His fin de siecle representation of the old stagecoach set upon by ambushed Indians and later rescued by the cowboys—is fin de siecle and out of sight—a realistic representation of border warfare, and sets the blood throbbing quick about one's eyebrows. The old stagecoach, which has the reputation of having been stood up oftener than any vehicle that ever crossed the plains, filled as it is with numerous bullet holes in testimony of the fact, starts out on its perilous journey around the track, hitched to four prancing steeds, bearing a conglomerate mass of passengers, and watched with eager eyes by the multitude in the grandstand. At the three-quarter pole it is set upon by the Indians, who come now from behind a big hay stack. The coach passes the stack, and when some twenty yards further on the Indians trail out on their ponies, one after the other, filling the air with warwhoops and rifle shots. The stage horses are whipped into a gallop, and the weather-beaten vehicle comes rattling down into the homestretch lickety-splitter. The Indians are about to take the works, when suddenly, half way home, Arizona Charley and his band of cowboys plunge bravely forward, and, behind the other haystack, shooting into the Indians right and left, and spreading a red-eyed consternation among them. The coach comes jolting under the wire at a gallop, the driver lashing the horses into a fury, and the single cowboy guard, laying prone upon his back on the roof, pumping lead into the redskins in great shape. The track is strewn with the Indians slain. The cowboys come galloping up, and the stagecoach, speeding out of sight behind another haystack, returns, presently, to tell of another ambush and another escape. It is clear out of sight! Then Arizona Charley comes galloping up on his untamed steed, amid the huzzas of the excited populace, waving his silver-spangled sombrero, and his raven locks streaming in the wind. Then the dead Indians are gathered up and carried to their tents, whence they emerge shortly after to engage in bow and arrow practice. It is worth the price of admission, and beats a baseball game two to nothing.

Arizona Charley is no slouch. He has been around the world and has killed more Indians than would patch the Chicago stock yards for a mile. He gallops by and breaks three clay pigeons at three shots with a rifle, shooting ahead, then abreast, then over his shoulder, and he never misses a bird. His glass-ball shooting is also a notable feature of the show, and he takes part in all the cowboy games. In lariat throwing, picking up handkerchiefs from the ground in passing by on horseback at a gallop, and the other games usually seen at a first-class Wild West show, he takes preeminence, and he never misses a trick.

He is a modest chap, big and good-looking and we'd rather be him than the President of a Board of Aldermen.

THE WATER COMPANY

A GOOD DAY FOR COMMUNICATIONS—CORONER EY WANTS TEN PER CENT, BECAUSE HIS MONEY COULD NOT ESCAPE TAXATION.

The Board of Directors of the Anaheim Water Company met in regular session on Saturday. Present, Directors Kellogg, McFadden, Amerige, Tuffree, Rust and Zeyn. Absent, Mr. Botsford. In the absence of the Chairman, who came in late, Mr. Zeyn occupied the chair.

The reports of the Secretary, Treasurer and Superintendent were read and filed. The Treasurer reported a balance on hand in favor of the company of $4,425 52.

A communication was received from W. L. Hale about the ditch across the Northam ranch, which is not being taken proper care of, the banks being left uncleaned. He recommends that the ditch be piped. Laid on the table, to be taken up on Mr. Hale's return from the honeymoon on Coronado.

Communication from the Yorba irrigators, per Geo. Stadtegger, making a demand that sufficient water be permitted to run into their ditch as per the terms of the temporary injunction. The claim is made by them that the Cajon and Anaheim ditches carry nearly all the water coming to this side of the river, and that scarcely 100 inches remain to flow into the Yorba ditch. The Secretary was instructed to inform them they were receiving their full share of water.

Coroner Ey wrote that his wife, Caroline Ey, desired a new note dated June 1st, 1893, for the $4,000 due her by the company, and to bear 10 per cent interest. The Coroner complains that his note was seized upon and assessed for taxes for the current fiscal year, whereas, had there been money in the company's treasury, he could have withdrawn the collateral and escaped taxation. He had been advised by the Secretary not to call for his money at the time the assessment was being made, and Assessor Ross hove in sight and assessed the same, as he of right and justice ought to do. The company is not paying over 8 per cent for money these days, and the Secretary was instructed to notify the Coroner to come down two cents on his demand for interest, or the money will be placed at his disposal in thirty days.

Mr. Montgomery wrote from Santa Ana to say that Mr. Fred Kloth of Yorba had advised him that he had sustained damages by the breaking of the ditch, in the amount of twenty circulating simoleons of the realm. Mr. Montgomery desires to know whether the board would pay the same, or leave it to a jury to decide. Referred to the Superintendent.

Amy J. Smith favored the board with a letter, saying that the flume through the McDuffie estate at Yorba was in a shockingly bad condition; that water runs over the sides of it and leaks through the bottom, making her land beneath a sure enough quagmire. The Secretary was instructed to write the lady that the board, foreseeing that complaint might be made of the flume's unbusinesslike condition, had already ordered the same repaired and put in good working order.

Senor de los Reyes and Filomen Valenzula, residents of the classic shades of Yorba, wrote demanding damages in the sum of $40 by reason of ditch overflow. Referred to Director Amerige, who speaks Spanish fluently, and the Superintendent, to act as a committee on conference and arbitration, with power to settle the business without further action by the board.

Engineer Kellogg reported that he had examined Mr. Shepperd's work on the new ditch and had found everything all right excepting a short piece below the big chute which was not as wide as the specifications called for. But as the ditch is in a loose formation it will soon wash out to the required width, Mr. Kellogg thinks, and he therefore recommends the acceptance of the work. Some little cleaning will have to be done, however, and this the Superintendent will do at Mr. Shepperd's expense, the same not to go over $3. Adopted.

Peter Hansen wrote saying that last Fall when the zanjero was running water to N. Johnson in Placentia he turned too much water in the ditch, with the result that the gate at Mr. Hansen's corner was washed out. The zanjero promised to repair the gate at once, requesting the gentleman parenthetically not to mention the occurrence to the Directors. He went on his way rejoicing, and has since been time refused and still refuses to fix the gate. No action taken. The gate remains in statu quo.

Peter Arimond presented a bill in the sum of $1 85. The gold bed was one of the usefulness o'er, cast out into the world by the thrifty housewife, had lodged in the water pipe de mode under Lemon street, and had raised the water until it threatened to inundate Mr. Arimond's premises. Rather than have his place overflowed he proceeded to make an incision in the ditch, sending the water down Lemon street in such volume as to come near drowning out Dr. Higgins. When the angry waters subsided he paid a small boy a quarter to crawl in the pipe and fish out the kettle. For all of this trouble and expense Mr. Arimond desired the company to reimburse him in the paltry sum of $1 85, but the board couldn't see it, and referred the bill back to him. People should refrain from casting their old oil cans, disabled teakettles, tube cars, etc., into the ditches, as they are likely at times to work serious harm. Rather assume a meek and lowly spirit and keep them at home to fatten goats with.

A. McDermont wrote the board saying that he wanted his money. The company owe him $1,600. The Secretary paid him a thousand Monday morning.

The board paid bills to the amount of $973 18, and stood adjourned for two weeks.

Mrs. Rust's Rose Luncheon.

Mrs. Rust's rose luncheon given last Thursday in honor of Mrs. Lieutenant-Governor Reddick was the social event of the week. The tables were covered with lovely pinks and roses, set upon a groundwork of mirrors. The lights were shrouded, and the dining-room lighted up by pink candelabras, producing a very striking and novel effect. An elegant lunch was served in courses, to which the guests did ample justice. Mrs. Rust, who is ever a most charming and agreeable hostess, was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Kohl and Mrs. Des Granges Sr. Those present were Mrs. Rust, Mrs. Reddick, Mrs. Koll, Mrs. Des Granges Sr., Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. L. Browning, Mrs. Thacker, Mrs. James, Miss Lulu James, Mrs. Landell, Mrs. Hartung, Mrs. Everhardy, Mrs. Heimann, Mrs. Kuchel, Mrs. Grogan, Mrs. Cohen, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Melrose.

Kimball, Taribio Morales, Mrs. Manican, Senor Pablo Migel, Mrs. Annie Morries, Walter L. Thales, S. O. Wood (2).

Kleinigkeiten.

—Schools let out to-morrow for the summer vacation.

—Eighteen votes were cast at the school election last Friday, all for Mr. Heald.

—There is more water in the ditches than for a long time past, and everybody is irrigating.

—This is the weather that prompts people to ask the reporter, "Is this warm enough for you?" Yes'm, this will do.

—Commencement exercises will be held at St. Catherine's Academy during the latter part of the month.

—The suit of Pierce vs. Culton has been dismissed, the defendant having paid plaintiff's claim and the cost of the action.

—The break in the Santa Fe track at Horseshoe Bend has been repaired and trains are running over the road on time again.

—There was no quorum at the meeting of City Trustees Tuesday and the meeting adjourned to the next regular meeting day.

—The large plate glass in Cahen's corner window, which was shattered by a stone some weeks ago, was replaced on Tuesday.

—"Spote" Wetzel has taken a position as day clerk at the Commercial Hotel, and occupies his time now in entertaining the guests of the popular hostelry.

—The resignation of Ernest Browning as Captain of Company G has been accepted at headquarters, and an election will be called to choose his successor.

—A marriage license was issued Tuesday to Herman Koster, aged 47 years, a resident of Soquel canyon, and Charlotte Bank, 46, of Santa Ana.

—It is reported that Dr. Pfeninger has employed a Santa Ana lawyer to see whether the co-operative beet refinery company cannot be disincorporated. We are afraid the Dr. is putting his money to poor uses.

—In the case of H. C. Gade, insolvent, the accounts of the receiver were approved in the Superior Court last week, and the same were allowed and settled. The balance remaining has been ordered paid over to Mr. Roerding, who brought the attachment suit.

—We acknowledge the receipt of a box of very fine cherries through the mail from some mysterious source at Beaumont. The fact that two of Anaheim's most charming young ladies are sojourning at that point would seem to afford a clue to the identity of the givers. Call again, girls.

—A very pleasant party was given at the residence of the Misses Zeyn last Saturday evening, in honor of Miss Jessie Weiss. The evening was pleasantly spent in parlor games. A bountiful supply of refreshments was dispensed during the evening, and later the party dispersed.

—Next Sunday, June 11th, there will be a grand excursion from Los Angeles to Santa Monica over the Southern Pacific. Round trip tickets from Anaheim to Santa Monica $1 35, every Sunday. Go and see the mammoth wharf. Bands of music in attendance all day.

—The Cudahy packing plant began slaughtering hogs in Los Angeles last week, when 200 hogs were slaughtered the first day. The works have a capacity of 500 hogs a day. They offer seven cents and a half a pound for hogs on the hoof, and the supply is not able to meet the demand. Nor will it be, for there are no hogs in the country.

—The series of revival meetings that have been conducted at the Methodist Church during the past two weeks came to an end on Sunday evening, when the Christian Endeavorers of the Presbyterian Church and the Fullerton church choir were in attendance and a large congregation listened to a very interesting sermon. A number of concerts were made.

—Don Vicente Yorbs celebrated the advent of a son and heir at his home on Sunday by giving a grand barbecue and inviting his friends to come and partake of his hospitality for miles and miles around. Don Vicente has a family of several very charming daughters, and the new arrival makes the first son in the household, whereat Don Vicente rejoices with exceeding great joy.

—At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors last Monday District Attorney Scarborough was instructed to prepare an ordinance establishing cemeteries, and regulating the removal of bodies. Auditor Hall reported that there should be $69,841 36 in the county treasury, and on examination by the Board the same was found to be correct and the money on hand. A saloon license was granted Senor Don Miguel Krahewski at the San Juan Springs.

—It has been suggested that an appropriate celebration for the forthcoming Fourth of July would be a grand picnic in the Santiago, to be attended by the patriotic citizens from all sections of the county, and fireworks and illuminations at home in the evening. The idea is not at all a bad one, and if carried out will afford an agreeable change from the usual method of celebrating the glorious holiday.

—Mr. Gosch notices that his orange trees are late in budding out, some of his trees not having put forth any bloom at all as yet. This backwardness in the blooming season is and will cause several sections of the county from which reports have been received, and is altogether unaccountable. Perhaps it is due to climatic causes, for some of the trees which were heavily laden with bloom last year as early as February are just beginning to bloom this season. The others will probably bud out later on, and the orchard yield its usual quantity of excellent fruit.

—Bro. Starbuck of Fullerton thirsts after bicycle information, and consequently sent the following questions to the San Francisco Examiner: "Could you let me know what is the best United States time and world's time on safety bicycles and by whom made?" The Examiner got the name wrong and spelled it Starbrick, because Br. Starbuck writes an awful hand, but answers the questions as follows: "The world's race record was made by W. W. Windle, against time, at Springfield, Mass., October 8, 1892, one mile, 2:05 3-5. J. S. Jackson made a record of 1:56 3-5 with flying start at Independence, Ia., September 22, 1892."

—The Pacific Coast Steamship Company has put into effect an entirely new time table. Passenger steamers will hereafter stop at Santa Monica, or what is now called Port Los Angeles. The steamers Santa Rosa and Coos Bay sail regularly at Port Los Angeles and Redondo, and they will not stop at San Pedro or East San Pedro, a new point in the schedule. The steamers Pomona and Eureka will call at San Pedro and East San Pedro, but not at Redondo or Port Los Angeles. The new schedule will be found in its accustomed place on the fourth page.

—In the suit of the Stearns Ranchos Company vs. the Los Angeles Lighting Company in the Superior Court last week judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, as prayed for. Suit was brought to restrain the defendants from mining the brea fields in Brea canyon, in which they have built up rather an extensive and profitable business. The defendants were Burdette Chandler, W. S. Maxwell, Maria Antonia da Pierce, wife of Armand La Pierce, J. J. Woodworth, Rosa B. Rimpau, Mamie E. De Camp, Robert C. Woodworth, Phineas E. Woolworth, Wm. H. Perry and Henry C. Hyde, assignee in bankruptcy of John Galler. Default was entered, and judgment was awarded the plaintiffs.

—Last Wednesday the marriage of Mr. W. L. Hale and Miss Dora Boache was celebrated at the residence of Mr. Henry Hetebrink at Placentia, the Rev. Mr. Schroder of the German Methodist Church officiating. Only the near friends of the high contracting couple were present. After the ceremony the happy couple took their departure on the train for Coronado, where the honeymoon was spent. They returned the early part of the week, and have gone to housekeeping in the cottage on the Botsford ranch. We join the many friends of the happy couple in wishing them a long and peaceful journey through life.

—Antonio Miranda, the festive Mexican who hired a rig from Lewis' stable and took it over to Fullerton and sold it, being arrested on a charge of embezzlement therefor, has been discharged from custody. He was convicted on the first trial, but the jury disagreed on the second, after being out thirty-six hours. The second trial was granted on the ground that Miranda had sold the rig on the first day out, whereas he claimed to have hired it for four days—giving him three days in which to return it? It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that a conviction was improbable, on motion of the District Attorney the defendant was dismissed.

—The Centralia creamery is running and anxious to get all the milk they can. In fact, there is not enough milk to keep the factory going; that is, in one sense of the word. The extractor, on which so many of our people depended, it appears from actual experience, is really only available in cold weather, and it has been decided to drop it during the summer months and extract the cream from the milk when put in the great big churn that Mr. Raab has in position, and secures from it the best kind of butter. Mr. Raab is to be commended for this wise determination and the success that at large will no doubt rejoice at getting the product of the Jersey, Holstein and other cattle worked into a superior quality of butter.

—What is reckoned by some as being a very amusing incident occurs at the Santa Fe depot every Sunday evening just as the 5:58 overland goes north. A rising young gentleman of the Angelic City calls regularly every Sunday to court his enamorata here, and as regularly does his alliance accompany him to the depot on his return home. Of course their conversation while in waiting is of the sweetest character, and both are loth to part; but just as the conductor says "All aboard," the lips of the loving couple meet, a sibilant sound of kissing rents the air, and a fond adieu is spoken. This interesting thing is witnessed by large crowds every Sunday evening, whose veracity is unquestioned, but who we are sure know not what lovers endure because they have never been there.

—During an intermission at the Wild West show at the Santa Ana race track last Saturday Tommy Merris ran a foot race with "Swifty, the Arizona Cyclone," who travels with the show. The young fellow was suspicioned of being a sprinter in disguise, but he wasn't in it. Morris gave him twenty feet start in a hundred yards, D. Edson Smith, the celebrated authority on agricultural economy, red scale bugs and finances, walked down the track awkwardly with a pistol in his hand, narrowly escaped stumbling and shooting himself, regained his equilibrium, slipped back down to the scratch and fired the signal for the runners to start, and Morris passed the other fellow by fifty yards. After passing him he slackened up and ran very slowly back. Jim Bockley won a pot of money. D. Edson walked back with the smoking pistol in his hand. We bet he can beat the cyclone himself.

—The examination of the graduating class in the public school here has been completed, but the result will not be known until this evening, when the County Board will pass upon the papers. The commencement exercises will be held at the Opera-house to-morrow evening, but on account of the delay of the County Board in acquiting over the papers, the programme of exercises is necessarily omitted from our columns. Prof. C. H. Keyes, Principal of Throop University of Pasadena, will deliver an address at the graduating exercises, taking for his topic "Educating for Citizenship." The Professor is known as one of the best speakers on educational topics in Southern California and will doubtless deliver a very interesting lecture. The graduating class consists, as finally made out, of eight scholars from this city, three from Fullerton and four from Placentia. As we write it is impossible to say how many of them will pass the examinations.

—At a party given at the residence of one of the four hundred some evenings ago, one of the young men in attendance sought to play a trick upon the hostess by pilfering and concealing a large cake that made quite a showy appearance upon the dining room table. He took it outside and placed it gently upon the veranda, expecting to return it, when the hostess' astonishment was at its height, in time to take part in the discussion of the refreshments. The lady was abundantly surprised at the mysterious disappearance of the cake, but when the young gallant sought to return it, he found to his amazement that it had been entirely consumed by the faithful watchdog, who early in his career developed a very strong appetite for cake. Of course he couldn't return it, and so has since maintained an eloquent silence about it. After the guests had taken their departure the lady tried to find the cake, which she surmised had been hid about the premises, but without avail, and in the morning, when she looked in the remains upon the veranda, learned why her search the evening before had been in vain. Boys are such deceivers.

—While returning home from a drive in the country on Sunday afternoon Mr. Cahen and family had quite a narrow escape from a serious accident on the Santa Ana bridge. As their carriage entered upon the bridge a runaway horse and buggy, with two occupants, came running upon the bridge at the other end. They were dragging along the ground, and the horse was altogether unmanageable. Mr. Cahen bade his wife and two children alight from the carriage and get off the bridge hastily, while he remained to get his horse and vehicle out of danger as best he could. He had gone some thirty feet on the bridge before noticing the runaway, and how to get out of what appeared to be an impending disaster was a poser. He backed the horse as far as he could go, and then turned, suppose to be able to clear the bridge. There was several feet yet to go, however, but the horse succeeded in getting out of it just as the runaway team came dashing by. Mrs. Cahen had taken a notion to take with her when she alighted from the buggy a large ostrich egg, presented to her by Mr. Atherton of the ostrich farm, and with which she designed constructing an omelette on returning home. The egg fell to the ground in the excitement, and made an omelette of itself in terre firma. No casualty occurred, and after recovering from the fright, the trip into town was resumed without further mishap.

Mrs. Melrose has issued invitations for a progressive euchre party Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Whiting have issued invitations to a barbecue at their ranch at El Toro next Saturday.

The Supervisors have appointed Mr. B. J. Perry Horticultural Commissioner for this district, vice himself, expired.

Judson Jacques of Savannah, formerly a resident of this city, has been renewing old acquaintances in town during the week.

Mr. Sam Hamilton was down from Los Angeles on Tuesday making out papers on appeal in the case of the People vs. Parcells.

Mr. Wm. Firestone of Los Angeles, representing the Franklin county distilleries, was in town yesterday on a business visit.

W. G. Potter was in from Centralia yesterday. He has lately erected a new residence on his ranch, which is one of the finest houses in the county.

Herman Stern, brother of Jake Stern of Stern & Goodman of Fullerton, is in Chicago, having come over from the old country to see the fair, and is expected out here on a visit to his brother shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Inskeep of Los Angeles visited here on Saturday and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hartung. Mr. Inskeep is manager of the book-keeping department in the Los Angeles Business College.

Gilbert Landell went to church on Sunday evening, as is his usual custom, and when the collection box was passed around, by mistake dropped in a five dollar gold piece instead of a nickel. Now Gilb wonders if life's worth living.

Ed Morcan and Mat Walker, the brave New river well diggers, spent several days this week on a hunting and fishing expedition to Santiago canyon. They didn't get any fish, but they were death on wildcats, skunks and other denizens of the forest.

Mrs. Holmsen was 68 years old on Tuesday, and the landlord celebrated the event by passing around the Havanas. The old lady is as spry as she was forty years ago, and there is every indication that her life of usefulness will be prolonged many years yet.

Mr. Hache has been down from Chino this week looking at the sugar beets. He finds about 500 acres already thinned and cultivated and the beets growing fast and looking well. These foggy mornings make the beets grow very fast, and they develop their sugar from the sunshine later in the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Thacker took their departure on Monday for their home in Chicago. They will be with us again next orange-buying season, in the Fall. Misses Ida and Bessie James will probably visit them in Chicago during their contemplated trip to the World's Fair next summer.

Cards are out announcing the wedding of Miss Mary Adella Lockhart, daughter of T. J. Lockhart, formerly of Orange, and well known in this city, and Frank S. Williams of Columbus, Ohio. The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents in Los Angeles yesterday.

Frank Landell, erstwhile of the City Attorney's office in Los Angeles, visited the family fold on Saturday and Sunday last. Frank poses as being one of the most rapid stenographers in Southern California. He has under consideration a proposal from one of the electric companies in Los Angeles to give them the benefit of his talents.

Ross Craig left on Sunday for San Diego, going by way of Redondo on the steamer Santa Rosa. Accompanying him were his sister, Miss Craig, and Miss Frances Rowe, who go down on a visit to friends. Mr. Craig will probably remain in the lower country for some time, but the ladies are expected back to-day.

Misses Clemmie Schmidt and Mabel Langenberger returned on Monday from their visit to Madame Modjeska at her mountain home in the Santiago. The Madame did not accompany them home, finding her time at the ranch so much taken up that it was impossible to leave. She and Count Bozenta are expected here, however, next Saturday.

George W. Sponable has gone to Illinois to spend the summer with his daughter, Mrs. Georgia Deitz of Irving Park. He was for forty-three years a resident of Marengo, Ill., where he is highly esteemed by all who know him. Mr. Sponable hopes to meet his four sisters and one brother, with many nephews and nieces. It is ten years since he was in Marengo. Of course he will visit the World's Fair.

Billy Berdrow hauled in a load of 128 boxes of oranges, which weighed 8,850 pounds, from the Gilman grove to the packing house at the Southern Pacific depot in Wamser & Halpin's big orange wagon one day last week. This the largest load of oranges hauled in this season, the next largest load being one of 6,800 pounds, which Billy also hauled, from the Tombs orchard to the depot. Billy will walk up head and pick out his medal.

Ike Albertson returned from the East on Sunday evening. He has been absent two months, and passed most of the time visiting with his folks in New Stockton asylum. On his way back he stopped off to see the Chicago Fair and pronounces it the finest thing he ever saw. The California building is now complete, but is being pushed rapidly to completion, and when finished will be, next to the Illinois building, the finest State building at the Fair. Albertson spent several days at the exposition and comes home laden with stories of the wonderful sights to be witnessed there.

John Cadman was last Friday adjudged to be insane and was committed by Judge Towner to the asylum at Agnews. His son Ira, a very promising young man, became unbalanced mentally the week before, and was committed to the Stockton asylum. Mr. Cadman has lived here some four years, coming from Nebraska, where he held responsible positions in public and private life, being at one time elected to the honorable position of County Judge. He was reported to be a wealthy man, but unfortunate speculations reduced him to penury, and brooding over his lost possessions is undoubtedly the cause of his insanity. His aged wife bears up under her burdens with true fortitude, and has the sympathy of the entire community in her great affliction.

A PETITION.

My little grandson three years old
Sleeps by my bedside nightly.
Through the long hours of dark and cold,
Dreaming, he slumbers lightly.

He feels my love around him fold
And in its heart reposes,
Upon his hair a gleam of gold,
His cheeks like damask roses.

Oft through the chill and silent night
I stretch a hand caressing
To draw the blanket warm and light
About him with a blessing.

In sleep he feels that touch so sweet,
So lingering and tender,
Turns his dear face my palm to meet
With soft and glad surrender.

O God of pity and of love,
Have patience with our blindness;
Thy hand is stretched our heads above
Warm with thy watchful kindness.

Give us this baby's perfect faith!
Whatever ills assail us,
Help us to feel in life or death
That thou wilt ne.er fail us.
—Celia Thaxter in Youth's Companion.

A MAN'S HONOR.

Wyndam leaned back in his chair, regarding the saltant flames of the grate fire with hostile eyes. He believed himself to be particularly calm—his heart was beating at its normal, placid pace, his mind was clear. He was unaware that his fingers were nervously tapping the arms of his chair, and that his view of the fire was gradually growing blurred and indistinct.

The library table was thickly strewn with papers, and Wyndam's brother leaned heavily against it, gnawing his discolored lips.

At length Wyndam broke the strained silence. He arose from his seat and placed his arm upon his brother's shoulder, saying: "Do you see the biting jest fortune played us in removing our father before he could destroy these pleasing documents? For I have no doubt he fully intended to destroy them."

The younger man impatiently chafed under his brother's words. He threw back his head as if to shake himself free from the thoughts which pursued him.

"I am not sorry he had not time to destroy them," he returned laboredly. "He tried to teach us to the full the meaning of honor—perhaps with the idea that we would be able to do what he was not strong enough to accomplish. It only remains with us to make restitution."

Wyndam looked at him in astonishment and cold admiration of his manner of receiving the blow.

"That is all that is left for us," he agreed slowly, "and we can accomplish it only by our death; otherwise the world would know of our dishonor. Fortunately Howard is the next in succession and will come into his own without need of disclosing to him our shame."

The younger man was unable to restrain the faint look of protest which momentarily flashed into his heavy eyes. Then the blank hopelessness again enveloped his features as he echoed, "Only our death can right the wrong."

He recognized that the case required that drastic measure. He wished no repeal from it, for every breath he now drew was poisoned. But the thought of death, which only an hour ago had seemed so far distant, came upon him with something of a shock.

"It will be well for us to make our exit as speedily as possible," Wyndam pursued. "There will be the usual wonderment at our hasty deed, but at least there will be no suspicion of the truth."

He commenced to separate the papers with his customary methodical precision, quickly bringing order out of the confusion which had reigned. He was hindered rather than helped by his brother's assistance. He deposited in the fire the confession which had laid bare before them unguessed infamy, and the two stood watching until the flames had mercifully devoured the last bit of paper which could have avowed their dishonor.

Then Wyndam said: "I am now going to my own apartments. It will probably take me an hour to arrange my own affairs. At the expiration of that time I shall end my life."

"I shall do likewise," declared the younger man, who had now regained the mastery of himself. His voice rang steady, but his face was like a death mask in its stiffened, unnatural repose.

There had never been any strong liking between them, but as Wyndam shook his brother's hand upon separating from him at the turn of the corridor he was stirred by a momentary thrill of pity. He knew his brother well enough to realize that life could now hold no possible charm for him, but it seemed sad that he should be forced to leave it while he was still possessed of the exaltations peculiar to youth.

Wyndam closed the door of his own den and set about the completion of his task. There was not one letter over which he lingered before committing it to the flames, yet many of them were from the one woman he had ever loved and to whom his marriage was imminent. He had always been able to keep his mind from the disagreeable, and he was determined that in this last act he would still maintain his admirable composure and not try himself needlessly.

He refused absolutely to allow his thoughts to dwell upon what was to happen within the hour, and he noticed with a subdued throb of self satisfaction his unfaltering nerve.

He debated with himself for some moments over the advisability of leaving a few last words to the woman who was to have been his wife, but ultimately dismissed the thought as savoring of the dramatic. In fact, he felt he could derive no consolation from writing to her, as he could frame no possible excuse for his impending action.

He walked composedly to the drawer which contained his revolver, but paused before the mirror to push back from his brow the hair which had become displaced. He also noticed that his cravat was somewhat awry and rearranged it.

He was unconsciously taking mental note of his condition. He had more than once before proved himself to be possessed of more than ordinary courage and had felt assured he would meet death when it came unflinchingly. Yet as he unhesitatingly leveled the weapon at his heart he congratulated himself upon his coolness.

As he was about to pull the trigger he heard indistinctly the muffled report of the pistol which had been fired in a room further down the corridor. The sound hastened him, and he at once pulled the trigger.

He fell into the chair beside him, his hand pressed to his heart, hoping that death would not be long delayed, for the pain he was suffering was intense. He could feel the warm blood trickling over his hand, dyeing the bosom of his shirt a vivid red.

His eyes fell upon his trembling hand, which still clutched the pistol. It was not smoking, and suddenly there echoed in Wyndam's ear the dull fall of the hammer. He realized that he was not shot; that the pistol had been unloaded.

The mirror, which he faced, unmercifully reflected him. The color had fled from his face; his eyes were fixed and distended; his lips were twitching. He gave some contemptuous commiseration to the abject figure, failing to realize immediately that it was himself.

The weapon dropped from his nerveless fingers, and he buried his face in his hands. He continued to sit in his huddled position for some time, then, after several fruitless attempts, got to his feet. He groped his way blindly to the cartridges, and when he at last had the box in his hand slowly retraced his steps to the pistol, which lay upon the floor. He lowered his hand for it, but he could not pick it up. He had lost control of his fingers. He drew himself erect and wiped away the cold perspiration which had broken out on his brow.

"Great God," he whispered, "what a coward I am!"

He carefully smoothed the anguish from his face, and once again bent for the revolver. This time he was able to convey it to the table. He endeavored to reload it, but could not.

"I shall rest for a time," he meditated, dragging himself to a chair. "It is true I told him I should end it all within the hour, but there is no pressing hurry, and my worst enemy would not wish to shorten these extra moments."

His eyes wandered aimlessly about the room, but finally rested upon a long envelope which lay upon his desk. It was directed to him in an unfamiliar hand. In one corner was the name and address of a prominent firm of lawyers. He had noticed it previously, but had not opened it. Now, wishing to divert his mind, he incuriously broke the seal.

It was a lengthy communication, but from his brief glance he gleaned that through the death of his mother's only brother he and his brother were joint heirs to an enormous fortune. He restored the letter to its envelope. The intelligence seemed an unnecessarily cruel taunt of fate. His riches or his poverty could not now concern him.

"And to think of it all reverting to Howard," he muttered. "He will not know how to use it; he will be more uncomfortable than pleased. He becomes heir to 10 times what should originally have been his through one man's perfidy, and because I am that man's son, and because it is a just law that the sins of the father shall be visited on the children I must suffer. There is but one consolation—no one knows, or ever can know, the depth of our father's baseness but ourselves."

It suddenly flashed upon him that the knowledge had now narrowed down to himself. He turned the envelope over caressingly, repeating softly, "No one on earth knows but myself."

He seemed to derive a certain satisfaction from the words.

"Were we right in so summarily deciding that only through our death could restitution be made?" he demanded. "Howard would be far more content if left with his books and a modest competency. The control of vast wealth would be nothing but a burden to him. Of course he could not be given what is rightfully his without creating suspicion, and that must be avoided, but we can"—

He went no further, for he was again confronted by his brother's death. He once more extended his hand to the revolver, and all his lately acquired repose vanished. His face hardened; a look of subtle cunning crept about his lips.

"Perhaps it is as well," he urged. "He would never have been at peace, for he had an exaggerated idea of honor. If I determine to live," he pursued, "I shall resolutely thrust from me the remembrance of what we discovered. There will be nobody, nothing, to remind me of it, and even to myself I shall appear as much a man of honor as before we happened upon these papers.

With dogged firmness he replaced the cartridges and revolver in their compartment. No sign of the conflict which had raged remained.

It had grown late, and he carefully dressed for dinner. Once or twice his thoughts hovered over the motionless form lying in his brother's room. It would be necessary for him to feign surprise when the servants found the body, but he impressed upon himself the fact that he must be cautious not to overact his role.

He had dressed without his valet's help, but as he was about to leave the room he heard him in the corridor. He advanced toward the door, smiling a little, as if pleased at having got along without the man's assistance.

He opened the door, then retreated a step, as did also the man on the threshold.

The two brothers, both carefully dressed, stood face to face.—Alice S. Wolf in Argonaut.

Canning Industries In the South.

One of the smaller industries in which the south has made considerable progress of late is canning fruit and vegetables, and there is room for still greater development, as the south is now raising most of the fruit and vegetables for the whole country. Scarcely a day passes that does not chronicle the establishment of one or more canneries in some portion of the south, and nearly every center of production here possesses these factories now and is able to utilize the surplus crops by canning them.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly Sweenied; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. PAXTON.
