PEOPLE INDIFFERENT TO RIVER COMMITTEE APPEAL

COUNCIL LETS CONTRACT FOR EXTENSIVE STREET PAVING JOB

Steele Finley of Santa Ana, Lowest Bidder, Awarded Work at 14c Per Square Foot; $8000 Below City's Estimate

FIRST unit in the city council's program for extensive street improvement was gotten under way Friday night, when bids were opened for the paving of North and South Olive street, North Clementine from Sycamore to North street, West Sycamore and West Cypress streets from Lemon to Palm. Three bids were submitted by three firms, the L. A. Paving Company and the Griffith Company, both of Los Angeles, and Steele Finley of Santa Ana. The L. A. Paving Company (E. R. Werdin's company) and the Griffith Company have both secured paving jobs here in the past, and have built nearly all the paved streets in the city, but they were underbid on this job by the Santa Ana firm.

Finley's bid was 14 cents per square foot for five-inch asphaltic pavement, 17 cents for six-inch concrete and 16 cents for concrete sidewalk. Standard cement curbing was quoted at 50 cents per lineal foot; corrugated iron part circle culverts, $3.30 per lineal foot, and resetting manholes, $5 each.

On the Cypress and Sycamore street jobs 24-inch concrete pipe was offered at $1.80 per lineal foot, and reinforced pipe of the same size at $3.90 per lineal foot. Excavation costs were quoted at $1 per cubic yard; corrugated from 24-inch part circle culverts, $4, and 20-inch, $3.30.

The total contract covers 400,000 square feet of paving, besides curbing, sidewalks, etc., and the price to be paid the contractor is $65,000. This is $8000 below City Manager Price's estimate, consequently the trustees are highly pleased. Mr. Finley states that he is ready to begin work immediately, and expects to complete the job within four months.

There are several other streets listed for paving, the Palm street job being the largest single unit, but contract for this will not be let until the street is widened 10 feet, in accordance with the recent declaration of the board.

Anaheim will be represented by a float in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's Day. The float will be built by the Chamber of Commerce, at an estimated cost of $400. The council, Friday night, voted an appropriation of $250 toward the cost of the exhibit, the civic body paying the balance.

Demands against the city aggregating $3124.18 were passed by the finance committee and ordered paid.

Three new ordinances, all of which amend sections of existing ordinances, were introduced at the meeting of the city trustees. Ordinance No. 497 amends section 29 and adds a new section to Ordinance No. 487, establishes a business district for parking and other traffic regulations and exempts physicians and surgeons from several of their provisions upon application to the city marshal.

Ordinance No. 498 amends section 15 of Ordinance No. 442, regulating the distribution of advertising, samples, hand bills, advertising matters, etc., and sets the license fee at $10 per day for such distribution.

Ordinance No. 499 amends section 4 of Ordinance No. 161, regulating the salaries of certain city officials.

Recent Forest Fires Came Near Home

Approach to Within 20 Feet of Judge Pleasants' Residence

Judge J. E. Pleasants was in town yesterday and met with a hearty welcome on the part of his many friends. The judge is making his customary tour of the apiaries of the county, and made a brief stay on his way back to his home in Santiago canyon. This is his twenty-fourth year as bee inspector, and he is the oldest man doing this very necessary work in Southern California. He states that the recent disastrous forest fires in the canyon came within 20 feet of his residence. He and his wife were prepared to move out, and had several trucks ready to convey his furniture and clothing to a place of safety. A north wind was blowing, which made fire fighting difficult. A large number of men were present, and the flames were prevented from reaching the home, although the judge thought at one time his residence was doomed. The fires burned several days, and were the most disastrous ever experienced in the history of the county. Much bee feed was destroyed, and many colonies of bees were consumed, although the judge was fortunate enough to escape any losses. It was the closest call he had ever had since living in the canyon.

Judge Pleasants first saw Orange county in 1859, and is the oldest settler on the rolls of the historical society. He brought the original vine cuttings from the Wolfskill ranch at San Gabriel to Anaheim in that year, and the first vineyards date from that period. He was personally acquainted with all the old Pioneers, whom he holds in fond remembrance. He was a welcome guest at their homes, as he has been a welcome guest in this city in all these intervening years. Anaheim was at first a city of tents and was known as El Campo de los Alemanos, or the camp of the Germans. Frame and adobe residences were erected the following year.

He recalls the flood of 1862, when water stood four and five feet deep for days, from the foothills to the ocean. He was living then in the Santiago canyon, where he was employed by Mr. Wolfskill on his stock ranch. Wolfskill later sold the ranch to James Irvine of the San Joaquin.

For many years he was judge and starter of horses at the Santa Ana racetrack. He saw Silkwood pace a mile in 2:07¾, which was the fastest time ever made west of the Rocky mountains. Silkwood had no difficulty in negotiating the half mile post in a minute flat, but was slower coming home. The judge recalls all of the races at the track in those palmy days, and is able to recount incidents of many of them. Silkwood was, in his day, one of the greatest horses in the country. He was later taken to Kansas, where he died, a number of years ago.

Judge Pleasants is 87 years of age, and has live din this county 67 years. For many years Anaheim was his postoffice and trading center. He was frequently in town, and in the early days was a familiar figure on the local thoroughfares. He is hale and hearty, and probably recalls more incidents in the history of the county than any man now living. It is always a pleasure to meet this grand old gentleman.

He declares that at the present moment the weather resembles more an old-time rainy season than at any time for a number of years past. Good rains have already come, and weather conditions are such as to lead him to believe abundant rains will follow.

Anaheim Student Gets Scholarship

Earl Jabs Most Valuable Man on California Team

The Jerry Muma scholarship, of $250 in cash, awarded each year to the football player on the University of California team judged to be the most valuable to the squad, the money to be used toward paying scholastic expenses, has been awarded Earl Jabs.

Dispatches from the state university told of the action of the university regents a few hours before the annual California-Leland Stanford gridiron clash, in awarding the honor. Jerry Muma was an old-time football hero of the university.

The game marked the retirement of Jabs from the Bear team, as this is his senior year. He will graduate in June from the commerce course.

Two years ago, as a member of Andy Smith's team, Jabs carried the ball down the field single-handed to score a touchdown and defeat the University of Washington team. He won undying fame on the Berkeley campus for that feat.

Jabs always has had a high scholastic standing while a student in the state university, friends of the scholarship winner said.

Queen Marie says she wants to see real Americans free of formality, and we suggest that she attend a football game in which there are a lot of hot arguments over the referee's decision.

Lt. Quarton and Wife To Visit Friends Here

Lieut. Dale Quarton, now stationed at the Brooklyn naval base, and Mrs. Quarton will arrive in Anaheim some time next week, and will spend three weeks visiting relatives and friends here. Lieutenant Quarton has been transferred from Brooklyn to the navy yard at Bremerton, Wash., and he and his wife will leave Brooklyn on December 4. He will be stationed at Bremerton four years.

Quarton entered the naval academy at Annapolis nine years ago, and graduated with high honors. His last visit to his old home was three years ago.

Law Forbids Cutting Down Xmas Trees

IT WAS not very long ago that those desiring a Christmas tree would pick up an axe, walk or drive two or three miles to a grove of evergreens, which were numerous then, pick out the tree wanted, cut it and take it home.

But nowadays—"try and do it."

Even if a Christmas tree hunter is willing to walk 20 miles, he is not allowed to cut a tree, according to Forest Ranger Burt Stephenson. This is because persons have cut down Christmas trees annually until now there are very few left in the mountains, Stephenson said.

"Forest service officials can see no good reason for a person's chopping the trees in these mountains, especially when it is so easy to order a tree at one's grocer and have it delivered to the door," he said.

And surely there will be plenty to go around this year, if one judges from the thousands of trees that have been ordered by merchants. The trees, which were ordered more than a year ago, will begin to arrive on or about December 15, according to grocers, who will add Christmas trees to their usual stock.

ENDORSES THE BONDS

In response to a letter from the Orange County Harbor Association, Louis C. Luhr of Santa Ana gives the following reasons why he is supporting the harbor bond proposition. His letter is dated November 27, and is addressed to Harry Welch, secretary of the association. He says:

"Your letter of November 22, together with the interesting circular of questions and Answers' is before me. In answer, I will say that I favor and endorse the proposed bond issue for the improvement of the Newport harbor entrance for three specific reasons:

"1. In the interest of safety. The present deadly peril lurking at the entrance, as proven by repeated tragedies in the past, is intolerable to anyone with humane feelings. Nothing seems more probable or certain than that these tragedies are bound to occur in the future, unless the entrance to the harbor is made safe.

"Mr. Jerome, our county auditor, states that the average annual tax rate for the proposed bonds will be .0215 per $100 of assessed valuation. The cost therefor on property, the actual value of which is $1000, would be less than one dime a year. I feel that it would be worth the dime, for the sake of the reputation of Orange county to get rid of the notoriety of that death trap, to say nothing of removing the menace itself.

"2. I favor the proposed bond issue because of the soundness from a business standpoint.

"My position in reference to bonds is this: I am opposed to increasing the public bonded indebtedness whether municipal, county or state, except in cases where it can be clearly shown that it is either vitally important and necessary or good business to do so. You will recall, Mr. Welch, that in the previous election I opposed the bonds for the improvement of the interior of the harbor on these grounds.

"Now I assume that in this day and age we all agree that judicious advertising pays. It is therefore a pertinent question where and how could Orange county secure such a valuable and permanent advertising asset at so little cost as it would have in a safe and beautiful harbor.

It will be the only real recreational harbor on the coast. I feel confident that its easy accessibility to Los Angeles and all Southern California will assure its success as a pleasure harbor, provided the entrance is made safe.

"I am a rancher. I have no other financial interests. My ranch is not on the market, but I do not intentionally overlook an opportunity to make my property more valuable. The cost being so nominal, it strikes me that the investment in harbor bonds of 10 cents a year per $1000 worth of property is a good business proposition for anyone owning real estate anywhere within the limits of Orange county.

"2. I am supporting the harbor bonds because, as a rancher, I am vitally interested in the prospective water conservation program of Orange county.

"Not a very logical sounding statement, is it?

"My idea is simply this: We ranchers realize the supreme importance of water conservation. Our lowering water levels leave no doubt on this question. On the other hand, the people living at Newport and along the coast of Orange county are as deeply concerned over the harbor as the ranchers are about an adequate, permanent water supply.

"Now, past bond elections indicate that over 25 per cent of the voters vote against all bonds, and in the long run I am inclined to think it may be fortunate that they do. Since two-thirds of the votes cast are required to carry bonds, it becomes evident that unless we co-operate in matters which we feel sure are for the best interests of the entire county, both the harbor and water bonds are doomed to defeat. We may as well be frank and face the facts.

SUBSCRIPTIONS SLOW FOR RIVER PROTECTION

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE COMMITTEE GETS LITTLE ENCOURAGEMENT

Efforts to Safeguard City and Surrounding Country Apparently Not Appreciated; Indications Are That Coming Winter Will Be Wet, and a Break in Protection Work Dangerous; $3000 Will Repair the Gap

IN THE event of high waters this winter, the Santa Ana river in this section of Orange county is in a dangerous condition, but the people menaced by it appear to be indifferent. Several months ago a fire destroyed 300 feet of the protection work just above the North street bend. The Chamber of Commerce river committee has been endeavoring to raise a fund of three or four thousand dollars to repair the damage and insure a measure of protection to Anaheim and the rich territory adjacent, but the committee has met with discouragement, and the sum subscribed is far below the amount needed. The majority of men ar indifferent to danger until confronted with it, face to face, then it is too late to take precautions.

All indications are that this is going to be a wet season. We have had three years of drouth and, according to the official weather data, three dry years are always followed by three or four years of excessive rains. In the winter of 1884-85 the three preceding dry years were followed by the wettest season recorded since 1862, the precipitation in Anaheim being 37 inches. While nobody anticipates such an unusual precipitation—yet it is almost certain that we will have a normal rainfall of 14 inches. That means that the channel of the Santa Ana river will be filled to the brim, and that the heavy weight of water will break through the weakened embankment and inundate the country below.

Some years ago, a party of engineers employed by the counties of Orange, San Bernardino and Riverside, made a survey of the river from its source to the mouth. These men reported that the most dangerous spot in the entire embankment was at the North street bend, in Anaheim. This point is at the foot of the sandwash, and everybody knows that the sandwash was the ancient bed of the river. It will break through again, unless the people awake to the fact that precaution must be taken to confine it to its present channel.

H. Clay Kellogg, the greatest auto tourist in the county ever produced, has stated that the Santa Ana river has changed its course 13 times, and it is likely to do it again at any time, because the channel has been gradually filling up with silt brought down from the mountains, until the bed of the river is much higher than the adjacent country. It is many feet higher than the intersection of Center and Los Angeles streets. Should it break through, a flood of uncontrolled water will inundate this section. It will be too late then to subscribe to a protection fund.

Grand Jury Will Meet December 6

The 30 members of the Orange county grand jury venire for 1926 were summoned by Superior Judge E. J. Marks to report in his court on December 6 at 10 a. m., when 19 members of the venire will be selected for duty.

The names of the venire members are: Guy Williams, San Juan Capistrano; E. E. Jahraus, Laguna Beach; Mrs. Millie Crosier, Newport Beach; S. T. Bowen, Huntington Beach; H. Enderle and O. B. Newcom of Tustin; H. E. Warren, Buena Park; C. L. Hansen, Placentia; Frank Troll, La Habra; W. A. Culp, Brea; S. N. Fuller, R. T. Davis and L. M. Gardiner, Fullerton; Mrs. Martha C. Goodale, John Beneke and R. R. Douglass, Anaheim; C. A. Palmer, W. H. Flippen, Mrs. Lola B. Pierson and Mrs. Beulah H. Kellar, Orange; Mrs. Theodore M. Sammis, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Clara Bullock, Mrs. Nora E. Fairbank, P. C. Edmunds, J. H. Edwards, A. W. Griffith, Louis Was, W. W. Armstrong, P. G. Beisel of Santa Ana.

Raymond Nebelung has shouldered the responsibilities of another important job. Some months ago he was appointed appraiser of real estate for the federal reserve bank, to pass upon applications for loans, and a couple of weeks ago he was offered and accepted the position of appraiser for the federal intermediate bank, which loans money on chattel mortgages on stock. His district includes a large portion of Southern California.

Court Battle Indicated on Water Permit

GASTON BASTANCHURY is prepared to go to court to contest the right of Fullerton to withhold from him permission to lay a pipe line with which to convey water for the irrigation of the property he has under long lease on the slopes to the eastward of Hillcrest reservoir.

He has by no means abandoned his project for the development of these lands because the city council has turned down his application for a franchise, he made clear today. The city board of trustees at a special meeting last week declined to grant a franchise for a pipe line along Cypress avenue.

Bastanchury stated that he is ready to spend between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 in the development of lands he has under lease from the Union and Associated oil companies. Incidentally, he disclosed that the corporations are partners with him in his development projects, which will cover a matte of around 4000 acres, a much greater area than that of the Bastanchury ranch itself, which comprises some 2700 acres. He said he has already spent $900,000 in development work and plans to spend $300,000 to $400,000 more.

Orange County Fruit Popular in the North

One of Best Commodities on Market, Says Dale King

California oranges have proved one of the best commodities on the American and Canadian markets this year, Dale King, manager of the Northern Orange County Citrus Exchange, who has just returned from an extensive tour of the whole country, said he heard this on every hand during his travels.

"It was most gratifying to receive such compliments to our industry and to our organization methods," King said. "They showed a warm appreciation of our marketing and distributing systems.

"California oranges were one of the few commodities on which money has been made this year. There was a maximum crop and the fruit commanded fair prices, which is more than can be said for many other kinds of product. This condition did not apply, unfortunately, to lemons because of the weather in the east, which was not nearly as hot as usual this summer.

"I found that brands of oranges handled through the northern Orange county exchange had a high standard in all markets."

King commented on the fact that there is a tremendous lot of building going on all over the country, this being particularly noticeable in the eastern and southern states. Great gains in population were also reported in the various centers he visited.

"The business outlook is regarded as most hopeful," he said, in response to a question, "and present trade conditions are rated as generally fair throughout this country and Canada.

Holden Retained as Placentia Attorney

Will Continue as Advisor for Improvement District

The county supervisors Tuesday retained George F. Holden of Anaheim as attorney for the newly formed acquisition and improvement district No. 1, in Placentia, which contemplates a $375,000 paving program. Holden's compensation was fixed at $1000. He will have charge of all legal proceedings connected with the district.

Approximately 15 miles of asphaltconcrete and concrete paving will be laid in the Placentia district, covering every street within a radius of several miles, according to J. L. McBride, county superintendent of highways. Portions of Richfield road, Kraemer avenue, Linda Vista street, Caroline street, Golden avenue, North Placentia avenue, Pioneer street, Orangethorpe avenue, Palm street and Bradford road, Placentia, will be paved, it is planned.

The Placentia district is the first of its wind to be formed in Orange county. "Acquisition and improvement" districts, he said, are formed under the Matson act, which was framed by County Counsel Matoon of Los Angeles county, as a measure to eliminate delays in street improvements on account of forced waits for right-of-way. Under the Matoon act, according to McBride, any district may proceed to take possession of ground wanted for right-of-way and may also proceed with the planned improvement, without waiting to condemn the property. Condemnation suits can be threshed out afterward. The act, it is said, was upheld by the state supreme court several months ago.

"The above are the considerations, Mr. Welch, on which are based my decision to support the harbor entrance bonds."

HARBOR BOND PROPOSAL GETS SUPPORT FROM OUTSIDE MEN

Opportunity Knocking at Our Door, According to Men Who Have Investigated; Orange County Must Vote the Bonds

EFFORTS of the progressive people of Orange county to create a commercial harbor out of nature's generous gift, Newport bay, is meeting the approval of discerning persons outside of the county who have inspected the bay, estimated its possibilities, and are well qualified to pass judgment on its possibilities and future value of the county. One of the outside men who came here recently to gather information on the subject was E. L. Wheeler, a well-known Los Angeles newspaperman. He had no personal interest in the matter, and his judgment was not warped; but, after studying the subject and examining the bay, he said:

"When I know the present worth of Orange county and also the large areas that as yet are undeveloped in an intensive way, I vision a county with three times the population and wealth in a few years. Your coast line, with its heart at Newport bay, will alone add to your values an amount equal to your total values today and do it very soon, if you open up your fine harbor possibilities.

"I am surprised that the workers don't take hold of the matter and bring it to an issue. It will create activity in all lines and demand a lot of labor in all sections of the county.

"The best that you can get is none too good for your people, but you must act to get the good things down your way. Other counties to the north of Los Angeles are waking up to the advantages of a new highway and are looking about for methods to secure same. But with the natural advantages you have, you are without a real competitor.

"You are to be congratulated on your present plan to open the entrance to Newport bay and make it safe. 'Safety and Co-operation,' which I understand is your slogan, should bring Orange county quickly to the front as the most active county in California. But don't delay. As I said before, the rest of the state is watching you, and if you fail to take advantage of the present program you will deeply regret it.

"It is good to see all sections of Orange county working in harmony and taking hold of your problems one at a time. This is the way that big things are accomplished. You will make no mistake by tackling your harbor question and putting it on the way. Then the field is clear for the next big question. Then, and then only, the harbor matter you have welded the county into a unit for the next step in development."

General Beach, the government engineer who made a survey of the bay, said: "You can at Orange county harbor do for a small sum what would cost a great deal to do elsewhere." Asked what kind of a harbor he believed for commerce or pleasure—he added, "Both. While you are waiting for commerce to develop, you can get a lot of business by catering to the pleasure side of the harbor, for you have the best location on the Pacific coast for a real worth-while yacht harbor, which should bring a great deal of wealth to your county."

County Auditor Jerome gives the tax rate for harbor entrance bonds to be voted on December 14 at 4 cents on each $100 of assessed value for the first year and 3 15-100 cents for the average year. This means if you own a piece of property assessed at $4500, your tax for the harbor bonds for the average year would be just $1.41¾. For a house and lot assessed at $900, the tax for the harbor bonds would be just 28 1-3 cents. You pay this on county valuation—not on other valuations.

Orange county owns 59 acres on the lower part of Newport bay worth about $5000 an acre, half the total of the harbor entrance bonds.

Then on the upper bay the county owns outright 396 acres and an addition of 223 acres, over which they have easement rights. Just figure this at an even $1000 an acre and you have a total value of over eight hundred thousand dollars waiting word from the people of Orange county to make it useful and valuable to the county.

On Tuesday, December 14, the electors will vote on a proposition to issue $650,000 in bonds for the completion of this harbor. Orange county is noted as one of the most progressive spots in the world, and it is not conceivable that its people will fail to take the advantages of this great achievement. Nature has given us a bay. It is up to us to convert it into a safe harbor for seagoing ships.

Two Women Killed In Stove Explosion

Four Others Seriously Injured, May Die From Burns

Two La Habra women are dead and four others, residents of Los Angeles and Norwalk, may die as the result of an oil stove explosion in a cabin near Mt. Baldy.

The dead are Mrs. Grace Carey, 51, wife of N. H. Carey, prominent La Habra rancher, and Mrs. Hattie Beaver, 71, mother of Mrs. Carey. The injured are Mrs. Clara Owens, Norwalk; Mrs. Lillian Murray, Los Angeles; Mrs. Lillian Owens, Norwalk, and Mrs. Irene Nuffer, Norwalk.

The injured women are in the San Antonio hospital, Upland, where they were rushed immediately following the accident.

According to word from the hospital, the conditions of the four women are serious.

An exploding oil stove was the direct cause of the tragedy. According to reports, the stove exploded while the women, with several friends, were preparing a Thanksgiving dinner. The party went to the cabin early Thanksgiving morning.

Nearby campers heard the explosion and the screams of the injured women and rushed to their aid. Blankets were thrown about the victims and they were hurried from the cabin. Mrs. Carey died first, and a few hours later, her mother passed away.

Those who left Thursday morning on what was to be a merry Thanksgiving party were Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Carey, La Habra; Mrs. Hattie Beaver, La Habra; Raymond Mettler, La Habra; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Owens, Norwalk; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Owens, Norwalk; Mr. and Mrs. H. Nuffer, Norwalk; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Culp and daughter, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Murray, Los Angeles.

Santa Ana Man Talks to Kiwanis

W. H. Hoy Tells of Necessity for Conserving Water

W. H. Hoy of Santa Ana was the chief speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon Tuesday, and devoted his time to the water situation. He told of the necessity for check dams to corral the flood water and prevent its loss by flowing down the channel of the Santa Ana river into the ocean. Ted Kuchel was chairman of the meeting, and introduced Mr. Hoy, who made an interesting and instructive address, showing that the future prosperity of Orange county depends upon bottling up the flood water now going to waste and using it for irrigation purposes.

Mr. Hoy is an enthusiastic supporter of the check dam system which will sink the water into the ground, but he also advocates building the proposed Prado dam. This will cost Orange county five million dollars, and many people believe that smaller dams at the headwaters of the river can be built to answer the purpose at much less cost. However, he made it plain that the lifegiving water now going to waste must be conserved at any cost, because the continued development of the county is dependent upon it.

Other speakers at the meeting were F. A. Yungbluth and William Falkenstein.

Students Named to Honor Convention

Eight student members of the Honor Society of the Anaheim Union high school are to represent the local school at a Southern California Honor Society convention to be held in the Mission Inn, Riverside, December 18, according to announcement today by Mrs. Fay Kern Schulz, faculty advisor of the local society.

The Anaheim students who will attend are Jesse Johnston, president; Martha Adams, Ember Heyne, Bob Schweinfest, Tommy Kuchel, Randall Maass, Mary Jane Van Booven and Mary Tanaka.

A wild deer got loose in Central park, New York, the other day and caused quite a commotion. A wild dear on Broadway, however, doesn't cause so much excitement.

IN THE DAYS OF LONG AGO

Extracts From Files of The Gazette Issued Half a Century and a Quarter of a Century Ago. These Files Contain the Only Authentic History in Print of the Daily Doings of the Citizens of Anaheim and Orange County in the Days of the Pioneers.

50 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1876

At the meeting of the Literary Society on Monday evening, the following officers were elected: F. M. Cahill, president; H. S. Austin, vice-president; T. S. Grimshaw, secretary; Fred Rimpau, treasurer; Victor Montgomery, sergeant-at-arms. A resolution was adopted amending the second section of rule one. It now reads as follows: "That there be four speakers appointed in the affirmative and four in the negative." The question, "Resolved, That the truth should not always be spoken," was discussed by Victor Montgomery in the affirmative and E. F. Cahill in the negative. A decision was given in favor of the affirmative. The question for discussion at the next meeting is, "Resolved, That all laws should be obeyed." Affirmative, F. W. Athearn, Theo. Lynill, T. W. Cook, M. A. Mendelson; negative, J. M. Guinn, H. S. Austin, D. R. Payne, A. G. Beebe. Declamations will be given by T. S. Grimshaw and Robert Brown.

Our advertising columns this morning contain a call for a meeting to be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of discussing "The advisability of incorporating the town." We are glad the advocacy of this movement by The Gazette has resulted in awakening our citizens to the importance of having a municipal government. We hope the gentlemen who have called the meeting will meet with a hearty support from the masses in their endeavor to better the condition of our little commonwealth.

A meeting was held on Sunday at the Planters hotel for the purpose of taking the necessary steps towards organizing a dramatic association. Mr. A. G. Beebe presided over the deliberations of the body, which was addressed by Messrs. Stagg, Montgomery and others, in favor of organizing an association which would serve to rescue the writings of the late lamented and gifted William Shakespeare from the oblivion which threatens them, if the latent talent of Anaheim does not do its share in perpetuating the love of the "legitimate" in the human heart. These sentiments were loudly and vociferously applauded, and the movement was put in shape by appointing a committee to prepare a constitution and by-laws for the guidance of the association. To Messrs. Woodruff, Lynill and Montgomery was delegated this task, with instructions to report at a meeting to be held this evening. In the language of the immortal bard of Avon: "Well done, good and faithful servants. Thou hast established upon a solid basis a literary society and several other things, and I promise thee success in thy present scheme and in many other things. Enter thou into the undertaking fearing naught."

At the annual election of officers of Anaheim lodge No. 207, F. & A. M., held on Saturday evening, the following officers were elected: Theo. Reiser, W. M.; H. Blanken, S. W.; Fred Hartung, J. W.; M. L. Goodman, treasurer; A. W. Steinhart, secretary.

We noticed yesterday some splendid samples of dried figs put up by Mr. Luedke. They present a fine appearance and are, no doubt, as good as they appear.

Serious damage was caused by the late wind at the bee ranch of Mr. J. W. Sallee, in Santiago canyon. A two-story bee house was blown down and a large number of bees and several tons of honey were destroyed.

While riding along his beat, his horse accidentally stepped into an excavation which had been made for the reception of gas mains, and Mr. Carrillo was thrown violently to the ground, breaking his arm and sustaining other injuries.

By kind invitation of Mr. Heimann of the Planters hotel, The Gazette corps partook of a Thanksgiving dinner at that popular hostelry on Thursday. The menu was an excellent one, and Mr. Heimann may congratulate himself upon possessing a cook who thoroughly understands his business.

Tustin city is well supplied with butcher shops. Two have started there the last few weeks. A drug store is now needd at that place.

Quite a crowd, both young and old, gathered on Center street yesterday afternoon, watching with interest a game of top.

Even the spirits can't tell for sure. One Boston medium says Hayes will be the next president. Another sees Tilden in the White House. The spirits are evidently greatly excited over the result.

25 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5. 1901

Company E's Thanksgiving ball, at the Armory, on Thursday evening, was the social event of the season. Upwards of one hundred couples were present and tripped the light fantastic to the voluptuous strains of McEachran's orchestra. The hall was tastefully decorated with flowers, palms and evergreens, which transformed the drill hall into a bower of beauty.

The ball was in charge of the company's amusement committee, composed of Herman Stern, chairman; Eugene Adams, secretary; Louie Kroeger, treasurer; Charley Fay, Ed Zeus, Ed Bennerscheidt and Bobby Mills.

The floor committee was composed of those heavy swells, Albert Nagle, L. Kroeger and Dick Zerman. At midnight the dancers sat down to a sumptuous turkey dinner, prepared by those two local Delmonicos, Vanderbilt Bennerscheidt and Bob Mills. Tables literally groaned under the weight of good things.

After supper, dancing continued till a late hour. Socially and financially the ball was a success, and the company realized quite a handsome sum to be turned into the fund to provide it with amusements during the winter.

We take a few extracts from an article appearing in a Los Angeles weekly, being a special write-up of Anaheim:

"Who has not heard of Anaheim, the substantial little city with a population of 2500, just one hour's ride from Los Angeles, in northern Orange county. More than forty years ago the historic town was founded by a German colony from San Francisco, who, after their own heart, lived to themselves and devoted time to horticulture and viticulture. Substantial buildings were erected and Anaheim grew on a solid foundation of labor and perseverance, mingled with exclusiveness. This good old colony could not last forever, and as the ranks were thinned, other business men filled the gaps.

"Upon reaching Anaheim by rail, you are given a free ride from the depot to the new Commercial hotel in a handsome turnout owned by the city livery stable, of which Ed Zeus and Oscar Warling are proprietors. Churches of every denomination prevail, and the four public schools are a source of pride to the citizens. At present a handsome new brick high school, with all the modern improvements, is being completed. The school trustees are T. A. Darling, president; J. H. Clabaugh, clerk, and A. H. Sheldon.

"The public library is another intellectual pride. A Chamber of Commerce has recently been organized and is most generally supported by the business men and wisely conducted by Richard Melrose, president; Fred G. Athearn, secretary; H. A. Dickel, a leading grocery man;; Herman Stern, manager of Stern Brothers' establishment; George Boyd, manager of the California Packing Plant; Dr. Johnston, and Peter Weisel, Jr., are directors.

"For the past eight years Mayor Joe Helmsen has with a steady hand backed by a strong will and untiring and intelligent enterprise steered Anaheim safely through turbulent times. Now Anaheim as a city is far superior to many larger ones from the fact that the people own the city hall, fire department, a splendid water works and electric light plant and hundreds of feet of superior hose. At present the city owns property valued at $46,000 against an indebtedness of $31,000. Twenty-four 2000-candle power arc lights generated by a 2000-volt electric plant illuminate the city. Anaheim is a beautiful city. The long, level graded streets are bordered with corresponding rows of handsome shade trees, which with the beautiful plants and foliage in the grounds of the residences create a desire to remain and enjoy the grandeur of nature."

Anaheim lodge No. 199, I. O. O. F., elected the following officers for the ensuing term: O. W. Warling, noble grand; A. E. Lewis, vice-grand; Frank S. Gates, secretary; Herman Stern, treasurer; Charles Fay, trustee, long term; R. Melrose, middle term; H. A. McWilliams, short term.

Harris & Falkenstein make one of the prettiest displays of toys ever seen in the city. Beside toys, they have numberless fancy articles suitable for holiday gifts for little and big folks.

Freeman & Cook have opened a blacksmith shop in the stand formerly occupied by Nick Hugo. Both are experienced blacksmiths and have already caught on. There is room for a good blacksmith here.

Charley Norman has been engaged in putting in necessary repairs to the approach to the Olive bridge, preparatory to the winter rains. Lacking a pile-driver to drive piles with, he procured a post-hole digger and is using posts to brace the approaches.

Sam Federman came down from Los Angeles yesterday. He reports more tourists in that town than at any period in its history, and business of all kinds booming.

Chauncey Huggans has rented the Bennerscheidt brick building on Center street, taking a three years' lease, and will occupy it in the near future with an up-to-date restaurant and bottling works. A first-class restaurant is one of the things which Anaheim needs, and Huggans is just the man to fill this long-felt want.

J. H. Enearl has been engaged for some weeks past in the erection of a number of cottages at the oil wells, where considerable improvement has been the order of the day. Employes of the wells have raised $600 for the erection of a hall where entertainments and social hops may be given, and Mr. Enearl will likely be employed to build it.

Julius Schneider made a hunting trip to the Landing some days ago, and succeeded in bagging a number of fine birds.

Gus Hansen, prosperous rancher of Orangethorpe avenue, was in town on Saturday afternoon.

Judge Landell and Harry Whitaker were in town from Buena Park yesterday afternoon.

Chet Holcomb came in from Indio to spend Thanksgiving with relatives and friends.

Otto Zeus came down from Los Angeles to spend Thanksgiving with his folks here.

Napoleon Hart made a business trip to Los Angeles Monday.

MUST GROW TIMBER

State rather than federal activity in forest conservation must be looked to for the main progress in timber growing from now on, according to W. B. Greeley, chief forester, United States department of agriculture.

Speaking of international agreements, it is still our idea that the best way for Uncle Sam to keep out of war is to keep his army and navy in good order.

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Curtiss Visits the Shop

The first day in the book shop was one of the most exciting experiences of my life. Arriving early in the morning, the first thing I did towards furthering my business career was to order dainty lavender frocks for Thankful and myself, and so arrayed we spent the rest of the day getting ready to open the shop to the public the following afternoon.

Of course the shop was not entirely mine, but I had the feeling that it would be soon, and I also felt that it was not an unreasonable desire which burned in my breast, for while the antiques were charming, with an old-world atmosphere, there were none of great value, except one original etching and a few rare editions which Captain Tchertkov said he would not sell for any price. We soon discovered that he was a connoisseur of the fine arts and these treasures belonged to a small collection he had managed to save from the glory of the past.

"And why, I ask you, shouldn't I buy the shop? The money was mine to do with as I choose."

I asked him why he had not disposed of them during that time in Paris when he was so seriously in need of funds. "If I had one, I would just as soon think of selling my child," he replied, in the attractive foreign way he had of rearranging his phrases. I rejoiced that here was one whose passionate and sincere love for beauty was beyond price. His was an intuitive appreciation for lovely things. Although his lips were sealed as far as his past life in Russia was concerned, little by little I came to share Thankful's opinion that he and his family had been reared close to the throne.

"Listen, I can't possibly stay in the same small shop with Vladimir Tchertkov and call him by that terrible name," I confided to Thankful later that day when we were discussing him, from now on, regardless of convention, I shall call him Captain T."

"Oh," she gave a little gasp, "you wouldn't dare!"

"Watch me!"

I called the young officer over to where I was standing by a case which held some interesting hand-tooled editions which he had picked up in Florence "for the trade."

"Would you mind affixing the prices on the fly-leaf of each of these?" I asked him. "I haven't the faintest idea what they are worth."

"But, most certainly," he replied. He stood with military precision whenever I spoke to him, his manner and bearing towards me were exactly as if he were serving a queen. Wishing to do away with such stiff formality, I turned to him abruptly and said, "By the way, Thankful and I have decided to call you Captain T."

Thankful blushed to the roots of her soft, brown hair.

"I, er," she stammered.

"Never mind, now Thankful, we can't stand on so much ceremony working here every day like sardines. Besides," I smiled, "while we expect to make a million dollars for all of us, we also want to have a little fun." And from now on, I turned to the young officer, "this is Thankful, (it's a lovely name) and I'm Sallie. Just plain Sallie. No more Meesis Wright." I tried to imitate his foreign accent. He and Thankful having been won to a good humor, laughed and fell in with my plans.

"Now," I turned to the telephone, "the husband will be summoned to the scene." I dialed the number on the automatic phone.

His stenographer answered. Then came Curtiss' voice.

"Honey?" I said.

"Yes," his answer was quick as if he had been engaged and disliked being disturbed.

"Everything's all right, I haven't been kidnaped or anything like that, but I want you to come immediately to a certain address which I shall give you. I have a surprise for you, and one I am sure you will like."

"But sweetheart," he began.

"No buts, dearest, you MUST come."

"Could it wait for an hour or two? I was having a very important conference just then."

"You," I pouted, "I hate conferences!"

But in the end I promised to be satisfied if he would come the moment it was through.

I was keenly disappointed, for I wanted him to arrive while Thankful and Captain T. were there. They would lend atmosphere to the scene and besides, I wanted them to share his surprise.

But when five o'clock came I insisted that they leave, and I was left with the large brass key, which fitted the antique lock on the door, in my hand. How important I felt to be the custodian of so much beauty and art!

The lights were dim and over the shop clung the faint odor of incense. Finally I saw Curtiss pull up in front of the curb in his car. Then I saw him consult a piece of paper, to which he compared the number of the shop. He approached the door and I scurried behind a counter, as if I had been there all day.

Tentatively he opened the door. Then, with a look of astonishment, he recognized me, taking me in at a glance.

"What ho! A bazaar of some kind for the Junior League?" Well how much am I in for? Let me know and I'll write a check. Then let's be getting home." I didn't have time for luncheon today and I'm as hungry as a bear."

"No siree, you're wrong this time," I told him, skipping from behind the showcase. "Come and sit down. No, first of all I want you to come downstairs. Look at everything and I'll tell you about it later on."

After a tour of the lower room with its glittering array of bric-a-brac, bronzes and enamels from foreign shores, I led him back to the book shop and made him sit down in one of the comfortable walnut chairs. I slid a low foot-stool for his feet to rest upon, and perched on the arm of his chair.

"Well, what do you think of it?" I wanted to know.

"Why, it's a very unusual sort of place, to say the least." But I could tell that he was looking at it in a thoroughly impersonal light.

"Now I'm going to tell you a secret." I leaned close to his ear. "Listen, honey, it's mine, all mine. Every inch of it." I exaggerated my ownership in the shop because I wanted the surprise to be complete. I would explain the details of the business transactions when we got home.

He sprang from his chair. Then he sat down again.

"Oh, I see. It's some joke. What's the big idea? As I told you before, I crave food."

"I mean it, sweetheart," I was still enthusiastic. "I took the check father gave me and made the first payment down, and I'm going to pay for the rest of it as we make the sales. My share in them, you see."

He remained silent for a moment, and then frank disapproval made itself manifest in his manner and voice.

"You're just a little mad," he said, "that is, of course if you mean such a thing, but I simply won't believe that you've gone ahead and bought a whole store without even so much as asking my advice. Of course, you can't go through with the thing. If possible, the check must be returned."

His cold, matter-of-fact decision about a thing which I looked upon as entirely my own affair incensed me. I leaped from the arm of his chair and stood facing him. My voice sounded little and far away.

"I WILL go through with it. And the check will NOT be returned. It was a business transaction, and as such the question of the check is closed. And why, I ask you, shouldn't I buy the shop?"

"Because the whole thing is ridiculous, preposterous . . . out of the question. Look at you now. In one of those damned artist costumes that I despise." (It was the second time I had ever heard Curtiss swear.) "Standing behind a showcase selling books," he went on, "bareheaded, like a shop girl. Do you think I want MY wife to do that? I married you to make a home for me and not to stay down town all day catering to the public and selling books! A fine idea you have of domestic bliss." He was sarcastic, and I disliked his ugly mood.

"But I won't let it interfere with making you comfortable at home. The maid and cook are perfectly capable of running the house and, as it is, I am never there except when you come home at night. I can't see what earthly difference it will make as far as our home life is concerned," I put forth an eager argument. "I'm going to ask you to look at it from my viewpoint," I said, "I'm bored with society. I'm sick to death of its silly round of inane affairs. I want something real to occupy my mind." I paused, for I was losing my control, "to gum the game!"

I walked twice about the room and then came back to where he was sitting. I had calmed down, but I was still disappointed at the unexpected turn of events.

"Do be reasonable," I urged, "everybody who's anything at all is doing something nowadays. Mrs. Sathersvaite Grenee started a beauty shop at home and Mrs. Courtney James had gone in the movies, and Mrs. Sterling Vanderveer and Marjories-Chesneyth are making a huge success of a hat shop. You like these girls. They all have well-ordered homes, and devoted husbands and they're perfectly lovely, too."

"Listen, Sallie," he interrupted, "I refuse to go into this thing now. I'm going home and will discuss it with you tonight. I suppose you have your car. An independent business woman would have." He left me, and as I stood in the doorway a sudden gust of wind swept through my lavender smock and all at once I felt very much alone.

George Cole had the turkeys he had taxed for the Christmas market stolen Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smith of West Virginia are guests of Mrs. Hattie Allen. They will move into Mrs. Allen's house on Tenth street.

One consolation a defeated candidate has is that he is not nearly so apt to be investigated by the Senate.

State Beekeepers To Hold Convention

The thirty-seventh annual convention of the State Beekeepers' Association will be held this year at Exposition park, Los Angeles, December 9, 10, 11, according to Roy Bishop, chairman of the beekeepers' department of the Orange County Farm Bureau.

The three-days session will feature lectures and addresses by leading apiarists of the state and university men. H. E. Wahlberg, Orange county farm advisor, has been requested to address the convention on the status of the Orange county honey industry and the beekeepers' department of the farm bureau.

The various problems of the beekeeper, including marketing, standardization, queen rearing, bee inspection, and other important subjects are listed for discussion.

A banquet has been arranged for the evening of December 10, when the state beekeepers and their families will renew acquaintances and be entertained by the Fraternal Honey Producers and other affiliated societies.

Coming at this time of the year when work in the apiary is at a minimum, it is anticipated that a large delegation will attend from the 120 beekeepers of Orange county. Printed programs may be secured at the farm advisor's office, Hall of Records, Santa Ana.

The League of Nations has taken the rare art of "chaicography" under its wing, according to press dispatches. This is doubtless much safer than monkeying with geography.

Overhead Irrigation Title of Bulletin

Orange county growers will be interested in the new bulletin entitled "Irrigation by Overhead Sprinkling," by H. A. Wadsworth, circular No. 4 of the California Agricultural Extension Service.

Professor Wadsworth of the irrigation division of the college of agriculture has made quite a thorough study of overhead sprinkling systems in Los Angeles and Orange counties, giving special attention to equipment and its installation, and the distribution and penetration of the irrigating water from these systems. Prof. Wadsworth covers the field of overhead irrigation, especially as to equipment, ending with the season of 1925.

Citrus and avocado growers are principally interested in this method of irrigation. The circular is available on application to the farm advisor, Hall of Records, Santa Ana.

A British radio company sent a radiogram to Mars last week, but the company didn't guarantee delivery.

OUR RUSSIAN TRADE

THE assertions of the friends of soviet Russia in the United States that our refusing officially to recognize the soviets is injurious to American trade with Russia, have been pretty well refuted by the figures. According to officials of the department of commerce who have given the matter careful study, the growth of our trade with soviet Russia is not dependent on our recognition of the communistic government. There is no relation between the two problems, department officials say, and there is no danger that by refusing to recognize the present Russian government and refusing to permit the new soviet minister to Mexico to come to the United States, our trade with Russia will suffer.

There is an old saying that the proof of the pudding is in the eating. The proof of the assertion by officials of the department of commerce is in the trade figures, and these figures show that American trade with Russia is now four times as great as it was in the years immediately preceding the World war.

To be more exact, American trade with European and Asiatic Russia for the five pre-war years from 1910 to 1914 inclusive, averaged in round numbers, $23,600,000 in the way of imports from and $23,000,000 in exports to Russia from the United States. During the last fiscal year we sent to Russia the sizeable sum of $93,000,000 worth of goods and bought back from the Russians $24,000,000 worth. Now the United States is the one important nation which has not given some sort of official recognition to soviet Russia, and yet we sell her four times as much as we did in the last years of the czar. In addition it may be said that we are supplying Russia with 28.1 per cent of all of her imports. Our nearest competitors in this way are Great Britain, who supplies her with 15.6 per cent of her imports, and Germany, who sends her 14.5 per cent of the things Russia buys abroad. Both of these latter countries, it is to be remembered, have accorded official recognition to soviet Russia.

But granting, for the sake of the argument, an argument refuted by the above figures, that the recognition of the soviets would mean a little more export business for the United States. Along with recognition would come a feverishly increased activity on the part of the bolshevists in the United States. Our own communists would hail the recognition as a great victory for Russia and a weakening of the morale of the nationalists in the United States. The boring from within would continue with increased fervor, and the resulting unrest might easily do us a great deal more harm financially, as well as morally, than the increased export business would do us good.

It is not in the least convincing to say that the communists have given up their program for a world-wide revolution. Recent developments in Great Britain refute the assertion. And we can look much nearer home than Great Britain. To the south, our sister republic, Mexico, is beginning to show visible evidences of what the communistic propaganda can do. Mexico seems to be traveling the right road to ultimate communism. And among the first effects of this is the falling off of business and a decline of industry.

The United States, of course, would not be as easy to subvert to communistic documents as Mexico, but the trend of affairs in Mexico at least, shows that the bolsheviks have not given up their cherished world-wide program, and we want to keep the door closed against it.

MORE LAWS COMING

NOW that the election is over and the issues and the fortunes of the various candidates have been settled for the next two years, there is about to come to us again the season of lawmaking. Soon Congress will be in session, and then will come the meetings of the various state legislatures, all anxious to get the old legislative hopper ready to grind out laws by the hundred, laws for the regulation of the people and their business, and laws which a great many of us unfortunately will prepare to dodge whenever possible.

For the season of lawmaking always follows the election. Some of the experts on the subject are now predicting that at least 15,000 new laws will be made for the American people within the next few months. cmfwypcmfwypn the next few months—15,000 new laws to be added to the statutes which we now seem to be unable to enforce.

This number may seem to be tremendous, but it may turn out that it is a conservative guess. In addition to our Congress there will be about forty legislatures in session. These lawmaking bodies turned out in the neighborhood of 14,000 laws two years ago and there seems to be no reason why they will not exceed this record in the coming year.

Just why we have to have so many new laws nobody seems to know. It would seem that legislators have a sort of mania for turning out new laws. They make the best sort of resolutions about fighting all unnecessary legislation, but when the boys get together down at the same capital a veritable epidemic of lawmaking always breaks loose.

Sometimes perhaps the realization will come to us generally that what we need is not new laws but a better enforcement of the laws already on the statute books with the repeal of those which are found obnoxious in the enforcement. True, the editorial writers in the newspapers point out these facts occasionally even now, but nobody seems to be able to do anything about it. So until there is a change, doubtless we will continue to pile up new laws, with the result that we shall increase the number of lawbreakers and throw the law as a general proposition still further into public contempt.

EUROPE IGNORES

THE Old World's reactions to the debt-cancellation plea of ex-Secretary of War Newton D. Baker were neither marked nor significant. The British newspapers paid little attention to it. The politicians of Great Britain took the same position that Mr. Baker's utterances as a private citizen had no special importance. In France it was ignored or mentioned briefly, if at all. The Germans were not specially impressed, nor were the Italians.

The Baker debt plea thus far has hardly stirred a ripple in London, Paris, Berlin and Rome, the four capitals most concerned with debts and reparations. Evidently Europe realizes the cancellationists in America are lonely and far-separated voices. Its statesmen understand that they must deal with the American congress and the debt commission and not with ex-officials and unofficial individuals.

They have been misled so many times they are in no humor to be fooled again. Before pinning their hopes on the utterances of Americans not officially responsible they want definite proofs that the cancellationist is speaking for somebody other than himself or his own little group.

Prospectors in northern Mexico have found a mineral that explodes. Sounds like they'd come across a case of petrified home brew.

Forest Fire Burns Nearly 13,000 Acres

Most Disastrous Blaze of Kind in History of County

Official figures, as shown on the reports of the United States forest service, give the total acreage burned over in what is designated as the Hathaway fire, in the Santa Ana mountains, as 12,280 acres. The cost of fighting the fire was about $20,000.

"Of that 12,820 acres," said Forest Ranger J. B. Stephenson, of Corona, in charge of the Santa Ana mountains, "about 5000 acres was on private property, most of it on the Irvine ranch. About 7800 acres lies within the boundaries of the Cleveland national forest. Lying inside the national forest boundaries, in Orange county, are approximately 63,000 acres. The recent fire was almost all in this county. Less than 20 acres of the burn is in Riverside county."

The first started on the morning of October 31, at the Hathaway cabin, in the Santiago canyon, a half mile above the Modjeska home place.

In addition to the $20,000 expended by the forest service in fighting the fire, the federal compensation insurance department will have a substantial cost to meet for loss of life and for injuries sustained by fire-fighters.

Ranger Stephenson is today completing compensation papers for members of the families of two men, Ramon Hernandez of Placentia, who was burned to death when caught in the path of a wall of flame, and Angel Lopez, 112 Garfield street, who died at the county hospital of pneumonia. Lopez was away from home about 12 hours. His mother states that he caught a severe cold while fighting the fire, and that the cold turned into pneumonia. Lopez was unmarried. He was a native of Mexico. He lived here with his mother, brother and sister. Hernandez left a widow and no children.

The acreage covered by the fire has been variously reported all the way from 13,000, which was Stephenson's estimate, to 50,000. The official report is accompanied by a map showing the boundaries of the burn.

FARMERS' SALES ABROAD

The American farmer knows by his own experience in recent years the truth of the conclusion that his sales abroad are not a measure of his prosperity. He need go back no further in his memory than 1921 to prove it. That year witnessed the greatest export of American farm products ever recorded. During that year the American farmer exported five times as much wheat as th eaverage annual export of any previous five-year period in American history. He exported three times as much corn as the annual average of any previous five-year period, eight times as much rye, eleven times as many dairy products, and 40 per cent more meat products. But in 1921 farm prices were lower than they had been for over a decade, and the American farmer went "dead broke." Such experience proved beyond a doubt that it is not the American farmer's foreign markets, consuming not over 10 per cent of his total production, which is the measure of his prosperity!

For one hundred years free trade or low tariff advocates have portrayed a protective tariff as the forerunner of high prices for manufactured goods, forcing upon the American people the burden of greatly increased living costs. That these predictions never came true, has not prevented politicians from reiterating them at every opportunity. The debate preceding the enactment of the Fordney-McCumber tariff was no exception. Senator Simmons, in leading the fight against the enactment of that tariff, made the prediction that if the bill became a law, prices would be increased from 25 to 75 per cent. He stated that if the proposed protective schedules were enacted American manufacturers would "jack up" their prices. This prediction was made in more detail by the New York World in the article referred to, which stated that in the event the Fordney-McCumber bill became a law—

"The high cost of living will jump. A new tariff wall will be erected behind which war prices would be charged for food, all sorts of clothing, shoes, housing, and other necessities of life, without danger of competition. . . . High duties are proposed upon cement, brick and other building materials, which would add to the already exorbitant building and housing costs."

LAND OF THE FREE—HOME OF THE BRAVE

THE visit of the lovely queen from a foreign land has indelibly impressed upon the whole world that America is a true friend to all. This glorious United States seeks no conquests, is ever ready to offer a helping hand, and all it asks from the rest of the universe is to play the game fair, by putting the cards upon the table face up. The queen, who is such a dear, said she never was so well protected, but adds she never had been in so little need of protection. The queen, so gracious and kind, says she believes America loves her, and she does surely love us all. God bless her.

SOUL CRY OF FREEDOM

THE screen version of "The Volga Boatman" gives a person those twitchings at the heart-strings—makes one believe that those poor down-trodden people of Russia, growing weary of carrying the yokes about their necks for the past 500 years, had just cause for rebelling against the tyranny of their former cruel government. Whatever views a person here may have had as to the justice, or the injustice, of the overthrow of the imperialistic regime, there is cause to believe the time was ripe for breaking the bonds of serviture. But mob rule and radical socialism will never win anything, and if these Russians could just set up a good, honest and clean government by representation, their day of deliverance, no doubt, would be at hand. There would then be rest for the weary, and the rejuvenation, it is clear to see, certainly would stabilize that empire, and it may go further and enhance the cause of peace throughout Europe—if the rest of them over there would expel the fight bug and go to work.

BRIGHT BUSINESS OUTLOOK

AN ITEM in the paper says the Pacific coast is due for unprecedented industrial activity in the near future, according to the predictions of a man well versed in business matters. The gentleman is the head of a group of woolen, hosiery, corset and textile machine manufacturing concerns in the eastern cities. Tremendous water power, the presence of raw material and the facilities for shipping makes a great development inevitable, says this man. Maybe Anaheim will annex some of these good concerns. It is said eventually the woolen manufacturing plants will move to the coast, because here the wool is raised.

HEAVED UP SPONGE

A MAN who has just arrived here from Oklahoma says the cotton growers down there have been hit hard. The price of cotton has dropped to a mere nothing, the reason being unknown, unless it can be laid to speculation or manipulation, or such. Anyhow, cotton growers have quit, and they are not all Democrats, either.

SORE THROAT, RUN-DOWN FEELING, OR FLU?

IT HAS been given out by high officials that immediate steps must be taken to replenish the medicinal supply of whisky. It is explained that it will require five years to age the new supply properly. While the antis assert vigorously there is no need to worry about the liquid, still it is maintained that something will have to be done right now to refill the cooperage.

THE MOTH AND THE FLAME

AT A ministerial meeting the other day, resolutions were passed asking that the hours of egress and ingress into a certain town below the border be not changed. Now the gates are open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Somebody wants to change the schedule to read from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m. Among other things, the resolution says: "It is understood there is a movement on foot, sponsored by profiteers from commercialized vice, to have the hours changed from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m. Conditions are bad enough as they are, and it is for the Christian people of California to see to it that they get no worse." Better take warning, stranger in these parts.

PEAK OF THE LOAD

A PROMINENT clubman, who alleges another man alienated his wife's affection, has brought suit against the latter for $1,000,000 damages. This, from all accounts, is the top balm figure, and demonstrates that it costs like the dickens to poach onto these matrimonial preserves.

AND THEY ALWAYS HAVE A GOOD ALIBI

SPEAKING about the weather, they say that the only people here who prophesy rain are fools and tenderfeet. Once a prognosticator said we would have a heavy downpour on a certain day, and lo and behold, we got a howling Santa Ana wind. Another time a weatherman said there would be no rain, and a heavy southeaster struck us, and say boy, it was real wet. Taking it all in all, however, it averages up pretty well, and the way this season is starting out, it looks like J. Pluvius has not lost our number.

RIGHT IN THE SWIM

WHEN it rains real hard in downtown districts, the meek and lowly cop comes into his own, or such. For, you know, there always is some marooned maiden who wants over. Then the big boy friend on the beat picks up the fair one, who meanwhile displays a good pair of, ahem, limbs, the cameraman appears, and then the picture in the paper. Years ago, Willie used to stand on the street corners and watch the high car steps as the passengers climbed up, but now that pastime has grown stale, and a parade of bathing beauties is the only thing that satisfies—and there is nothing else but.

HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE

THERE is a well-known author and writer across the big pond who thinks that all school mistresses should have a baby. Oh, shucks, it isn't like that; look here, listen, buddy—this is what he means: Over there the head mistress of the girls' secondary school had been dismissed on the ground that her responsibilities as the mother of a seven-months-old baby were incompatible with her school duties. The head mistress is a doctor of philosophy and a bachelor of sciences, and has been married three years. The author quoted says he would be in favor of chucking the firing committee into the river. For he says it would be far more sensible to refuse to allow any woman to become a teacher unless she had at least one baby and looked after it properly.

Bandits Hold Up Buena Park Men

Muzzall Brothers Have Exciting Experience With Robbers

Two armed bandits, one of them masked, held up and robbed J. Walter Muzzall, proprietor of a Buena Park pool hall, and his brother, Clyde Muzzall, at 8:50 o'clock Tuesday night, and then kidnaped the pair, carrying them seven miles in an automobile before releasing them.

The brothers werealone in the pool hall at the time of the holdup.

Deputy sheriffs, with descriptions of the bandits furnished by the victims, are making a search of the county. One of the bandits is said to be known.

A total of $87.75 was taken from the two brothers. J. Walter Muzzall lost $50, taken from the cash register of the pool hall, and C. E. Muzzall was robbed of $37.50 in cash, which he had on his person at the time of the holdup.

According to information given to officers, a lone bandit walked into the pool hall and, with a pistol in his hand, ordered the brothers to throw up their hands. "I mean business, no monkeying around," he warned them, as he stepped over to the cash register and rifled it.

After robbing the till, the bandit relieved Clyde Muzzall of his money and then ordered both men to march out the back door. He had marched them across several vacant lots, when J. M. Muzzall remarked:

"What's the big idea—you're taking me straight toward my home."

The bandit then changed the course and ordered the men to walk in another direction. The trio finally came to a road. An automobile was driven up and the lights turned off. The Muzzall brothers were ordered to enter the car. They were placed in the front seat with the driver, who was masked.

The machine then was driven off. At the first intersection the car was turned south on the Hanson road and, later, on another road. At a point about seven miles from the pool hall, the car was stopped and the victims were told to get out and "beat it."

The Muzzall brothers returned to Buena Park afoot and made their report to the authorities.

Jesse Elliott and H. W. McKague, deputy sheriffs, investigated and took up the trail of the bandits.

During the seven mile ride, the bandit who held up the pool hall remained on the running board of the machine and kept his victims covered with a revolver, they reported to officers.

University professors from Southern California will form a nomad faculty, conducting late afternoon and evening lectures in Alhambra, Azusa, Glendale, Hermosa Beach, Huntington Park, Long Beach, Montrose, Pasadena, San Bernardino, Santa Ana and Santa Monica, for the benefit of residents in and near those points, using classrooms of local high schools in conducting the college courses.

Organized on the quarter basis, college extension courses under the auspices of the department of community service of the University of Southern California give 32 hours of instruction in 12 weekly sessions, grant university credit, and include teacher training courses, social service training courses, education, history, literature, drama, psychology, sociology, economics, philosophy, mental hygiene, tailoring, millinery, poetry, kindergarten training, and physical education.

Institute Opens At Mission Inn

International good will and world peace through understanding and appreciation of problems of food supply, immigration and emigration, customs, labor, markets, economic factors, reciprocity, and educational development of the Pacific basin will be major considerations of the first session of the Institute of International Relations, to meet at Riverside Mission Inn, December 5-12, with Dr. R. B. von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California, as chancellor, and Dr. K. C. Leebrick, of the University of Hawaii, as director.

"Voluntary or Compulsory, National or International Intervention" is one of the topics to be discussed at a round table on Pan-American relations dealing with Mexico, basis and ideals of Pan-Americanism, and Caribbean policies. Other discussion and address topics include "Chinese Nationalism," "Development of World Markets," "Race Relations," "Japan," "The Philippines," "The League of Nations," "Limitation of Armaments," and "A Permanent Court of Immediate Justice."

The famous bells of the famous Mission Inn of Riverside wil resound with a welcome to western delegates to the institute, including Dr. J. P. Young, Dr. G. M. Day and Dr. L. Egbert, of Occidental College; Dr. Herbert H. Gowan, Dean Charles E. Martin and Dr. Henry Suzzalo, of the University of Washington; Dean Thomas F. Hunt, Dr. F. M. Russell and Dr. I. D. Priestly, of the University of California; Dr. Paul Harvey of New York City, Dr. Graham H. Stewart and Dr. Eliot G. Mears, of Stanford University; President Chenau of Reed College, and representatives from Pomona, Southern Branch, California Institute of Technology, Redlands, Whittier, and other interested and influential organizations and institutions.

Prosecutors' Office Loses Chief Deputy

Departure of Chief Deputy District Attorney C. N. Mozley from the district attorney's office, where he has served for the last six years, was accompanied by a realignment of staff appointments, including theadvent of Roy V. Shafer as a deputy to fill the vacancy occasioned by Mozley's retirement.

D. G. Wettlin, second deputy, was advanced to the rating of chief deputy, which post he will fill until District Attorney A. P. Nelson's administration ends, next January 3. Kennith H. Burns, third deputy, will serve as second deputy during the remaining month of the Nelson administration.

Shafer, who recently was named to the post of third deputy by District Attorney-elect Z. B. West, Jr., the appointment to be effective January 3, was appointed by Nelson to fill that place, and thus will have opportunity to familiarize himself with duties of the office before the new administration takes over the reins.

Mozley, who has formed a private law partnership with Burns, will immediately open the firm's offices in Santa Ana. Burns will join him next month, it is announced.

A whole county ticket of redskins was elected in South Dakota, which is much better than electing a ticket of ordinary reds.

Nematode Menace Causes Concern

Experts Endeavoring to Exterminate the Pest

Many believe the nematode to be the most serious of the many pests which infest the crops of California, particularly those grown on medium and sandy soils. And, worse still, so far no known method has been evolved for succeeding with most of our truck crops on infested lands. As time passes, the condition appears to be getting worse.

Until recently the baby lima bean growers of Southern California have had but little trouble with the nematode, but now they report heavy damage, especially on the sandy soils. One man states that a forty which formerly produced 1000 sacks, yielded but 300 sacks this season. Cantaloupe and melon growers have found it impossible to succeed on infested soil this past summer. Infested cantaloupe fields are not able to produce profitable commercial crops.

Plants affected by nematodes usually show enlarged galls on the feeding roots. These galls may be scattered or grouped so thickly that the entire root system appears to be enlarged. Root-knot enlargements are sometimes confused with the nodules on legumes caused by beneficial nitrogen-fixing bacteria. The latter are lobed or spherical, usually small and are attached to the sides of rootlets and may be detached easily.

With such crops as Irish potatoes, the nematode swellings on the tubers may become roughened and warty. Galls are found infrequently on some sweet potato varieties and field observations indicate that different crops and different varieties have varying degrees of resistance.

The mature nematode is a worm about one-fiftieth of an inch long. The female develops into a pearly-white pear-shaped body about one-fourth the size of a pinhead. In four weeks she reaches maturity and starts to lay her 500 or more eggs. There are many generations in a year, so reproduction is very rapid. The nematode passes the winter in the host plant or in the roots of weeds and other plants left in the field. The young encyst themselves so as to resist severe temperatures, and winter over easily.

In a series of sweet potato tests conducted in Los Angeles and Orange counties, the Nancy Hall variety was found to be rather susceptible, being surpassed in this doubtful honor only by the Read Brazil. On the other hand, the Porto Rico and Yellow Jersey appeared fairly resistant.

Sweet corn, sorghums and cereals are practically immune. D. G. Milbrath of the state department of agriculture says that the nematode can live over on alfalfa roots without much damage to the alfalfa crop. The growing of alfalfa is not a method of eradication, but provides a means of securing returns from the land in spite of infestation. Melons, cantaloupes, lettuce, potatoes, beets, tomatoes and spinach are affected by nematodes. Asparagus planted on infested land shows decreased vigor with the appearance of the root galls. By fertilizing heavily and using good cultural practices, asparagus growers are "getting by" on infested land.

What puzzles many is the rapid spread of the nematode. The worms move about in the soil but little. They are distributed mostly by mechanical means. Farm implements, shoes, infected bulbs, tubers and plants provide the transportation. Flood waters might easily convey infested soil to clean fields.

But little in the way of definite control data has been worked out. Sulphur, lime, cyanide and many other materials have been tried out; some of them gave no control whatever and others produced partial results. The most promising material so far seems to be sodium xanthate, but not enough work has been done with it to justify any recommendations. Mr. Milbrath has suggested a summer fallow with two or three plowings during the summer. This method of control is not very popular because high land values compel owners to get returns every year.

So far, prevention is the best cure. Next comes the use of known resistant varieties; good farm management helps a crop weather the nematode storm. On small areas it is possible to rotate, with chickens one year, garden the second and corn, milo or green feed the third. This reduces the nematode population materially. Sweet potatoes of the right varieties and sweet corn do well on light soils where nematodes appear. The best way is to keep the land clean and this is accomplished only by eternal vigilance.

Vegetables That Look Out for Themselves

Varieties of vegetables that are resistant to certain diseases, and also adapted to market demands, are being developed in certain instances, thus doing away with the necessity for many of the usual methods of control. While it is not possible to reach this goal promptly, if at all, for all vegetables, nevertheless considerable progress has already been made in this direction. A few outstanding achievements along this line are indicative of what may be expected in future years.

Asparagus growers in the United States have for many years suffered serious losses from the presence of rust on their asparagus. Breeding work inaugurated in 1916 by the United States department of agriculture, in co-operation with the Massachusetts agricultural experiment station and the Massachusetts Asparagus Growers' Association resulted in the production of the Washington strains of asparagus known as the Washington, the Martha Washington, and the Mary Washington, all of which are highly resistant to rust, and, at the same time, of superior market quality. These strains have been distributed and are now being planted largely by the asparagus growers, especially in the eastern United States.

Other outstanding examples include the development of a variety of bean known as Wells Red Kidney, which resulted from work by Cornell university and a New York grower and which is highly resistant to the anthracnose disease. The robust variety of pea beans, which is immune to mosaic, was developed at the Michigan agricultural college. Varieties of cabbage resistant to cabbage yellows, a widespread and destructive disease of that crop, have been developed by the United States department of agriculture and the Wisconsin experiment station. Varieties of tomatoes of superior commercial quality and highly resistant to the wilt disease, which is serious in the central and southern states, have been bred by the United States department of agriculture, this work being supplemented by the state experiment stations of the South.

Heavy Increase in Use of Electricity

R. H. Ballard of So. Cal. Edison Company Issues Report

That Southern California is experiencing a period of sound prosperity and more than normal growth is evidenced by the fact that the total quantity of electricity used in the Southland during the month of October exceeded the amount consumed during the same month last year by more than 23,000,000 kilowatt hours, according to a report just compiled by the statistical department of the Southern California Edison Company.

This is an increase of 16 per cent and reflects very truly the real growth of various industries and enterprises of this southwest empire. More than 340,000 electric meters throughout the length and breadth of Edison territory each month measure off with uncanny accuracy the electrical demand for the period, and the combined story of these silent workers portrays more accurately the actual story of human progress and development than any other medium yet to be found.

Demanding 43,451,111 kilowatt hours of the grand total, industry led the field, with the agricultural and railroad loads following with 28,853,612 kilowatt hours and 25,401,517 kilowatt hours, respectively. The industrial consumption for October this year was 10,000,000 kilowatt hours in excess of the same load for October, 1925. This is a gain of 33 per cent.

While the agricultural and railroad loads do not show a corresponding increase, nevertheless they do show gains of 14 and 3 per cent, respectively. The growth of 14 per cent in the agricultural load explains itself to anyone who is at all familiar with the continuous expansion which the rural back country has been making during the past 12 months. While the 3 per cent increase in railroad load seems relatively small, it indicates a healthy condition in our transportation systems.

This increase indicates clearly that our social and economic life is feeling the quickening impulse of the Christmas season and that thousands of additional street car riders are being carried to or from their work. This 3 per cent increase may in part be due to the large number of people who are annually learning to "do their Christmas shopping early," but its major cause may undoubtedly be traced to more fundamental reasons.

It is interesting to note that this railroad load of 26,079,169 kilowatt hours coincides almost exactly with the total output of one of the giant hydro-electric power plants of our company located in the high Sierras, in the northeastern part of Fresno county. This plant, known as Big Creek No. 2, generated 26,569,827 kilowatt hours during the month of October. In other words, the electricity required for transportation purposes for the month of October was practically the equivalent of all the energy developed during the same period by an entire hydro-electric plant of gigantic proportions.

In the same way the plant known as Big Creek No. 1 and the plant on Kern River known as Kern No. 1 would have used their entire combined output to supply the agricultural load, which in October amounted to 32,014,000 kilowatt-hours.

One-half the output of Kern River No. 3, another important plant, would have been required to light the streets of Southern California last month, while the combined output of the two largest plants on the Santa Ana river would have been consumed by electric ranges in use on the Edison system. Yet, when each of these plants was contemplated, there were moments of doubt about finding a market for the current they would supply.

More and more the kilowatt-hour is becoming recognized as an economic index for the statistics drawn from the meter records of a company supplying a great variety of activities show whether factories are busy or slack, whether labor is employed or idle, whether people are shopping or remaining at home, whether farmers are forcing crops or holding back. From the October report of the Southern California Edison Company it is evident that business conditions in Southern California are satisfactory, with promise for an unusually active holiday season.

UNCLE SAM'S SUPREMACY

Uncle Sam's wealth is estimated at $505,000,000,000. Forty per cent of the world's wealth is in his jeans.

That, with only a fifteenth of the world's population about him, he is doing one-half of the world's work does not satisfy the clamoring crowd. He has $25,000,000,000 in war and industrial loans as liens upon other nations.

He operates about one-half of the world's mileage of railways and three-fourths of all the telephone and telegraph lines. He produces in round numbers about half of the world's iron, copper, oil, cotton and timber. He generates 55,000,000 industrial horsepower a year and uses 48,000,000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy.

He owns and operates 250,000 factories, 750,000 retail stores, 27,000 ships, 300,000 miles of surfaced highways, 5,000,000 radio sets. The Year Book of the department of commerce also shows that a day's wage paid by Uncle Sam will buy four times the necessities of life a day's wage will buy in Milan, Vienna or Warsaw; three times as much as in Berlin or Brussels; twice as much as in London.

How to Handle Winter Lettuce

By RAYMOND ELLIS,
Assistant Farm Advisor

The winter head lettuce industry of California has grown to such proportions in the past few years that the competition for markets has been very keen. There are a great many districts and communities in the state which grow high quality lettuce and have exist in all the other districts. All of some advantages which may or may not these districts are trying to develop special demand and, as a consequence, every town and city of any consequence is supplied with lettuce.

In order to meet this competition with any degree of success, it behooves the growers to take all the precautions possible if a first-class product is to be put on the market. A grower should never cut an immature head of lettuce. Immature heads not only wilt more readily, but they spoil the market for a better product which may come later. In order to get heads at the right stage of maturity, fields should be cut over several times during the season. It is impossible to get them all at one cutting. When the lettuce is being cut, any inferior heads which might be showing disease or signs of seed stalk development should be discarded.

Another thing which growers should watch closely at harvest time is the presence of moisture on the plants. Lettuce should never be harvested when there is frost or dew on it. Neither should it be cut immediately after a rain or an irrigation. Either one of these conditions causes the leaves to be crisp and brittle, thus increasing the chances of breaking and bruising, and in that way cutting down the grade.

One of the curses of the lettuce industry is the tndency of some growers, either through greed or lack of knowledge, to attempt to take advantage of high markets and in so doing harvest immature and poor lettuce. Flooding the market with this type of product will be reflected immediately in the returns, and it is generally a difficult job to build the demand up to its former level.

Chick Association To Hold Convention

A valuable program is in store for those who are able to attend the third annual meeting of the California Baby Chick Association at the Van Nuys high school, December 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Dr. Lippincott, head of the poultry division of the University of California, is scheduled for four lectures on genetics, beginning Monday. Prof. J. E. Dougherty will report on investigations of sunlight requirements of laying hens; Dr. J. R. Beach is scheduled for a discussion of bacillary white diarrhea and fowl typhoid. Other speakers include Dr. Keef of the state department of agriculture; Dr. Hurt, county veterinarian of Los Angeles county; M. A. Schofield, E. A. Nisson, Leo Bourke and W. C. Rothwell.

Space will not permit outlining the entire program, but those that are unable to attend the entire program may refer to the Calawhite egg bulletin, or call at the farm advisor's office to determine the date that the subjects in which they are interested are presented.

Since this meeting will probably attract a good many poultrymen from this county, those who have space in their cars or are desirous of getting transportation, may list their wants at the farm advisor's office.

GAS TAX

Gasoline taxes were first imposed in 1919, when four states adopted the tax and derived a revenue of a little more than one million dollars. The practice is now general and the large revenue derived is one of the most important sources of highway income.

A New York congressman has been sued for $250,000. Any old time they want to sue us for that much, let 'em hop to it.

Up at Harvard they are psychoanalyzing the freshmen, which may be as bad as the old-fashioned hazing.

Wife Gets Divorce; Hurley Goes to Jail

Former Police Officer Found Guilty of Contempt

James E. Hurley, former Anaheim police officer, and later proprietor of a dairy here, lost his wife and his liberty on the same day.

A few minutes after Hurley was sent to jail Monday by Superior Judge James L. Allen to serve 150 days for contempt of court, his wife, Elva Hurley, was granted a decree of divorce by Superior Judge H. G. Ames.

The jail sentence was pronounced in lieu of a $300 fine, which Hurley was unable to pay after being found guilty of contempt.

Some time ago, the Orange Ice and Cold Storage Company sued him on an account and obtained judgment for the sum of $2646. An attachment was levied, but was returned unsatisfied, since no property of his could be located, it was said. He then was ordered into court November 12, for inquiry concerning his property. At that time it was discovered that he had property worth $590, which the court directed him to turn over to the ice company.

Officials of the latter company later complained that the order had been ignored. Accordingly, Hurley again was ordered into court last Friday to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. He appeared, but was unable to convince Judge Allen that he was not guilty of contempt. He was fined and then sent to jail to serve out the fine at the rate of one day for each $2.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Hurley was telling her marital troubles to Judge Ames. She said that while the Hurleys lived in Brea, her husband associated with other women. Other cruelties were recited, and the court granted an interlocutory decree of divorce.

ECONOMY LOWERS TAXES

The instalment of a budget system, the reduction of the public debt and interest charges and the reduction of federal expenditures would all be without meaning or purpose unless the economy practised and the savings accomplished were translated into lower taxes for the people. This is exactly what has been done under this administration. Confident in its ability to bring about tremendous reductions in public expenditures, the Republican party enacted a tax reduction law during the special session of 1921. This was the first tax reduction law which had been enacted since the party came in power over a decade previously.

It provided for a slashing of federal taxes in the sum of more than $1,000,000,000 a year. It was primarily a bill which afforded relief to the average family of moderate means. In the first place it increased the tax exemption of heads of families with a salary or wage income of less than $5000 a year. The exemption was increased for heads of families by $500 a year, with an additional increase of $200 a year for each child or other dependent. According to the records of the United States treasury, over 90 per cent of the taxpayers of the county were in this class so that this revision alone benefitted more than 4,000,000 heads of families and saved them in the aggregate well in excess of $100,000,000.

The law repealed the transportation tax on freight, express and parcel post, which taxes are always added to the price of the commodities transported, and which the consumer ultimately pays. It repealed the so-called "nuisance" taxes, such as a tax of 10 per cent 90 toilet articles. It repealed the so-called "luxury" tax. The women of the country well remember when they paid a 10 per cent tax on millinery, underwear, stockings, kimonos, petticoats, corsets, and other wearing apparel. That tax the law repealed. It repealed all taxes on musical instruments, sporting goods and household furniture. It repealed all taxes on life, fire, accident, burglary and other forms of insurance. It repealed the tax on railroad tickets, chairs in Pullman cars and berths in sleeping cars. In brief, this Republican tax measure lifted a burden from the pocketbooks of the American people which had been irritating them day by day since the war taxes had been enacted, taking from them hundreds of millions of dollars each year.

One of the forms of taxation imposed by the previous administration was that upon "excess profits," even though they were legitimate profits. During a war almost any kind of taxation that will raise money is warranted. In times of peace such a tax as this cannot be justified. It penalizes initiative. It completely checks the development of enterprises already established. It prevents the extension of industrial projects and thereby reacts to the injury of labor. It discourages investments in new enterprises. It acts as a barrier to pioneering in new fields, for men who are willing to take great risks and invest great sums must be permitted to reap the benefits of their vision and their hazards. The excess profits tax throttled all business because it renders ruinless foresight and initiative. This tax was one of the heaviest handicaps upon the resumption of normal conditions in the commercial and industrial world. It was repealed by the Republican tax measure of 1921.

BIG BUTTER STATES

Minnesota not only makes more butter, but also more high quality butter than any other state, said Dr. C. W. Larson, chief of the bureau of dairy industry, United States department of agriculture, in a recent address before the annual meeting of the Minnesota Creamery Operators' and Managers' Association at St. Paul, Minn. In 1920, the state manufactured the enormous total of 120,000,000 pounds, thereby leading all other states. Yet in the six years from 1920 to 1925, inclusive, according to Dr. Larson, Minnesota doubled her output until now it is over 245,000,000 pounds, or one-seventh of the creamery butter made in the United States, the greatest butter producing nation in the world.

Five states—Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska and Ohio—ranking in the order named, now produce half the creamery butter of this country.

It develops in Florida that even two Republican candidates for the Senate can't beat one Democrat.

Anyhow, we are glad we have to wait until 1928 to find out what effect this election will have in 1928.
