Calling for Bids

The city trustees met in special session on Tuesday evening and devoted the entire evening to a consideration of plans and specifications for the new power-house, as well as the installation of arc lights and the laying of new water mains. All members were present, viz. Trustees Rust, Ficus, Stock, Darling, Kroeger.

Engineer Schenck presented plans of the new electric light and water power-house, together with voluminous specifications, which were read to the board by Clerk Merritt.

A lengthy discussion followed their reading, at conclusion of which the board decided to call for bids for erection of the building. Bids will be opened at a meeting to be held the evening of February 19th.

Schenck was asked by the board as to the cost of the building and replied it could be built inside the estimate of $4000. Cement floorings will come later and cost an additional sum.

Trustee Stock was of opinion that if the structure could not be erected inside the estimate, the elaborate toilet features, wash basin, tray for soap and shower bath, could be dispensed with. Specifications dealt minutely with these features, and provide for the latest ideas in sanitation.

Ninety days time will be given contractor to complete the house.

Engineer Lewis said he hoped to be doing business in the new power-house by the first of June.

Trustee Ficus thought it would be after Lewis returned from his vacation. Schenck (in surprise)—His Christmas vacation?

Ficus—No, his summer vacation.

The board also decided to call for bids for installing electric arcs and for laying water mains.

The official advertising regarding these improvements will be found on the fourth page.

Bill Was Flying High

Bill Oberlander, aged 19 years, forged the name of R. F. Parker to a check for $30.75 at the First National bank on Saturday and on securing the money proceeded to become a high roller. He purchased eight books of a street auctioneer, procured a $5 suit case and various articles of clothing, a box of cigars and a ticket for the San Joaquin ranch.

Inquiry by bank officials revealed the fact that the check was forged. Marshal Steadman was notified. He located Bill at the Santa Fe depot on Sunday morning as he was about taking a train out of town. He was placed under arrest and taken to jail.

Bill was not flying so high when the prison gates closed on him.

He had a seance with Judge Howard on Tuesday morning.

Bill Warner, for whom Oberlander worked in the livery barn, started a subscription and raised money enough to pay for the forged check. Bill had spent nearly all of it.

The judge let Bill off with a lecture, and on his promise to be good.

Case Goes to Supreme Court

The Anaheim Landing mining and development company, in an endeavor to retain possession of sixty-five acres of land bordering on Anaheim creek in Orange county which is claimed by Isaias W. Hellman, has appealed to the supreme court. Hellman began suit in the superior court of Orange county for the recovery of the land and asked damages in the sum of $1500. The court decided that his title to the land was good but cut the damages down to $1.

The officers of the mining company claim that they located the land as part of unoccupied mineral territory. They spent $3000 in sinking three gas wells on the property and do not intend to relinquish it without a fight.

This is the second skirmish the company has had in endeavoring to retain possession of alleged mineral land in that vicinity. The company filed on the sand spit, claiming that the black sand carried gold. J. C. Ott, who claimed to be the owner of the land, took his case to the United States land office. The general commissioner decided that black sand does not constitute mineral land, and that therefore the property was exempt.

The mining company has its principal place of business at Anaheim with a capitalization of $500,000. The original directors were L. Shorn, Olive; Jonathan Bayha, Anaheim; E. M. Kraemer, Placentia; E. B. Johnson, Orange; J. Yeager, Fullerton; F. A. Korn and R. Wisser, Anaheim.

A Night Off

Students of the high school will present Augustin Daly's greatest comedy success, "A Night Off," at the opera-house tomorrow evening. To those who have had the pleasure of seeing the original company in this greatest of all comedies, it will appear the students are ambitious to a degree in attempting to produce it. But rehearsals show they will give an excellent rendition of the famous creation. The cast of characters is as follows:

Justus Babbitt—Professor in Ancient History in the Campdown University.
Harry Damask, his son-in-law.
Jack Mulberry, in pursuit of fortune under the name of Chumley.
Lord Mulberry, in pursuit of Jack.
Herbert Newman.
Marcus Brutus Snap, in pursuit of fame and fortune, under various legitimate aliases.
Roy Firebaugh.
Frowl, usher at the university.
Lucien Wisser.
Marine, servant at Damask.
Jack Smale.
Mrs. Zantippe Babbitt, professor of conjugal management in the professor's household.
Ethel Crayne.
Nisbe, the youngest "my" of the household.
Blanche Mickle.
Angelica Damask, the eldest.
Leah Lawrence Susan, "the brassiest."
Lulu Goble.
The play is under direction of Miss Williams Wilkes and Miss Allie Hallett Taylor, of Cumstock School of Los Angeles.

Chamber of Commerce

Newly elected directors of the chamber of commerce met on Monday evening, when the following officers were chosen to serve the coming year:

J. F. Ahlborn, president; Capt. Williams, vice-president; Prof. Walker, secretary and treasurer.

A committee to arrange for celebrating Arbor Day (Feb. 23) was appointed as follows: Messrs. Walker, Wicket, and Olmstead. The program for the day's exercises is not yet arranged, but will appear in our next issue. Assemblyman Clyde Bishop has been invited to make the principal address. An answer has not yet been received from him.

Charley Boege, retiring secretary, stated he expected to hear from Andrew Carnegie momentarily in reference to the public library.

The chamber informally discussed expansion of the city limits and street paving, and will in the near future begin an active campaign in support of these measures of public policy.

Kansans Coming to California

Joseph N. Reid, formerly a well-known citizen of this locality, but for a number of years past residing in Kansas, writes renewing his subscription to this paper, and adds: "There have been six families from around here gone to California in the last year, all but one have settled at Fresno, the other being four miles from Santa Ana, but I don't know which way. Two more families have sold out and expect to start for Fresno about the middle of February. It may come my turn again soon, [Hear! Hear!] but at present am running a general store for a company and have a splendid trade. Best regards."

Library Board

The regular monthly meeting of the public library board was held on Monday evening; present, Miss Ella Rea, president; Miss Kate Rea, secretary and treasurer; Chas. Federman, Dr. Houck, F. C. Spencer.

It was announced that 63 new books will be on the library shelves this week.

C. C. Parker of Los Angeles from whom the library has purchased books for several years, now allows the library 33 1/3 per cent discount instead of 30 per cent.

The books and library furniture have been insured.

Mr. Hartfield having donated a very beautiful clock to the library, he was tendered a vote of thanks.

New linoleum will be laid this week to beautify the room and especially to deaden the noise. It is the desire of the board to have the library as quiet as possible, and it asks the assistance of all who use the library, who can help much by not speaking above a whisper while in the room.

Mrs. Pendleton and daughter Nell, of Norwalk are spending today with Mrs. and Lois Duckworth.

Carnegie Library Site

Several sites are being talked of for the Carnegie library, but the one most favorably referred to is the Konig lot at the corner of Broadway and Los Angeles streets. This lot is 140x100. Mr. Konig has held it at $4000, but has consented to dispose of it for a library site at $2400. A number of residents of the locality have signed a subscription paper pledging amounts of money sufficient to pay for the lot and present it to the city. One gentleman said yesterday that so far as the money was concerned that had been practically secured. One Los Angeles-street business man gives $400, and a well-known professional gentleman living not far from the proposed site subscribed $200, with a promise of as much more if necessary. A South Lemon street milkman is down for $200, and his partner for as much more. Other residents of the neighborhood have contributed, but amounts could not be learned. Among the heavy contributors is a Los Angeles street liveryman, and a city trustee living not far from the site.

A number of these gentlemen were called up by phone yesterday, but each declared he knew nothing about what was doing.

"Ask Judge Howard," replied one, "he knows all about everything. I have been told he has the subscription list. He will let you see it."

That august official was called to the phone and asked about it.

"My dear boy," he began, "I don't know a thing about it. Subscription list? No, they're fooling you. Never saw it, and didn't know anything about it at all. Didn't know there was one out."

The judge was evidently guilty, but there was no way of imposing a penalty.

H. Deutch offers eight lots at the corner of Lemon and Charters for $3500, which is a substantial reduction from the present price. The tract contains about an acre and a half. Mr. Deutch also offers to cement the north and west sides of the tract.

Property owners in the neighborhood have under consideration the purchase of the lots with a view to tendering them as a library site.

Another site is that owned by Dr. Adams at the corner of Philadelphia and Center streets. The lot is held at $3000, but the owner will accept $2000 for it, if used for a library site.

Each of the sites has its supporters and there exists good-natured rivalry between them as to which will be finally accepted.

The chamber of commerce looks for a letter from the philanthropist any day bringing final information upon the subject of the donation.

Failed to Identify

Three suspected footpads are held in the Los Angeles jail on suspicion of having perpetrated the Newport bank robbery and other similar robberies near Los Angeles the past month or two. A report reached here on Friday that the men had confessed, under severe sweating, and had admitted doing the hold-up of Hart's saloon here six weeks ago.

Bird Robertson, who waited upon one of the three hold-up men the night of the robbery, and was later relieved of his watch and $6 in money, went to Los Angeles on Monday for the purpose if possible of identifying the man. He saw the men in custody, but after a careful scrutiny of each declared he could not identify his man.

Two of the men were arrested one night last week while acting suspiciously. The third escaped, but was taken the next day. On being accosted by the officer they attempted to draw their guns, and a shooting was in imminent prospect. The officer proved to be quicker than the others, and he succeeded in handcuffing two. The third man ran off. When searched the men were found to have burglars' tools upon them. One man carried a vial of nitroglycerine. All were armed.

Their arrest gave rise to rumors that they were implicated in the bank robberies, and a later rumor was to effect they had confessed.

Mr. Robertson declared on his return from Los Angeles that the men had not confessed, and that they were probably not the men who robbed Hart's place here.

Thought It Was the Japs

Marshal Steadman has hit upon a novel plan for directing attention to the fact that monthly water, light and license taxes are due, by hoisting from the masthead of the city hall a white flag decorated with large colored letters announcing that fact to the passing wayfarer.

The other day a citizen espied the flag and was unable to make out just what it meant.

"What's that flag out for? Something about the Japs? I can see the letters 'SE,' but can't just make out what the rest is."

"That's the new water, light, and license flag put up by the Marshal to tell people their payments are due."

It wasn't the Japs, but when the flag goes up, it's just about as bad.

FESTIVE SCENES AT BANQUET

Large Attendance Present, Elaborate Spread, and Happy Responses to Toasts.

One hundred and thirty guests sat down to the annual banquet of the chamber of commerce at Odd Fellows' banquet hall on Wednesday evening. It was the largest and most distinguished affair of the kind during the year. A sumptuous repast was prepared, which was well served and done full justice to by those seated at the festal board.

Guests began arriving at 8 o'clock. They gathered in the large assembly hall, and engaged in social converse for an hour. The city band discoursed music outside the hall while members of the chamber of commerce and their guests arrived, and later the orchestra rendered a suitable musical program in the assembly hall.

H. A. Dickel sang with excellent effect, "King of the Vikings," a barytone solo of charming melody, and to call for an encore responded with "The Kissing Song," a dainty musical composition which was very well received.

Richard Melrose, toastmaster of the banquet hall, here announced that he had just been informed the tables had been spread, and awaited the oncoming of the guests. They absolutely groaning under their weight of good things, he said, and the assemblage was invited to repair thither and be seated at the table.

The march to the banqueting room was taken up, and on entering the hall three long tables, with another extending across the hall at their head, were seen to verify the announcement made of them, for never was a richer or more elaborate repast set by the organization acting as host of the evening.

An hour was devoted to discussing the good things on the tables, consisting of fresh oysters, cold meats, ham, tongue, salads, cake and coffee, and while many were engaged in a heroic endeavor to make away with the goodly store set before them, the call of the toastmaster broke in upon them.

"It has been suggested," he said, "that if I wait until you are all through eating before calling for responses to the toasts prepared for the evening, there will be no such responses until after midnight. So I am going to call for the first speaker. But don't stop eating. You just go ahead eating, and I'll go ahead talking."

This witty beginning called forth a burst of laughter, which was followed during the evening by the many humorous observations of the toastmaster kept the gathering in best of humor.

W. H. Spake was the first speaker. He responded to the toast, "Progress of the City During the Year." He spoke of the development of the community during the twelvemonth, and urged the new board of directors of the chamber of commerce to be alive to the issues confronting it. His address will be found printed in another column.

J. F. Ahlborn spoke upon the subject, "The City of Anaheim," referring eloquently to the Mother Colony and her past deeds, which entitle her to a place among the foremost localities of the commonwealth. "Neither the fancy of a Robert Louis Stevenson nor the platitudes of a Demosthenes could do justice to the subject," the speaker said. The address drew forth loud applause.

C. C. Chapman responded to the toast, "The Forests." He spoke at length, in his usual clear-headed and convincing manner. California, he said, produced the largest trees in the world, and he considered conditions ideal for propagation of the brightest and best men and women. He was always impressed with the grandeur of the forests. It brought one nearer to the Creator. He referred to the influences of forests upon the rainfall, taking up the more practical subject of reforestation and saying it possessed the greatest importance to the people of this and other counties of Southern California.

Prof. J. F. Walker spoke upon "The Schools," and gave statistics showing the growth of the schools of the state during the past few years. He took occasion to enter forcible protest to the opening of a projected street through the high school grounds, adding the high school should have five acres, whereas now it has only two. One of these acres was recently purchased at a cost of $600. To open a street through this tract would be an act of great injustice to the school and community.

A. A. Mills responded to the toast "Greater Anaheim," among the best addresses of the evening. He urged outsiders to come into the municipality, pointing out that their taxes would be lessened, and picturing the benefits of increased city boundaries.

C. E. Holcomb responded to "Our Sister City, Fullerton," and Herman Stern responded to "The Ladies."

The assemblage joined in singing America, and dispersed.

MR. SPAKE ON PROGRESS

Retiring President of Chamber of Commerce Gives Review of City's Advancement

W. H. Spake, retiring president of the chamber of commerce, spoke at the annual banquet on Wednesday evening upon the progress made by the city during the year. His address was upon one of the many interesting subjects discussed at the banquet, and elected the closest attention. He spoke as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, Ladies and Gentlemen: I was once a member of an organization which appointed a committee to do a certain work. When the next meeting of the organization occurred the committee should have had at least half of the work accomplished. But owing to indolence, procrastination, and some of the other failings that afflict our imperfect humanity, they had done absolutely nothing. And everybody in the organization knew that nothing had been done. Notwithstanding this, when the report of the committee was called for, its chairman gravely arose and said, "We report progress." This produced a smile from all hands, but the smile of the committee members was rather sheepish. It makes a lot of difference when you report "Progress," whether or not, as the saying goes, "You are there with the goods."

I therefore have great pleasure in giving a partial report of the progress of Anaheim during the past year, for we have the facts and figures to back us up.

During the year 1906 there were erected a total of 54 buildings—48 residences and 6 business blocks. Since May 1st last the city has issued 59 building permits, representing a total cost of $100,000.

That's a little progress.

The comfort and convenience of pedestrians have been promoted by the laying of 75,000 feet of cement sidewalks, and 14,000 feet of curbs.

Driving and automobiling, not to speak of bicycling, have been made more safe and pleasant by the improvement and grading of 16 streets. The beauty of the city has been enhanced by the planting of many varieties of trees where the cement work has been finished.

That's a little more progress.

The safety of homes and business blocks, existing and to come, has been looked to by the equipment of the fire department with $500 worth of additional hose. That the people of the city are themselves progressive, and interested in the advancement of the city, was shown by the carrying of the $48,000 bond issue for the extension and improvement of the electric light and water systems.

More progress.

We have been in correspondence with the "Library Man," in regard to the establishment of a Carnegie library here. The last communication we had from him requested that the city trustees send him a document in which the city would guarantee to furnish $1000 for the maintenance of the library. This has been properly executed, and has been forwarded to Mr. Carnegie. We may therefore safely say that ere long a Carnegie library will adorn our city, making a gratifying addition to the architectural beauty of the town, as well as a source of pleasure and education for the citizens.

Still more progress.

A movement has been started to have Center and Los Angeles streets paved, and to enlarge the city limits. The petition for the paving of these two streets has been presented to the city trustees, and they have very properly desired time for the laying of the water mains on these streets before taking this matter up. The proposed extension of the city limits is only another evidence of the progress we are reporting.

Many other gains and improvements might easily be mentioned, but these amply show the continued growth and increase in our facilities for business and comfortable living, and warrant us in taking a decidedly rosy view of the future.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge, with hearty thanks, the co-operation and financial support we have received from the city trustees and other citizens of Anaheim at all times when we were compelled to call upon them for money to help us along in our work. The city trustees, as we all know, are doing a great work, and still have a great deal before them to do; but there is one thing of which we may all feel proud, and that is that they are very capable of doing—and doing well—all that comes before them. They deserve honor and credit for their faithfulness to the trust reposed in them.

The chamber of commerce occupies a field of its own. There is a great deal of work that can be done for the good of the city and surrounding country, that the city trustees have not time to take up and carry through. The two bodies often work together in the furtherance of some project, and I want to say that in every such case the chamber of commerce and the city trustees have been in entire harmony.

To all those who have not given the chamber of commerce much thought, I want to say that even if it does no great special work, it well deserves the support of all citizens, because it is always on duty for the good of Anaheim. It represents what every man hearing of Anaheim from a distance, inquiring by mail, or traveling over the state in personal examination, expects to find in every active town—an organization having a daily accessible office, with a secretary who can give him information regarding any business opening in the city, or the resources of the county, and make him acquainted with people whom he desires to meet.

Let us therefore do our best to support the executive committee elected for the ensuing year, and so help it to show better results than any yet attained. We are all a part of Anaheim, and the progress of the city is our progress. Civic pride and personal interest therefore alike urge us to earnestly aid by sympathy and financial support an organization which is ever on the lookout for that which will increase the wealth of the city, enhance its beauty, and make it known to all the world as a good place to live and do business.

California's Cereal Wealth

Forty-eight counties of California have sent in statistical reports to the State Agricultural Society for the year 1906, as required by law. These show a total cereal acreage, and yield and value as follows:

Wheat, 1,458,294 acres, yield 720,023 tons, or 24,000,767 bushels, valued at $13,289,904; barley, 1,750,756 acres, yield 849,490 tons, or 33,979,600 bushels, valued at $16,987,575; oats, 314,507 acres, yield 131,126 tons, valued at $3,331,980; corn, 71,879 acres, yield 65,106 tons, valued at $1,532,520; rye, 21,158 acres, yield 6,629 tons, valued at $286,255; buck-wheat, 400 acres, yield 300 tons, valued at $7,500.

This gives a total grain acreage of 3,616,984, a total yield of 1,772,674 tons, of a total value of $35,425,734.

The same forty-eight counties give the hay crop for 1906 as follows:

Alfalfa hay, 338,788 acres, yield 1,400,822 tons, valued at $8,713,903; grain hay, 1,822,380 acres, yield 2,636,979 tons, valued at $21,628,294; grass hay, 54,633 acres, yield 75,376 tons, valued at $570,230.

These give a total hay acreage of 2,215,801, a total yield of 4,113,177 tons, of a total value of $30,912,427.

These figures show the total value of hay and grain to be $66,338,161, and it will be noticed, as was the case in 1905, the value of the hay crop acre for acre is considerably more than the value of the grain crop. In other words, while the grain shows an average return of $9.80 an acre, the hay crop shows an average return of $13.95 an acre. It is the greater yield and value of alfalfa which enlarges this difference, and yet not altogether, as it will be noticed that the average value per acre of grain hay is $10.80, which is $2 an acre more than the average value of grain. It is often a problem with the farmer whether to cut certain foul grain for hay or not. The showing here would seem to be in favor of cutting everything for hay that will not make good, clean grain.

As we have said, the figures heretofore given are computed from the returns from forty-eight counties. This leaves nine counties that have not reported. There are fifty-seven counties in California all told, and as nine is less than one-sixth of fifty-seven, it would be conservative to add one-sixth to the foregoing figures to arrive at an estimate for the entire state. On this basis we find the total grain acreage of the state to be 4,219,808, the total yield to be 2,681,113 tons, and the total value $41,330,023. The total hay acreage on the same basis would be 2,585,101, the total hay yield 4,798,705 tons, and the total value $36,014,498. These figures give a grand total acreage of hay and grain for 1906 in California of 6,794,909, a total yield of 6,866,818 tons, of a total value of $77,344,521.

The total figures for 1905 were $77,232,595, showing only $111,926 difference in the aggregate value of the cereal crops of the state for the two years, the slight difference being in favor of 1906. It is worth something to know the acreage and value of the products under consideration, and the foregoing figures, returned to us in two successive years, are given as the best estimate that can be made from the resources indicated.

BEANS AND POTATOES

Returns from the same forty-eight counties, with one-sixth added as an estimate for the products of the nine counties that failed to make returns, show the total bean crop of California for 1906 to be 256,751,714 pounds, valued at $8,060,948; for the same year the total crop of Irish potatoes was 355,794,507 pounds, valued at $3,772,446, and the total crop of sweet potatoes was 34,351,835 pounds, valued at $4,171,139. The total value of all potatoes and beans is $12,250,532. This amount added to the value of cereals gives a total of $89,505,053 as the total of California's leading agricultural staples (exclusive of products of the tree, vine, and garden), for 1906.

SIMON MAGUS.

The Legend From Which Was Born the Story of Faust.

Almost every renowned man of antiquity in the middle ages was believed to be attended by a spiritus familiaris and not a few were suspected of being in direct league with the devil. Probably the oldest legend of which the Faust legend is a continuous thread is that of Simon Magus, mentioned in the history of the apostles.

According to Justin, he was a native of Gitton, a village in Samaria. He was, no doubt, a man of great intellectual powers. He was the father of the school of the Gnostics. It is also reported of him that he could make himself invisible, that he could pass through flames unharmed, could transmute matter, make gold and exorcise demons—in fact, he laid claim to all these powers, and his name lived in the mouths of the people as a sort of demagogue through many centuries until some other miracle working personality took his place at the popular fireside. Unusual accomplishments, great erudition, were attributed to the supernatural influence and the general disposition to superstitious assumption was strengthened on the one hand by dogmatic affirmation on the part of the church of the existence of a personal Satan, with his numerous household, and, on the other hand, by incorporating the magic arts among the practical sciences, of which astrology and alchemy occupied no mean part.

Robinson Crusoe, Economist.

When the average boy spends the delighted hours of imaginative youth in devouring the pages of "Robinson Crusoe" he has, like most people of more mature years, no idea that he is perusing a work of profound philosophy written by one of the greatest political thinkers of the English speaking race. Taken with a knowledge of the facts of the career of De Foe, "Robinson Crusoe" can properly be considered a story intended to illustrate the heavy burden of trouble placed upon any single individual isolated from his fellows and compelled to maintain his existence without their aid. The tale shows in an inimitable way how all civilized men are interdependent. Regarded from this point of view, the author of the most widely read work of fiction ever written becomes an object of particular interest to all thinkers upon politics.—William N. Hill, M. D., in Watson's Magazine.

A Resistant Grape

The Lenoir grape when ungrafted is resistant to the California Vine Disease. The vine is very vigorous, a good bearer when mature, while the fruit is very dark in color and rather small of size. The Lenoir is strictly a wine variety. It is hardiest when ungrafted, but will prolong the life of a tender top variety though not preventing the latter from infection as the disease involves all parts of the vine.

I have carefully selected Lenoir cuttings for sale at $10.00 per thousand

The statement of the financial condition of the German-American bank, which will be found in another column of this issue, shows the bank to be in particularly flourishing condition. But a little more than a year old, this bank shows deposits of $93,729.34, and total resources amounting to $127,687.68. This is a statement of which the officers and directors may well feel proud, showing as it does the confidence reposed in it by the people of the community. H. W. Chynoweth is president of the bank, Joseph Helmsen vice-president, and Charles A. Boege cashier. The directors include some of the heaviest taxpayers and men of means in the community. The bank has been a success from the start, and its latest financial statement shows it to be in a condition reflecting credit upon its officers and directors.

THE FOREST SERVICE

By A. W. COOPER

In Charge of California Studies—From the report of the State Board of Examiners.

By an act of the legislature, passed in 1903, the State Board of Examiners was empowered to enter into a contract with the forest service, (then the bureau of forestry) of the U. S. Department of agriculture, for the purpose of investigating the forest resources of the state, determining the best means of conserving them, and formulating a state forest policy. By the same act, $15,000 was appropriated for carrying on the work the first two years, with the provision that the forest service should contribute a like amount. This contract has been twice renewed since the conclusion of the first two years, with an additional appropriation of $5000 by both the state and the forest service for each succeeding year.

Actual work in the state was begun by the forest service July 1, 1903. The co-operative work is therefore now in its fourth year and sufficient time has elapsed to make it possible to point out results, although certain lines of work are as yet incomplete.

The contract outlines in a general way the lines which the work has followed, namely: A determination of the character and extent of the State's forest resources; the best methods of conserving them, and the formation of a state forest policy.

For all of the above mentioned purposes the first step necessary was the acquiring of a knowledge of the general condition and extent of the forests of the state. Accordingly an examination of 21,000,000 acres of forest and brush land was made. This included the North Sierras, the Sierra Nevadas, Southern California mountains, and the greater part of the redwood belt. The work also included a general classification and description of the forest by types and a description of the timber resources by counties. As a result of the work, a forest map of the state was prepared, showing the extent and location of the commercial forest, woodlands, and brush lands.

In connection with this work large areas of the forest were examined with a view of determining their suitability for forest reserves. Several such areas were found, which, after a consideration of all interests involved, proved suitable, and have since been reserved.

One of the most interesting questions in the preservation of the forest, both to the state and to private lumbermen, has been the protection of the forest lands from fire. This has been the subject of an extended investigation into the character, causes, and extent of forest fires, the purpose being to devise both general and special measures for checking them and preventing their occurrence. This investigation revealed the fact that the prevalence of fires might to a great extent be attributed to the inadequacy or non-enforcement of the state fire laws.

The methods best adapted to fire prevention on individual tracts were found to be by patrol, fire lines, and the disposal of slash on logged lands.

In Southern California the question of water supply is all-important, and bears a close relation to the forest cover. On this account two more or less related lines of work were undertaken in the southern mountains. The first was a study of the chaparral or brush areas for the purpose of determining the possibility of their natural reforestation and their relation to the water supply. This study was later extended to similar areas in the northern part of the state. It revealed the fact that a brush cover is a very good conservator of moisture in the absence of a tree cover, that natural reforestation of such areas is a very slow and at best uncertain process, only taking place at all where fire is kept out for a long period, and that fire is the chief factor in the formation and spread of such areas.

The second study in this connection dealt with the reforestation of important watersheds by planting. Here the conclusion was reached that planting on the Southern California mountains, except in favored localities, will be a very expensive undertaking and of doubtful success, but that a careful choice of species for planting may make gradual reforestation possible in portions of the mountains.

As a result of these general lines of investigation, which occupied largely the first two years of co-operative work, measures were formulated which, it was believed, the state should embody in its forest policy. These measures were submitted to the legislature in the form of a bill in the winter of 1905, and led to the act of March 18, 1905, which revised the fire laws and created a state board of forestry and the office of state forester; the latter to be filled by a technically trained forester. The state forester's duties are in the main the enforcement of the state forest laws, the assisting of timberland owners with advice and information, and the dissemination of an interest in forestry throughout the state.

While the general work already outlined was in progress a number of special lines of work were started. Among these were a number of commercial tree studies, the purpose of which was to provide accurate data regarding the habits and growth of the more important commercial trees with the object of securing their continued presence in the forest by interesting timber owners in adopting methods of lumbering favorable to their reproduction. Studies of this sort were made of sugar pine, yellow pine, and white fir. A similar study had been made of redwood previous to the commencement of the co-operative work.

These studies showed that the rate of growth and character of the various species made them well adapted to conservative lumbering and the securing of successful crops of timber.

Studies somewhat similar to the above were made of eucalyptus and of tanbark oak. The eucalyptus study included the collection of growth figures from the principal eucalyptus groves, as well as estimates of the yield and the financial returns from planted eucalypts in various localities. As the eucalyptus is an introduced tree, the question of its propagation and extension was also important and the study has dealt thoroughly with these points and with the uses and commercial value of the different species.

It became apparent early in the study that the genus was one of increasing importance and great future value in sections of the state climatically adapted to its production. This led to the establishment by the forest service of an experiment station at the University of California for the purpose of testing the strength and the mechanical and physical properties of the different species of eucalypts, particularly in relation to their use for special purposes. These tests are still in progress, but have already revealed the fact that eucalyptus closely approaches eastern hickory in its strength, toughness and general durability. Tests to determine the practicability of applying preservative treatment to eucalyptus were also made on eucalyptus posts. Creosote was the preservative used, and the tests demonstrated that eucalyptus could be successfully and cheaply treated. Sufficient time, of course, has not elapsed to determine the effect of treatment on the life of the timber.

The study of tanbark oak was botanical and dendrological in its character, but included a thorough study of the tanning industry and the present and future supply of tanbark oak. It showed that the supply now available would last thirty-five years at the present rate of consumption and that the excellent productive capacity of the tree made the outlook for a continued supply excellent, provided a few simple measures were adopted in cutting the present crop.

As a knowledge of the methods and cost of lumbering and of the lumber market in general is essential to the forester in his efforts to perpetuate the forests, a study of lumbering and the timber market was made for all of the important commercial species of the Sierras. The study dealt with the relation of supply and output in different lumber centers and the extent and effect of outside competition, as well as with the different steps in and the cost of manufacture. The whole study has been an additional argument in favor of conservative lumbering. Next to fire the most important question in the protection of California's forests is grazing. This has been, therefore, the subject of a separate investigation with the purpose of determining the effects of grazing on the forests and on watersheds and what regulations were necessary to prevent damage to both. The results of this investigation have been largely embodied in the present grazing regulations in force on the federal reserves within the state. At the request of the state two other special pieces of work have been undertaken. The first of these was the estimate and appraisal of the Calaveras grove of big trees, which was made pending the event of its purchase either as a state or national park.

The other piece of work was the investigation of the amount and character of the state's delinquent tax lands. This investigation revealed the fact that nearly 500,000 acres of land in the forest regions of the state was delinquent and that the operation of the present tax laws was often defective, in that they virtually placed a premium on delinquency and delayed the acquisition by the state of a clear title to such lands.

Iowa Association

The annual reunion and basket picnic of Iowans will be held on Washington's birthday, February 22d, in East Lake park, Los Angeles. If the day should prove to be rainy, the picnic will be held in the same place on Wednesday, February 27th. Any further information will be gladly given by the secretary, C. H. Parsons, Pasadena, California. Two prizes will be offered for the best poems on the Iowa picnic. The first, $10 for the best poem; the second, $5 for the next best poem. There must not be less than twenty-four lines. Competition is open to any Iowan living in Southern California. There will be three competent judges, and every one will have a fair chance.

MRS. SARAH J. WINDROM

Mrs. Sarah J. Windrom of Chicago, cousin of Zachary Taylor, twelfth president of the United States, and grandniece of Alexander Hamilton, who signed the Declaration of Independence, says:

"Vinol is a Godsend to old people. I am 76 years old, but have a hearty appetite, sleep soundly, and feel active and well today, thanks to Vinol. When I was young cod liver oil was dispensed in a greasy, unpalatable form, and it fairly gagged me to get it down. Vinol is entirely different, very palatable and nourishing to impoverished blood. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

Vinol is a real cod liver preparation, from which the useless oil has been eliminated and tonic iron added. Try Vinol on your guarantee.

Too Curious.

One well known New York woman has discovered, like some others of her sex, that it does not pay to be too curious. One of the old family retainers is a Scotchman named William, who does not believe in glossing over the truth for the sake of sparing his listener's feelings. The woman in question, although possessed of considerable charm of manner, is not a beauty and knows it. Her husband, recently deceased, was a remarkably handsome man, and his wife was one of his sincerest admirers. One day when she was looking at her husband's picture on the mantel in the sitting room William was fussing around the grate, and in a moment of impulse she asked:

"William, what do you think made such a handsome man as Colonel S. marry such a plain woman as me?"

William looked from the portrait to the speaker, meditated a second and answered:

"Must have been heaven's will, ma'am."

The African Drum.

The African drum appears in varied and often picturesque forms. The natives make drums out of shells, tree trunks or earthenware, covered with the skin of some wild animal or sometimes with India rubber. Of the original calabash drums there is probably only one specimen in Europe. Some of the drums are highly ornamented either by painting or carving. One specimen, indeed, has puzzled travelers, for there is depicted on it unmistakably a cross and also a head of European type. A drum found in upper Lualaba has a unique peculiarity in the way of a "sympathetic cord," formed by means of a small tube ingeniously inserted in the side of the instrument, which causes, when the drum is beaten, a vibration resembling that of the reed pipe.—Southern Workman.

WASHINGTON CHAT

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE GAZETTE]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.

The weeks are slipping by and congress is still inactive. Perhaps it was the purpose at the start not to pass any but the supply bills at this session. If so, they can be hurried through at the last moment and in the meantime many of the legislature will have fun among themselves and sacrifice the business of the country.

Just now the senate is the center of the fun making and her in Washington this once dignified body is becoming known as "the greatest show on earth." People flock in droves to the senate end of the capitol and crowd the galleries to suffocation. They go to be amused and they are amused, for instead of listening to the discussions that should be taking place among the members of that body, they are entertained by the witicisms of a few senators and the spectacle of personal encounters between them, all due to matters entirely foreign to the business in hand.

On the house side things are somewhat different. Most of the members are hard at work, the various committees are holding regular sessions, important measures are receiving proper consideration, necessary appropriations are being made and there is a bustling atmosphere about the whole place.

But much of this good work will fall by the wayside unless the senate cuts out the amusement features, settles down to business and removes the blockade that is impeding vital legislation. Such is the opinion of not a few representatives.

The president's policy for the expansion of the navy is being backed by navy officers who are now appearing before the house naval committee, which is framing the naval appropriation bill. The construction of two battleships a year instead of one is being urged, because in building one ship each year, the officers claim that by the time a unit of four ships is completed, the first built will be four years older than the last with the result that the former might be out of date.

This policy does not appeal to the committee. A partial canvass of the members of the committee shows that they are in favor of recommending the construction of another gigantic battleship in addition to the one decided upon at the last session, but they will not go further than the recommendations of the president and of Secretary Metcalf, both of whom advocate but one ship.

The naval appropriation bill is rapidly taking shape and will be reported to the house shortly after the first of February. The committee is meeting several times daily and has the naval programme so well in hand that but little further delay is anticipated.

The latest pow-wow to take place at the White House was between the president and six Indians of the Ute tribe—the chief men of the fighting Utes, who went on a rampage last summer in an effort to join the Cheyenne River Sioux, and whose people are now held as prisoners at Fort Meade, South Dakota. The Indians came to Washington under guard and were accompanied to the White House by several members of the Sixth cavalry. Through an interpreter two or three of the chiefs made speeches to President Roosevelt. They told him they wish to go and live with the Sioux on the Cheyenne river, for they like the Sioux and they like their country.

The president asked how they expected to live after they got there, and they replied that they had a great White Father who was very generous and who would give them rations. The president did not reply to them, but said that their requests would be considered. That their requests would be considered. That the braves were disappointed was evidenced by the numerous grunts uttered by the Indians on their way out of the building.

It is now up to the chief executive to say whether the members of congress, the speaker, the vice-president and the cabinet officials are to obtain the 50 percent increase in salaries. The action of the senate in passing the measure makes the increase certain unless the president vetoes it, which is not likely. The cost to the country of the senate's action in concurring to the amendment to the legislative bill as passed by the house relative to salaries of members of congress will be $1,234,500 per year. This means that after March 4th the treasury will have to pay out that much more than is now being paid for the salaries of the cabinet officials and the law makers.

The raise in salary affects 486 men on the government payrolls. The total amount now paid to these 486 men is $2,460,000. The total per year under the new order of things will be $3,564,500. The increase in salaries is highly pleasing to congress generally. It is not disputed seriously by anyone that the cost of living and the other expenses incumbent on a member of the legislative branch of the government, or a cabinet member, as a rule, more than eat up salary allowance.

The grounds surrounding the White House are very much overrun with squirrels. About two years ago some 200 of the little animals were liberated in Lafayette park, just opposite the executive mansion, and ever since their numbers have increased rapidly. Those in the White House grounds have become so tame that they will eat from the hands of the people who display enough interest to stop and pet them. On days when the sun shines brightly they are much in evidence in the trees, on the lawn, in the shrubbery, and the younger Roosevelts often stop to play with them.

A special friend of the squarrels is the big policeman who is stationed in the daytime just east of the main entrance to the White House. He always carries nuts in his pockets and they know how to get them. They also appear to know the hours when the clerks in the state, war and navy departments go to and from their work, for they line the walks through the grounds at these times and expect food from those who pass. The other day one of the more bold of the little fellows walked right into the vestibule of the president's office and would have gone in further had not a screen prevented.

History of the Golden State

California's history begins in 1530, when Cortez landed on the shores of the lower end of the peninsula. This new land he named "California." Two reasons are given for this name. Which is correct is impossible of verification. By some it is claimed that the poetic Spaniard saw in the barren lands of the peninsula a fancied resemblance to those mythical islands spoken of in the old Spanish romance, "Sergas de Espladian," where "gold and precious stones abound." Another version is more prosaic. It is that Cortez found this land at a time when the sun's rays were fiercest, and he called the land the "heated furnace."

In 1542 Cabrillo visited the shores of California, and more than a century later Viscano went farth north and mapped the bays of San Diego and Monterey. In 1579 Sir Francis Drake sailed along the shore, examining the islands and coast, and found the bay just north of San Francisco, which still bears his name.

Nearly two hundred years later, in 1768, Father Junipero Serra began his establishment of missions, erecting the first at the extreme southern end of the peninsula. July 16, 1769, he reached San Diego, and then sent an expedition on to find Monterey Bay. The bay was missed and the expedition continued on and found San Francisco bay on that Saint's day, and established the old San Francisco mission. In 1823 the last mission was established at Sonoma. In 1822 Mexico severed her connection with Spain and claimed territory to the north, even farther than exploration had been made. Russia, coming from the opposite direction, established colonies, and for a time there was divided rule.

When the United States government realizing that a war with Mexico was imminent, sent Fremont to explore and examine the land, it undoubtedly looked to the easy acquisition of most valuable territory.

In 1846 the American residents of Sonoma seized the Mexican officials, held them prisoners, and raised the bear flag as a token of the independence of the country from Mexican rule. Two years later, at the close of the war with Mexico, the territory north of the northern line of Mexico was ceded to the United States.

The admission of California as a state became a matter of politics, and action was delayed until California took the matter in her own hands and forced recognition by congress. In 1849 she framed a constitution in which it was declared that no slavery should exist, and one year later, on September 9, 1850, she was made one of the United States.

More than two years and a half before the admission to statehood, John W. Marshall had found gold in the race of Sutter's mill, and within one year from the date of the discovery of gold, January 24, 1848, the country was filled with men, and even then the thoughts of many who failed to find the yellow metal were turned toward husbandry in the rich valleys.

Two Hits Bring Second Shutout

Los Angeles is putting it all over us, and we don't know if we are ballplayers or not. A week ago the Hamburgers covered us all over with whitewash, and last Sunday Tufts-Lyon did the trick again, only more so. The result is that the city has been plunged in gloom thereat.

A crowd of over 1000 witnessed the game, while the locals tried hard to land, but it was of no use, for they could not hit. Two loney hits was all the boys could do, and two hits never won a ball game since time began. One of these was pulled off by the Olive kid Warren Meats, who substituted in the field.

Johnson was back in the box, and fanned eight. A similar number of swats were secured off him, netting three runs. Marshal struck out six, and allowed only two bingles.

In the second Wilson, on being hit by a pitched ball, took first. Musty forced him at second. McDonald sent one to center. Leaky struck out. Marshal sent one to left, scoring Musty and McDonald. Meats tried hard to catch the latter, but on a throw-in from deep left field by Hedges, dropped the ball in a collision with the foreigner. Wolfe sent up a high foul which Mott gathered in after a long run.

In the seventh McDonald sent one to left. Leaky contributed a hit to center, which Meats tried to get after a run, but was short. Marshal sacrificed, Wolfe singled to center, scoring McDonald. Harris struck out.

With a single hit in the first and another in the fifth, there was nothing doing for the locals, although they tried to pull the game out of the fire.

In the eighth Head sent a smashing drive to left which Wolfe was unable to get on account of the crowd. He was left on second, because there was nothing else doing. The score:

Senator Anderson is in more trouble, and is said to be heartily disgusted with the game of politics. Gov. Pardee nominated him to be trustee of the Whittier state school, then Gov. At request of the Southern California merchants and manufacturers' association he introduced a bill into the senate providing for the kind of mutual insurance companies the merchants wish to form among themselves. the Orange county farmers' mutual fire insurance company met and protested against the bill, together with the bill, No. 366, introduced in the house by Assemblyman Drew of Fresno. There are 1200 farmers in Orange county who are insured in the mutual company and they carry $1,500,000 insurance. Secretary F. D. Read said:

"The bill in the senate will drive us out of business. It requires a capitalization of $500,000, and a guarantee fund of $500,000 before business can be done. The present law requires only $50,000 capitalization and no guaranty fund. We have no guaranty fund and only assessment. Anderson's bill requires two assessments."

The protest of the farmers' company is in part as follows:

"We have read with surprise Senate bill No. 342 and Assembly bill No. 366, and regret that these bills have been introduced. We believe that if such should become laws, they would greatly injure the present mutual insurance companies doing business in this state, and work to the detriment of a large number of its citizens."

Huntington Beach Troffu

A report from a committee of the Huntington Beach board of trade that conferred with the directors of the Huntington Beach company in Los Angeles, apparently leaves no doubt that the proposed electric line will be built between Huntington Beach and Santa Ana.

This line has been in prospect for more than a year and the transfers of long, narrow strips of land to north of Huntington Beach, which have been recently made, indicated that a right of way was being secured for the electric line. The Huntington Beach company assured the committee that they had made satisfactory progress in this matter. Nearly all of the concessions for the right of way have been secured. Only three land owners are holding back and they control a strip of about a mile of the land needed. The company does not anticipate much delay in securing this, however, and says that the construction of the line will be begun soon after the right of way has been entirely secured.

The company has bought many pieces of land outright and in securing this right of way has obtained it 100 feet wide, with the intention of building a boulevard the entire length of the electric line and parallel to it.

The survey has been completed. It was made by Col. S. H. Finley, formerly surveyor of Orange county, and consulting engineer for the Huntington Beach company.

The route, as located by the survey, will be along the line of the Pacific Electric between Santa Ana and Los Angeles to within a short distance of Garden Grove, then south toward Huntington Beach, passing about a mile west of Talbert, a quarter of a mile north of the Northern ranchhouse, and entering Huntington Beach at the corner of Twenty-third and Main streets.

"Carat" as Applied to Diamonds.

Although the term "carat" is applied to diamonds as well as to gold, it does not mean the same thing. Used with regard to the metal it expresses quality or fineness, 24 carat being pure gold and 22 carat equal to coined gold. But applied to the diamond carat means actual weight; and by this measure 115½ carats are equal to an ounce troy. The value of a diamond is not merely so much per carat, irrespective of size, but increases in an increasing ratio with the weight of the stone.

Ceremony.

I think there is a great deal of difference between that species of ceremony which exists with acquaintance and that which should always exist with the best of friends—the one prevents the growth of affection, the other preserves it in youth and age.—Letter of Maria Edgeworth.

WICKERSHEIM & OSWALD

Fullerton, Feb. 4, 1907.

To our Customers and the Public:—Our volume of business for 1906 was an increase of nearly 50 per cent over that of 1905. Our business is being built upon firmness and quality and by giving our customers more for their money than they can get elsewhere. One of the great factors at the bottom of our steady growth is the standard lines that we carry, among them being Mo-line farm implements, McCormick harvesting machinery, Weber & Fish Bros. wagons, Page buggies, Tribune bicycles, No. 35 White Rotary sewing machines, California oak-tan harness and Sanford whips.

We take pride in the fact that our stock is one-third larger than ever, and in every line the selection is better.

We wish to take this occasion to thank our patrons for their loyalty to our firm and we will do all in our power to merit their continued patronage.

Wickersheim & Oswald.

Modjeska Country Club

Articles of Incorporation of the Modjeska Country club, in which fifteen Long Beach investors are interested, were filed this week. The amount for which the company is incorporated is $100,000, all of it subscribed. It has long been understood that the men secured the big ranch for the purpose of forming a country club, for pleasure only. The articles of incorporation would indicate that the promoters think that it is possible that at some future time the club holdings may be made into a resort for the public.

The articles give the company power to build for recreation, social intercourse, athletic exercises, games sports and amusements, both indoors and outdoors. The company may do a general ranching and stock-raising business, run fruit ranches, construct and operate power plants and build theatres as well as operate cold-storage and ice plants.

The stockholders in the company are sixteen in number and are: J. B. Heartwell, $5000; C. L. Heartwell, $5000; J. F. Heartwell, $5000; S. Townsend, $30,000; V. R. Townsend, $5000; A. T. Covert, $5000; D. M. Cate, $5000; C. J. Walker, $5000; F. W. Stearns, $5000; Andrew Craig, $5000; F. C. Yeomans, $5000; W. W. Lows, $5000; B. P. Dayman, $5000.
