

JEROME SUBMITS ASSESSMENT TO BOARD

After Receiving Report Supervisors Fix Tax Levy For Coming Year

After receiving County Auditor Jerome's report of the total assessed valuation of all assessable property in the county the supervisors at a night session Tuesday fixed the tax levy for the coming year at the same figure as last year, that is, $1.46 in cities and $1.45 outside incorporated towns.

The total assessed valuation, exclusive of intangibles, is $177,460,639. This is $2,642,025 more than the official figure for last year and shows a healthy increase in county valuations despite a decrease in valuations of all properties.

The difference of $2,642,025 between the figures reported by the auditor and that announced on July 8 by County Assessor James is accounted for largely by the fact that intangibles are not included in the figure submitted by Jerome, while they were included in the auditor's statement. Part of the difference is due to duplications and errors that are worked out in the auditor's office. It is stated. The segregation of intangibles has not been completed by the auditor's office, where work is being rushed on the phase of the statement.

The statement also shows that valuations in the 13 cities of the county have increased over $600,000, the valuation being $76,542,845 this year, as compared to $75,942,845 last year.

The figures submitted to the supervisors will be used in determining the tax rate to be applied this year and the supervisors are working on the budget estimates which were submitted two weeks ago, in an effort to ascertain the exact amount of money which will have to be raised to finance county government property.

The valuation of the district outside the incorporated cities, as comprised in the four rural districts, reaches a figure of $100,917,794. This is itemized as follows: Second rural district, $23,303,355; third district, $44,913,445; fourth district, $26,679,000; and fifth rural district, $22,116,555.

In the city valuations Santa Ana maintains its rank as first with a valuation of $21,382,015, but Huntington Beach, with a material decrease in population, drops from second to third place. Second place this year goes to Fullerton, which was third last year. Other rankings are the same as last year and are as follows: Fourth, Anaheim; fifth, Newport Beach; sixth, Buena Park; seventh, Laguna Beach; eighth, Seal Beach; ninth, San Clemente; tenth, Irvine; eleventh, La Habra; twelfth, Tustin; and thirteenth, Placentia.

Buena Park Folk Back From Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nelson and child returned to their home Thursday evening of last week, following a two-month motor trip through the Yellowstone National park, on to Winnipeg to visit relatives, then back through North Dakota where they were relatives. Mr. Nelson is manager of the Buena Park Lumber company.

"We found the Mid-West extremely hot, hot, on account of rain the desert through New Mexico and Arizona comparatively cool," said Mr. Nelson. "As soon as we crossed the Canadian border we noticed that the crops were extremely good. We were told that they were twice as good as last year, but that the prices are about half what they were, so the farmer is no better off than formerly."

"We succeeded in missing most of the depressing weather in the Mid-West, although the sun made things pretty hot for us at times. We passed through the country before the heat had damaged the crops extensively, as late press reports indicate. We had planned to go on down through the heart of the South, but the blinks of smile of Old Sol argued against that course. We're happy to be back home no better off than formerly."

Arthur Ulliyot, member of the U. S. navy's destroyer Southern crew, who was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Schaffer of 522 South Helena street, Buena Park, left for the "home town" of the Shaffers in South Dakota.

FILE REPORT FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Step to Determine the Needs of Orange County in School Matters

A committee of five, composed of two members of the Fullerton high school board, two representatives of the Santa Ana board, and one member of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, presented a petition to the supervisors Tuesday asking for an educational survey of the county. The purpose of the survey is to determine the educational needs of the county.

The matter of a county-wide survey has been discussed and urged for some time and the request of the boards of the two districts where junior colleges are maintained is regarded as the first step in a program of harmony, according to J. J. Greeley of Newport Beach, who represented the Chambers of Commerce at the appearance before the supervisors.

The educational survey of the county was asked by the two boards in an effort to get on impartial professional view of the situation in the county and to make a plan for the future action so that the youth of the county could be served best in educational matters, as well as getting data for the board to a solution of the union junior college matter that has been proposed.

D. K. Hammond, president of the Santa Ana board of education, company with George Newcomb, city school business manager, read the resolution adopted by the Santa Ana board at last meeting, requesting that the supervisors be petitioned to make an educational survey similar to that conducted some years ago in Stanislaus county and declaring that it would benefit the entire county in determining its educational needs.

W. J. Travers, of the Fullerton board of education, joined in the request for the survey, declaring that there were many problems in connection with secondary education that were of great importance and that the point had been reached where it was imperative that joint action with the educators of the entire county was advisable.

DEADLOCK OVER PARKSITE PRICE

Condemnation Proceedings May Be Resorted to in the Matter

Indications that the strip of beach held between Huntington Beach and Newport Beach proposed as a state park will be acquired by condemnation proceedings was seen today with the result of statements made before the board of supervisors by Thomas E. Workman, president of the board, and several of the property owners, who, accompanied by T. T. Talbert, of Huntington Beach, appeared before the board.

Talbert and Workman endeavored to persuade the board members that negotiations should be entered into with the property owners in an effort to arrive at a price where a deal could be made without resorting to court action, but they were informed by the board that they would be unable to consider any figure other than that which the two appraising bodies had reported, and that the matter had been placed in the hands of T. W. O'McVeeney, of Los Angeles, member of the state park commission, to be carried to conclusion.

Workman previously had called on O'McVeeney, in a conference with the property owners at his office last Friday, and O'McVeeney had returned to the condemnation proceedings would be resorted to if the owners did not care to accept the price which he formerly offered them at that time. He had asked, however, that the owners consent to a court action to carry out the condemnation proceedings if the price set by the court without taking an appeal, but Workman, who represented the state park to be established, did this in the face of the price offered.

There is to be another conference on the matter at the office of O'McVeeney next Friday, and Supervisor John C. Mitchell, of Garden Grove and County Purchasing Agent F. W. Slabaugh, were designated to represent Orange county at this conference.

50 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

AUGUST 14, 1880

The State Board of Equalization visited Los Angeles a few days ago with the avowed intention of raising the assessed valuation of all property in this county from ten to fifteen per cent. After making a thorough examination of the assessment roll, however, they decided not to alter it, but they exacted a promise from the assessor to raise the property valuation next year. It seems that the action of the State Board in raising the assessments of the various counties is in consequence of the complaints made by the assessor of San Francisco, who maintains that in no other county of the state is the assessed value of property so near the true value as in San Francisco. However, that may be, it is certain that land and improvements in this county are rated much higher this year than they have been heretofore.

As Judge Dinero of San Juan Capistrano was driving home in a buggy one day last week he was halted by an individual, who presented a shot gun to enforce obedience to his demand. The judge, however, could not respond to the demand for money as he hadn't any, and he was suffered to pursue his way unscathed. The affair occurred at about the same point on the road as did the attempted stage robbery three years ago.

Mr. Cyril Gwin, a brother, who is temporarily living there, had a little girl about sixteen months old, and while playing in the yard late in the afternoon the child leaped over a tub filled with water, presumably to dabble in the water. The child was missed only a few minutes and was found standing on the ground, its arms and face in the water and life extinct. Dr. J. S. Gardiner was called as speedily as possible and although the child was evidently dead when he arrived, he spent half an hour endeavoring to resuscitate it. The untimely death of the dear, interesting little girl calls for the compassion and sympathy of everyone for the bereaved parents and relatives.

Anaheim is at present enjoying the greatest prosperity in many years. The city is increasing in population rapidly. People are coming in, buying lots, and preparing to stay. If this growth is to continue and the present prosperity to be made permanent there must be employment for those seeking employment and business for those commercially inclined. In short time there must be a solid base for our rapid growth if it is to last. What is needed is the establishment of industries that will furnish employment to those who locate here. But we can hardly expect that manufacturers will locate among us and remain unless we give them our patronage instead of extending it to Santa Ana or Los Angeles. If we would all set the example and use our influence in this direction it would be of incalculable benefit to Anaheim.

Orders have been placed by the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroad for $3000 refrigerator cars, and the Santa Fe has made preparations to increase its rolling stock by the addition of 1000 cars of the same pattern for the accommodation of the Southern California orange and lemon crops. In addition the Santa Fe has contracted for 6000 ordinary freight cars. The Southern Pacific is in the market for 1250 stock and 350 box cars.

The retail dealers association have organized by adopting a code of by-laws and people having a private system of paying their bills had better stand from under. Nearly every merchant in town has joined the association and the list will be kept open until everyone has become a member. There is no good reason why retail dealers should be made the victims of designing persons, and we learn that a number have accounts upon their books which they would gladly part with at a discount. These easy-going characters, after "standing off" a local merchant to his limit and being asked to walk up to the captain's office, become greatly offended, and immediately transfer their previous patronage elsewhere. This practice will in future be impossible, for each member of the association finds himself to refuse credit to one who leaves an overdue account at another store. Anaheim has not been altogether free from this class of persons who are opposed on honor to paying their bills, and it is high time they be "bawled out" as one of the sufferers puts it.

Walter Crowther is having Valencia Lates grafted on to Navelis and sweets are doing like mad. There is big money in Valencia and in a few years there will be no doubt a slump in prices, on account of the increased supply, but the growers are willing to take a chance on that score. However there is good money in other varieties of nice, clean fruit. The purple scale is causing growers some concern and many orchardists are using the spray while others fumigate. The black scale is also cropping out more than the growers wish to see. It behooves all to be ever up in arms against these pests and concerted action all along the line is absolutely necessary.

RECOMMEND NEW SYSTEM

Suggested That Petty Law-breakers be Invited to Appear and Answer

Keep the "Black Maria" in the police garage more of the time and "invite" lawbreakers to come to the station through summons rather than hauling them by force.

This would be the policy of Anaheim if they put into effect a suggestion of Chief Clarence S. Morrill, chief of the state bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, by the California Taxpayers' Association.

The plan would save the taxpayers' money by eliminating officers' time and equipment used in taking persons to jail according to the Association, and this item is a considerable expense.

It would also obtain the necessary objectives without subjecting citizens to the humiliation and inconvenience of physical arrest. A person who has a bail bond evils might be removed, the Association believes, by issuing summons instead of throwing lawbreakers in jail. "Strange indeed that we continue to rely on an enforcement procedure carved out of a cruel and lawless society by our medieval forebears, a procedure confronted at that time only with murder, rape, treason, robbery, and a few other offenses," declared the Association.

If a man in that disorganized era committed such crimes, of course it was necessary to take him into custody for trial. Does that mean if one forgets to obtain a license for a dog, or neglects to remove an unsanitary accumulation in his yard, or unprecipitately plants a few flowers from the public park, that to obtain his presence in court to answer the charge, he must be taken physically into custody, conducted to a police station, registered, and thrown into a cell until bail can be brought?

"At any rate, police departments are arresting thousands of persons needlessly when their appearance in court could be obtained without calling on the devices of an unenlightened age. The prevalence of physical arrests for violation of minor regulations is based not upon practical requirements, but on a procedure developed at a time when criminal law related almost wholly to vicious acts."

The new hardware clerk prided himself on always having a snappy comeback. "Do you keep refrigerators?" the timid-looking woman inquired quickly. "No," he snapped, "we sell them." "Anyhow," she said, as she strolled toward the door, "I'll keep the one you were going to sell me. Good morning."

JAMES SLEEPER RAPS POLITICIANS

Replies to Charges Hurlled by Montgomery at Placencia
Chamber Meeting

Pointing out the falsity of charges hurled against him by those he termed as "politicians," County Assessor James S. Sleeper, when addressing members of the Placencia chamber of commerce at the regular luncheon held Tuesday noon, challenged his opponent at the primary election, Mr. Montgomery, to definitely point out inequalities of assessments and literally to "come down to earth instead of talking in the clouds."

Assessor Sleeper's talk was in reply to the speech made before the Placencia chamber of commerce by Mr. Montgomery. Other political figures including Candidates Ralph McFadden, Lee Parrott, Mrs. S. J. Parrott, and Assessor Sleeper, all spoke.

Assessor Sleeper's talk followed Mr. Montgomery's statement that he had defied the will of the people and also the grand jury's recommendation in regard to a revaluation of the county. You remember that the grand jury recommended that the board of supervisors appoint a committee of five, one from each supervisorial district. Does this say anything about the assessor appointing them? Why blame me, the assessor, for appointing this committee with the understanding that they must make the assessments and not lower the same according to the laws of the state governing taxation. Is it any wonder then that Mr. Montgomery and his manager want to shift the blame to me? They had all the chance in the world to bring all these inequalities before the board of equalization if they could prove them, but they could not, so they are now trying to camouflage the issue by blaming me. Whenever the taxpayers want a revaluation of this county, which is properly done by outsiders will cost around $100,000. I will be for it, but at the present time I do not think the real taxpayers (not the politicians) are in favor of it.

"The late board of equalization was in session here 2 weeks in July and only had 21 complaints and in the 20 years that I have been your assessor there have not been 35 changes in my assessments, something no other assessor in the state can say with the equal number of assessments. The late board equalized after spending over $500,000 and 5 men still working on the revaluation of the county, had 237 complaints before the board of equalization last month to our 21 in this county."

"This whole revaluation scheme was started for a political purpose and was to injure me politically because one of the worst political bosses could not get me. I told him as long as the people of this county elect me their assessor I was going to be assessor and would not be dictated to by any other official or individual."

"There was a map of Orange county exhibited here a few weeks ago for the purpose of comparing the assessed value of the north half against the south half of the county. I considered this an insult to the intelligence of the people of this county, comparing hills, mountains, part of the Irvine ranch, 67,555 acres of the Cleveland National Forest (which he would have you believe is assessable) and the most sparsely settled part of our coast line against what he calls the north half of the county which comprises all of the cities of the county, the Santa Ana valley which is considered one of the richest spots on earth, and the coast line from Seal Beach to Corona Del Mar and all the rich oil lands of the county. I think you will agree with me when I again say that I consider this an insult to the intelligence of the people of Orange county."

"I conclude I want to state that every assessment made by this office and every assessment made since 1910 in this county, can be found on the assessment rolls filed in the auditor's office and are open to anyone wishing to view the same. How can I cover up an assessment under these conditions, as some people would have you believe?"

"Thanking you for the privilege of being with you and hoping I have given you some information that will be of benefit to you in casting your vote for assessor, I again thank you."

Authorized Publicity

"Yes," said the fat man, "my size doesn't worry me, because everywhere I walk around, people laugh at me, and that makes me feel small."

GOOD DEMAND FOR OUR FRUIT

Eastern Market Holds Steady
On Sunkist Oranges and Lemons

A good demand for California oranges is being shown throughout the country even with the general price reductions prevalent in other food commodities according to R. Z. Eller, dealer service manager of the California Fruit Growers Exchange on his return from the United States and Canada.

"Consumers, considering general business conditions, have been taking Sunkist oranges and lemons freely," stated Mr. Eller. "Confidence in the dependability of the nationally advertised trademark is definitely expressed by housewives in these times of careful buying."

"Retailers are showing a great deal of enthusiasm for California citrus fruit and have turned to with a will in their share of the distribution of this year's crop. Close margins and careful merchandising have in many instances resulted in a very satisfactory volume of business for alert merchants," explained Mr. Eller.

"It is extremely noticeable as the years pass that dealers are becoming more and more respectful to the Sunkist brand. This year Sunkist has met with extremely favorable cooperation on the part of the trade in all sections of the country."

"The consumption of oranges in the fresh fruit drink field has been decided in favor of this year due to the increased number of fresh fruit drink stands, warm weather throughout the East, and the acceptance of orange juice, lemonade and orangeade as national health drinks," continued Mr. Eller, Sunkist dealer service manager.

MANY APPLY FOR STATE AID

Nearly 7,000 Applications Received by Welfare Department Since January 1

Nearly 7,000 applications for state aid have been received by the state department of social welfare since January 1, when the new aid to the needy aged law went into effect.

Of these approximately 2,500 have been acted upon, according to the department.

Recognizing that the avalanche of applications would soon overwhelm the department, many new assistants have been added to the force checking over the pleas for aid and it is expected that the workers will catch up with the applications within a few months.

"Until the present year the counties have been charged with care of the needy aged," said Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, department director.

"To determine roughly what the state could expect if it took over part of this aid the department made a survey for the legislature. It showed that in 1928 the counties were granting aid to 2,470 needy persons over 70 years of age and outside institutions. Of this number only 1,439 were known to meet the conditions of eligibility as to age, citizenship, residence and need specified in the present law.

"But nearly four times as many persons applied for aid than we had estimated were eligible. Consequently we have had to greatly increase our staff to care for these unexpected requests."

The counties and the state share equally in the aid and for this reason every application must be studied by the state and rejected or approved.

"It is our obligation to protect the state's interests and we therefore give each application minute attention," Mrs. Saylor declared.

"Word has reached that reports are being broadcast that the state sends four and five separate investigators to see these people who apply. This is not true. We send no one to interview applicants, trusting entirely to the report submitted by county officials.

"If the county report seems fair and correct we grant the request for aid. If it is incorrect we are forced to turn it down."

Of the 7,000 applications, Mrs. Saylor estimated that probably 75 per cent would be approved.

Short Weight Customers

A vigorous campaign being conducted against Northern California chain stores for short weight delivery of groceries will soon be extended to the southern portion of the state, according to the state department of agriculture.

In all the arrests made in the north no evidence could be produced to prove that fraud was being practiced by employees with sanction of the operating companies.

McFadden Plans Are Perfected

Pointing out that, under the present plan of budgeting, the cost of polling groves comes from the county's general fund, and if this expense were charged to the sheriff's office where, he stated, it belongs, the cost of operating this office would undoubtedly be in excess of its present budget, Ralph J. McFadden, candidate for sheriff, addressed a group of 30 citizens at Buena Park last week.

Definite plans for the promotion of a successful campaign for the election of this candidate were perfected at the meeting.

S. James Tuffee of Placencia, president of the McFadden for Sheriff club, introduced Fred Bastany as chairman of the evening.

Other speakers who supported this candidate were William Schumacher of Buena Park who endorsed McFadden as being qualified for the sheriff's office, O. T. Stephens, La Habra, and Walker Davis, Brea, who stated that prompt and efficient work was necessary; H. A. Lake, Garden Grove, who stressed newspaper advertising, mentioning local supporters; Archie Pay of Anaheim, who spoke of efficient executive work; Ross Shaffer, Tustin, who told of McFadden's honesty and integrity, and Louis H. London of Anaheim, who stated that unified action was necessary in putting over a successful campaign.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA TELEPHONE COMPANY

OBSERVATIONS

VIEWED WITH ALARM

There awhile ago consternation reigned in certain quarters when the report was printed in the paper that the Southern Republic was going to put a ban on gambling. Lots of folks on both sides of the line showed signs of shivers. To cut out games of chance down there would kill the goose that laid the golden egg. It might lead to a crash, or something. However, after a thorough investigation it was discovered that what was really meant, the government chief executive had in mind the stopping of small gambling joints that are not authorized. That is taken to mean no bout all those places, what you call in this country, 'er what, oh yes, ze bootlegger.

ANOTHER MOBILE EXPERIMENT

A well known eastern newspaper writer says that he knows a man back there who had $500. He was a truck driver. He took a chance. The newspaper writer said he opened (S-h-s-s) a speak-easy, and it is said the man now has all kinds of money, lives on easy street, and has a racoon coat an' everything.

ALL DEPENDS WHAT'S ON INSIDE

A high court in a southern state holds there is no law there to prevent curious persons from peeping in windows.

OF COURSE, AMERICANOS DO NOT GO FAR AFIELD

It is said that the ban on gambling below the Rio Grande only applies to unauthorized joints inland, but does not affect the gilded halls close to the border.

TAKING A LONG SHOT

The rumor that prevailed that the republic below was going to stop gambling met with a cool reception in certain quarters, when the boys around Aunt Jane and in Hot Water wagged a 100 to 1 that it wouldn't.

HEY, RUBE!

The wise cracking cowboy humorist said when he attended a banquet once upon a time, one of the speakers laid his watch on the table in front of him. The humorist is quoted as saying the speaker was talking against time, but not ideas.

AFTER THE BAWL IS OVER

One of the amusing incidents, after a fella has been knocked out in a prize fight, is to hear the fallen hero squawk. He sets up all kinds of alibis, prejudiced referee, foul, underweight, and what have you. But after the squealing he fades out of the "pitcher" and joins the ranks of the good ole wagons that done broke down.

EVERYTHING IS JUST FINE

After they get the tariff settled, the farm bloc straightened out, prohibition in shape so it won't need any more appropriations, they could then appoint a commission to try and find out who put the salt in the ocean and see if the water from Boulder dam is good to drink.

LAUGH AND THE WORLD LAUGHS WITH YOU

Some time ago they gave a banquet in a hilltown and after things got going good a man raised a glass and said: "And now I will drink water from the Colorado river." It is said all the guests laughed. Now, the plot thickens. Did they laugh because the man said he was going to drink water, or did they laugh because the man said he was going to drink water from that river.

GETTING IT OFF YOUR CHEST

Anyhow, when things get clogged up, and everything seems topsy turvy, you can go fishing.

CONSISTENCY THOU ART A JEWELL

To let foreign ink in free and then shut down wells here, in order to prevent overproduction, affords food for a mathematical proposition that is just about as clear as crude oil.

NO TELLING WHERE THIS WOULD END

A foreign prize fighter who hit the canvas claims a foul because the other fella hit him on the thigh. Now, if he had been kicked on the shins, or slapped on the wrist he might prosecute his opponent for assault and battery.

FAILED TO CLICK

Speaking of freedom of the seas it seems the freedom of the knees still holds good because those long skirts are not so popular.

PROVIDING FODDER FOR THE ENEMY

Shutting down oil production here, thereby throwing thousands of men out of employment, and letting oil come in free from foreign lands, may lay the foundation for a whale of a lot of fireworks in the fall. But they say we must save our oil for future use.

WALKED UP HILL AND DOWN AGAIN

The disarmament and peace conference, or whatever you call it, seems to have broken up with considerable discord, but it appears there were enough ships left to fetch the delegates back home.

TOO MANY COOKS SPOIL THE BROTH

When they started to cut that disarmament cake they found that there were not enough pieces to go around.

HELLO! HELLO! THEY DON'T ANSWER!

It's a safe bet that if they do not invite your uncle to attend the next sinking confab there will be no meetin'.

HEY, BIG BOY, WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

Just why your uncle goes over there to help those guys fix their fences, when he has a lot of strays running around at home, is what you call the matza's gesundtite.

SAY, BILL, WAKE ME UP WHEN THEY'RE THROUGH

The height of something or other, during one of the revues, is to stage a fight between a couple of the leading ladies.

YOU CAN LEAD A HORSE TO WATER, ETCETERA

During the session of sinking ships they talked and talked and talked and then they went home.

THEM WERE THE HAPPY DAYS

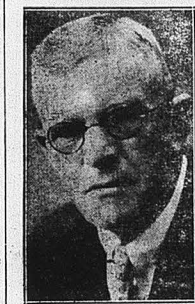

If you look closely you will see that the promoters in the heavy division of mitt meeknowadays get red ink at the final count, something different compared with the days of not so long ago when they had a million dollar gate. From all accounts it seems in the cauliflower circles there is also an overproduction.

MEBBE THEN THEY WOULD ALL BOOST FOR CALIFORNIA

If they ever got prohibition and the tariff settled once and for all, whatever would they talk about then?

Why Orange County Needs a New Assessor

GEORGE D. MONTGOMERY
Candidate for Assessor

Two candidates are in the field. One a man of mature years, the other in the maturity of his young manhood.

One has been in the office twenty years, the other has had twenty years training in business, fifteen of which were with corporations known to recognize ability as the only requisite for advancement. He was the man directly responsible for the elimination of dual telephone service in Southern California. He bore the brunt of the immense amount of detail work in connection with the consolidation of the two great telephone systems in Los Angeles.

One, by reason of years' contact with the same daily grind has, by the simple law of nature, become more or less antiquated. In his advance age his viewpoint is not the same, his outlook has dimmed his grasp of assessment problems has necessarily diminished. The other, in the vigor of youth matured by success comes as a new breeze with mind alert, with keen insight into the vital problems of assessment work, with enthusiasm, ambition and determination for accomplishment.

One, because of uninterrupted service has lost sight of many of the necessary qualifications of a public servant. The other thoroughly realizes the importance and necessity of cooperation, he knows what the people expect, he understands their wants.

The incumbent has served his time and has served most faithfully and conscientiously. But some day he must step out and turn over the reins of office to a successor.

The new candidate has every qualification any successor could ever have, he stands at the threshold of public service and says: "Here am I, prepared and qualified to answer your call to duty. If elected, every honest, sincere and strenuous effort of which I am capable will be made to faithfully and conscientiously prove true to my trust."

Mr. Montgomery is the logical man to select. He is a citrus house president, and exchange director, a university graduate, a Spanish War veteran.

Vote for George D. Montgomery for county assessor.

MONTGOMERY CLUB FOR ASSESSOR

Preserving Landmark

Reading adobe, oldest landmark north of Fort Sutter, is to be preserved for posterity.

Through the activity of Native sons, the old building will be rehabilitated and put into shape to give protection of future generations of tourists.

On the banks of the Sacramento river, southeast of Anaheim, stands a deserted, decrepit, seared by fire and beaten and battered by winter winds and summer heat, the old Indian adobe stands a mute testimony to the sturdy interpretation of Shasta county's most notable pioneer.

Eighty-three years ago Major Pearson Reading built the adobe of sun-dried bricks of mud and straw. This was the second house built on the Rancho Buena Ventura, his vast estate of 25,000 acres granted him by Governor Micheltorena of Mexico. The first house, built in 1846, was destroyed and the caretaker killed by hostile Indians while Major Reading was away on military duties for the United States government. The adobe was built the following year.

Of all the buildings since erected upon the ranch, the old adobe, with the rock-lined well just outside the door, alone remains—it and six fine old palm trees with gnarled twisted trunks and gnarled branches.

The old half-foot half dwelling, has romantic history. Men have gathered around the great fireplace, the men who once decided the destinies of California—men like its builder, Major Reading, and his illustrious and intimate compeer, Captain John A. Sutter, and the great pathfinder, John G. Fremont.

Shasta county was organized here, and this was the first county seat. On the banks of the Sacramento, before its door was moored the Rainbow, built and equipped by Major Reading, and which "without the use of line, or rubbing its banks," in words of the captain, picked its way daintily up the river.

Major Reading was commissioned by the United States government to take care of the Indian lands and the refugees. He converted them into good citizens and employed a large number to till his fields and care for his flocks and herds. His grave and that of his son lie on an eminence near the house marked by a bronze tablet.

Leaves Decision To the Court

Because it is not a Court, the State Board of Equalization will not attempt to decide the constitutionality of taxing interest from government bonds or royalties from patents and copyrights under the new corporation income tax act.

H. G. Cattel, of Pasadena, member of the member of the Board from the fourth equalization district, makes this announcement here today following determination of several appeals taken from the new corporation income tax act.

Relying upon provisions of the new law requiring the 4% tax to be paid on income from all sources, the Commissioner had made additional assessments against a number of corporations on account of their refusal to calculate taxes on this basis.

Taxpayers questioned these assessments upon authority of United States Supreme Court decisions invalidating Massachusetts statutes purporting to tax exempt income. In addition, the Board found that the Supreme Courts of Washington and Tennessee had made similar holdings in those states last June. However, the United States District Court had ruled a short time before that a New York law taxing income from copyrights was constitutional.

Confronted with these conflicting views, Cattel said that although the Equalization Board was unable to find any marked distinction between the situations in Massachusetts and California, it would hesitate to hold the local statute invalid. Commenting upon this phase of the problem in its decision, the Board explained its position thus:

"The power to declare a law unconstitutional is one of the highest attributes of judicial authority. Although we sit in these matters as a quasi-judicial body, and must decide questions of law as well as of fact, we should not lose sight of the ultimate fact that we are not a Court but merely an administrative Board.

"It might be argued that, if the law is plainly unconstitutional, why should taxpayers be put to the trouble and expense of going to the Courts for a decision? However, there is diversity of opinion as to the constitutionality of the Act, and it seems to us desirable that this controversy should be settled by the courts, whose authority to bind acts of the Legislature invalid cannot be questioned."

It is said that a number of corporations receiving patent royalties and moving picture companies owning copyrights will be affected by the Board's ruling, as well as banks and other corporations investing in government securities.

Governor Ritchie of Maryland went into the eastern part of his state the other day to make a political speech and immediately it started raining, breaking the long drought. Here is a farm relief tip for some of our western governors.

Good Lessons Then And Now

The Gazette this week carries in its "News of Long Ago" columns, a bit of interesting news of 1903, the lessons of which are as applicable to Anaheim residents today as they most certainly were then. There is, perhaps, a slight difference in business conditions of the two periods, yet the truths which the article contains are constant. If there is to be prosperity in our city, there must persist amongst our towns people the thought that patronage should stay at home. For those who are at this time so unfortunate as to be unemployed, certainly it would be a great help if industries with their labor needs would locate here. When this happened, and the tide were put to work, Anaheim's buying power would advance, and so the circle of prosperity would widen.

County Clerk Prepares Way For Primaries

Preparations are being made by a large crew of workers under the direction of County Clerk J. M. Backs for mailing out sample ballots, information concerning candidates on the state tickets and notification of the polling place to the 45,337 registered voters in the county who are entitled to vote at the primary election on August 26. This material, which constitutes a bulk almost unimaginable to persons who are not familiar with it, is to be sent through the mails commencing August 16 and the mailing must be completed by August 21, according to state law.

One entire corner of a room in the basement of the court house is stacked high with 287 bundles comprising 47,000 books of 101 pages each, containing information concerning the candidates for state offices which is required to be furnished to all voters. This booklet lists all candidates for the various parties, and contains their statements and lists of sponsors. An additional 2000 books has been ordered from Sacramento by County Clerk Backs to provide a sufficient quantity to furnish each registered voter with a copy.

Superior Radio Is Remodeling Store

Remodeling this week of office and storage space in the Superior Radio Service quarters at 308 West Center street will provide more room for displaying new model radios, more office room, and a larger shop, according to Manager P. C. Davidson.

Office and show cases will be located on the balcony, which has been greatly enlarged on a deck built over the shop.

Sees New Star

Here's one for the astronomical book. Joseph C. Inman of Gridley claims to have seen a new star which aroused his curiosity by its eccentricities. It is a dancing star, moving in an unusual orbit irregularly, perhaps first in a perpendicular motion and then swinging over a space from south to north.

Local astronomers are "stumped." They cannot agree that the star is visible, but some insist it is there, so scientific endeavor will continue.

Valencias Whip Poets, 10 to 1

Uncorking a powerful battery attack in the fifth inning to overcome the home-run scored in the first stanza, George's Pace's Anaheim Valencias dumped the Whittier Poets by the score of 10 to 1, in the game at the latter's field Tuesday evening.

The victory over Whittier gives Anaheim a tie with La Habra for second place, just two games behind the league-leading Santa Ana club. The latter won from Orange and La Habra to Olive Tuesday.

J. C. Lamb Has Proved a Good Collector

Voters of Orange county who have known Tax Collector John C. Lamb for many years are urging and working for his re-election. They appreciate that the county is fortunate in its selection of a tax collector, and are anxious that the more recent residents be assured that they will make no mistake by voting for Mr. Lamb.

Orange county never had an official who was more attentive to his duties. He should be allowed to succeed himself without opposition because of his splendid record.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Little spent the week-end with friends in Long Beach. Previous to that they were hosts for a several-day visit of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Fuller and family of Summerland. Mr. Little is owner and manager of the store by that name on West Center street.

Mrs. H. L. Bone and daughter were visitors in Anaheim Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jones of Anaheim left this city Saturday en route to Feather River where they will spend a two-week vacation. Mr. Jones is manager of the West Center street store of Alpha Beta Markets.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Boden of 205 E. Charles street and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lehman of Santa Ana drove to Agua Sunday, returning the same day after "taking in" the sights in the district immediately below the border.

"We were surprised at the modernness of some of the buildings which have been erected, following several fires in the Tia Juana district," Mr. Boden said. "We had a pleasant journey. The ride along the coast is particularly fascinating."

The Bodens own the Brown-Bilt shop store at 111 E. Center street.

Roy Wethered, who is with the Hilted-Wethered Furniture company on North Los Angeles street, this week returned to work following a two-week vacation spent at the beaches. Friends congratulated him upon the acquisition of a stylish tan complexion.

Mrs. Louise Wilson, living on West Broadway, leaves next week on a visit to her parents in Colorado, whom she has not had the pleasure in seeing for several years. She will be accompanied by her son, Tommy, a sturdy lad of three, and her baby daughter. She will be absent six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dolan and family are sojourning at Balboa for the month of August.

Miss Helen West, Miss Josephine Lopez and Ernest DuBois this week motored to Olympia, Washington, where they will visit Miss West's relatives. They departed Anaheim Saturday and expect to be gone two weeks.

John Pfeningger was in town on Monday calling upon some of his old time friends. John's orange grove on the state highway between this city and Fullerton is one of the most beautiful places in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Troutman of North Emily street this week were spending the first week of their vacation at the beaches, and next week plan to go to Sequoia National Park for two weeks. Mrs. Troutman is employed at the Alpha Beta market.

CALIFORNIA'S REPRESENTATION

With 20 congressmen at Washington, D. C. instead of 11, California is slated to assume a more influential place in national legislation as a result of the new census giving the state a population of 5,600,000.

Just what the ratio of population for the new congressional districts will be cannot be determined until final census figures are compiled.

Certain it is, however, that most of the new representatives will come from south of the Tehachapi, for that is where California has made its greatest population gains in the last 10 years.

At present the population ratio is 275,000. The new figure, according to estimates in Governor Young's office, will be in the neighborhood of 280,000.

Los Angeles, on this basis, would be entitled to four of the new congressmen and the coast to three more.

California's gain will prove to be some other state's loss, as the membership of the House of Representatives will continue to be 435. Missouri, according to census figures, will lose three members, while Kentucky, Iowa, Mississippi and Indiana will be reduced by two members each.

Congress will agree upon the ratio figure at its meeting this December. The federal law requires that each state must enact the legislation necessary to reapportion its own representation in the house.

This means that reapportionment will again be a burning subject before California's 1931 legislature—less than four months away.

Should the legislature fail to reapportion, the additional congressmen allotted California by congress may be elected at large. The 11 congressmen now elected by the state would run from existing districts as at present, until such time as redistricting by the legislature is finished.

NOT A CONFIDENCE GAME

Majority sentiment in the United States approved the London Naval Treaty, not because the American people did not believe in adequate national defense and the equality of our fleet with any other, but because they did believe that the London treaty paved the way for such naval construction as would repair the loss of parity which has occurred under the operations of the Washington agreement. Following the Washington conference, in which parity in battleships was agreed on, necessitating the sinking of a half billion dollars worth of American warships in process of construction, both Japan and Great Britain, taking what many people believe to be an unfair advantage, engaged in rapid construction of cruisers. The United States meanwhile stood still. Under the terms of the London treaty the other nations are restricted in further cruiser building, and the United States is given opportunity to build up to the agreed ratio of strength. To do this will require American naval construction costing about a billion dollars in the next few years.

The pacifist organizations of the country, with seemingly unlimited financial resources, are now preparing to oppose this construction, claiming that the parity agreed on at London was only permissive rather than obligatory. The American people have assumed that the agreement implied an intention on the part of the American government to achieve the naval equality provided in the treaty. They take no stock in the claim that there is any secret agreement not to go ahead with the naval construction by which the treaty was justified in American public opinion: otherwise the whole proceeding would be rendered farcical.

All those who have recommended the London naval treaty to the American people are in honor bound to execute the program which justified that treaty with the people. What the pacifists propose is a deceptive and dishonorable governmental policy—a betrayal of national interest under cover of protecting that interest. Congress is chiefly to blame for the inaction which encouraged foreign naval powers to build beyond us. Not one of our internationalists was heard to protest against the action of the British and Japanese governments in so far outbuilding the United States after entering into an agreement the American people believed meant naval disarmament, not a thimble-rigging game to bring about American naval inferiority as it was evidently assumed to be by other powers and my own pacifists. Undoubtedly those who have had to do with framing and ratifying the London treaty will be active in balking the plan of the pacifists to put them in the light of promoting a confidence game on the American people.

AMERICANIZING PANAMA

It has been going on for a long while and the process is complete now. Americanization has not only invaded but overcome the Republic of Panama. Proof lies ready at hand. According to a recent announcement, the Panamanians in the past fiscal year have consumed three million packages of chewing gum. Multiply the number by five and you have fifteen million sticks of gum, which proves how far a little arithmetic can go. And automobiles go even further. Panama has nineteen motor cars for every mile of its 345 miles of national highway.

Chewing gum and the automobile are not all. Far from it. American is fast becoming the speech of Panama. Even the members of the British colony, with long residence on the Isthmus, have had much of their accent submerged and speak American slang with facility. Things have come to such a pass that young girls now go out unaccompanied by a duenna. As if this were not shocking enough, they play tennis and golf and drive their own cars.

Spanish-Americans of a nationalistic turn are shedding bitter tears at these changes. They are pardonable tears, but futile. Still, they may turn to sympathy to the young secretaries of the American legation in Panama who speak the language of Shakespeare with a conscientious, if slightly unsuccessful, English accent.

One of the interesting bits of news flashed across the Atlantic from Europe recently, was the information that the British government was dispatching warships to Egypt to protect the lives and property of foreigners in that disturbed country. The British government evidently believed that such a procedure was necessary for the sake of security. The Egyptians of course, denied this, and stated that their government was abundantly able to look after the situation itself.

Imports of Recreation

American tourists' expenditures in foreign countries in 1929 have been officially estimated at $745,000,000 against $693,000,000 in 1928. Notwithstanding frequent assertion that Americans are in too much of a rush to learn how to play, official statistics prove that their vacation outings bulk heavy in our international exchange.

We are a nation of producers, agricultural and industrial, and after satisfying our own needs have a great surplus to export. Yet with one exception our state for recreation has more to do with our foreign exchange than any single commodity we export, and more than any one we import. A comparison with a few leading exports would be surprising to anyone who thinks otherwise.

Raw cotton is the premier export commodity. For years it has stood at the head of the list of peace-time trade. In the last year the exports of cotton were valued at $770,820,000. It still retains its leading position, but recreation, an import item, is close upon its heels. The latter has stepped to second position, far outdistancing two other commodities that have been making gains on cotton.

These two are automobiles and petroleum. Total exports of automobiles including parts and accessories, in 1929 amounted to $339,290,000, while petroleum and its products amounted to $511,581,000. No other item on the commodity list comes near to recreation's total, and as for the list of "invisibles," it is even larger than the "exports of capital" evidenced by public offerings of loans in 1929, which had a net value of $671,000,000.

American tourists are buying, rest, amusement and education from foreign countries just as Brazil. Therefore, the total cost becomes a cash claim against the United States in the balancing of international accounts. After deducting $180,000,000 of foreign tourist expenditures here there is still a balance of $450,000,000 due other countries, which is equal to the war debt payments for about two and a half years.

In the settlement of export and import accounts, such items as these are affecting matters against our huge exports of goods, and thus help to stabilize the exchange.

Which shall we consider the lucky states, the ones who gain or the ones which lose congressmen under the new census?

CALIFORNIA'S SCHOOL HOUSES

Most Beautiful in the World and Have Total Valuation of $357,000,000

California's public school buildings, known far and wide as the most beautiful in the world, are also the most efficient.

Such is the assertion of Vierling Kersey, director of the State Department of Education. The new division of schoolhouse planning is working wonders in adding counties to plan school buildings with a high degree of usefulness, he says.

Today, school buildings alone in California represent a total value of more than $357,487,450.21. Orange county ranks third among the 58 counties of the state in valuation of public school buildings, with a total of $11,000,000.

Even the tiny one and two-room schoolhouses are now being planned with an eye to architectural beauty as well as efficiency, according to Kersey. "For some time the department has been planning the need of ideal illustrations of the use of rural school buildings," he explained. "We now have developed five of these, dealing with the specific problem of the one and two-room schools. These sketches show ideal rural school solutions."

Los Angeles leads the state in value of its school buildings, with a total of $182,492,918. Alameda county is next, with $30,910,835. The eight next highest counties (excluding San Francisco, whose schools are listed as city property) are:

Orange, $11,000,000; Fresno, $10,592,575; San Diego, $10,131,651; Kern, $9,000,000; Santa Clara, $8,921,504; Sacramento, $7,467,019; San Bernardino, $7,347,506; and Riverside, $6,402,238.

A Pittsburgh suburb boasts of a "holier" fire department. This ought to go good unless the girls get a runner in their hose.

The highway engineers are now busy in all parts of the country eliminating curves. The women of the country did that several years ago.

Cheapening the Grain Ration

Present grain prices help to enable the dairyman and poultryman to get along on the return that he is obtaining for his products, namely, milk, meat and eggs. These latter represent manufactured products. If the price of raw materials is reduced without injuring quality or retarding production, the operating cost is thereby reduced. In the light of present price levels for both dairy and poultry products, it becomes necessary to reduce operating costs.

All know that the principal component parts of a ration are carbohydrates, proteins, minerals and vitamins. For different forms of livestock the proportions are varied, according to their needs and requirements. The grains offer the principal source of carbohydrates for any ration. Some differences in the proportions of proteins and carbohydrates exist in barley, corn, wheat, alfalfa and clover. Likewise a difference will exist in different lots of the same grain. In general, however, the above grains are interchangeable in a grain ration.

Since it is desirable to have a certain amount of variety in the ration, it would not be best to have the entire ration made up from one grain. But the bulk of that ration can be made up from the grain providing the cheapest total digestible nutrients. On the basis of present prices, barley will provide the total digestible nutrients at a lower figure than any of the other grains of a similar analysis. Barley is a simple crop of California and over a period of years will provide the total digestible nutrients at a lower figure than any of the grains. Since this is true, it should be a part of every grain ration for dairy or poultry stock to keep them familiar with it. This is especially true of poultry.

The market price for corn, which is closely comparable to barley in feeding value, has been nearly twice that asked for barley. Yet the latter, through the corn growing districts, considerable damage to the crop is reported, which will probably strengthen the price of that grain.

These tree-sitting endurance contests that the boys and girls are starting will doubtless be taken up in due time by the candidates who are not sure whether the prevailing sentiment in their districts is wet or dry.

Protect the Beaches

Frustrating attempts by oil companies to drill on beach frontage near Santa Barbara, the California Supreme Court in two recent decisions has upheld the plea of Attorney General U. S. Webb and dismissed actions instituted by J. E. Kelley and T. G. Kennedy against the Surveyor General of the State of California to compel the latter to issue permits authorizing them to prospect for oil and gas upon lands located within the Elwood Oil Field. These cases, which were personally argued by Attorney General Webb in the Supreme Court, represent an important victory for the people of the State of California in the preservation of its beaches from exploitation by private interests. Kelley and Kennedy were represented by Charles A. Son, the latter now being an aspirant to the office of Attorney General.

FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

PORTUGAL

Travelers returning from the little-known country of Portugal report that it is the most honest country in the world. In the hotels the key to your room is hung on a hook outside of your door and nobody ever steals anything. You can leave your suitcase, your camera or your overcoat on a railroad train or a station platform or in a parked car on the street, and nobody bothers them. The people are polite and hospitable as well as honest. If a sudden shower comes up, house doors upon an idle occupants ask passersby to step in for shelter until the rain stops. That sounds like a veritable paradise. It would be, perhaps, if Portugal had a stable government. In the last twenty-six years there have been twenty-two revolutions. Under the present dictator, General Carmona, the little nation is settling along nicely.

POPULATION

Early reports from the Census office indicate that the decline in the birthrate in the past ten years is greater than ever. It begins to look as if, in another ten years we will have come to an annual increase of only 10,000 or less than one half of one per cent. in population. And that will have tremendous economic significance. Cities will not grow so fast. Fewer new schools will be needed. Real estate values will not increase so rapidly. Fewer homes will be built. The proportion of elderly people to young will be larger, and old age pensions and retirement funds will become matters of prime importance. There are not considerations for the distant future. They are based upon facts which are here, now, and may affect economic conditions very soon.

SKYSCRAPERS

New York's newest skyscraper, to occupy an entire city block on the East River waterfront at the foot of Wall Street, will be 105 stories high. There is no economic limit to height except the congestion of traffic which comes from crowding so many people into a small area. Cincinnati has a new solution for the skyscraper problem. A new building going up there will be 16 stories high and will be a combination of office buildings, hotel and parking garage, with two large department stores and numerous specialty shops in the lower floors. In the old days business men and their employees used to live "over the shop." We may be coming back to that in the big cities, with apartment houses in the upper floors to house the people who work in the stores and offices below.

INSECTS

The other day at my farm home we started to replace a worn door sill. When we took the old board off, we found that black ants had eaten away the heavy timber which forms the sill of the house itself for a distance of several feet. We took out more than two keels of ants and about a pint of ant eggs, which then had the expensive job of fitting a new timber in place. The war between man and insects is relentless and unending. Along the country roads near my home I frequently meet this summer the U. S. Department of Agriculture "bug men" who are spraying trees in the effort to get rid of the Japanese beetle, our newest insect pest. I found a great colony of tent moths in an old pasture beyond my woodlot. A new pest is beginning to set up and make trees up our way; another is destroying the willows along the brook and river.

PRESSURE

Ice which will melt at a temperature of 180 degrees is the latest scientific curiosity. It has been produced by Professor P. W. Bridgman of Harvard University. All that is necessary to keep from melting under a thousand pounds to a pressure of 200,000 pounds to the square inch. Professor Bridgman's experiments with high pressures have given many surprising results. Many familiar substances change their characters under pressure, such as human beings do. Thirty-nine different metals become

The beautiful garden and lawn at the home of Mrs. J. D. Helmsen on South Chelmsford street was the scene on Saturday afternoon of a delightful social function when Mrs. Helmsen and Mrs. R. W. Balch entertained at the kitchen shower in honor of Miss Wilhelmina Zitzman who will become the bride of John S. Lampert of Orange within a fortnight. A number of beautiful gifts each, harmonizing with a kitchen done in ivory and green were received by the bride-elect. During the afternoon the guests amused themselves in henning tea bowls for use in the new house. Refreshments were served in the dining room, the coffee urn being pre-empted over by Mrs. Bode, while at the other end of the long table Mrs. Zitzman poured tea. The table was graced with a beautiful centerpiece of pink roses among which stood a tiny bride and groom. Ice in the form of wedding bells and cake were served. During the afternoon the guests were entertained with music by Spanish serenaders. Among the guests were the hostesses Mrs. Balch and Mrs. Helmsen, the guest of honor, Miss Wilhelmina Zitzman, Mrs. Earl Lampert, Mrs. D. Of course the hot weather might burn a pit of corn and make the price higher, but we believe that if we were a farmer we should prefer to have seventy-five cents a bushel than to have the price of corn two dollars a bushel and none to sell.

Mid-Summer Fertilization

The mid-summer season finds the "cann" orange grower busy locating and setting ready to apply organic fertilizer to his orchard. From now until Halloween, the last October, is the season for adding barnyard manure or equivalent materials to the soil. While October is generally considered to be the best month in which to add the organic fertilizers, yet there is yield or quality from mid-summer as compared with October applications of fertilizer. Higher prices for organic fertilizers, particularly barnyard manure, usually prevail in October. The resultant tendency, therefore, is to apply the organic fertilizer "before the rain".

While a good grade of barnyard manure is doubtless the best organic fertilizer to use, the limited quantity available necessitates the use of plant residues. Strawstack is the commonest of these, and the entire crop of the season is usually spoken for in advance of the harvest, or immediately thereafter. This material contains, on the average, three times the amount of nitrogen that manure does. It is one to look the same way next March as good quality has been offered for sale at a price comparable with other fertilizing materials. Alfalfa hay contains, on the average, two percent of nitrogen, or four times the quality found in common manure. If much shading of the leaves has occurred and the alfalfa is very straw-like in texture, the nitrogen content will be reduced to approximately 1.25 per cent, thereby losing over one-fourth of its value. The groves, on the whole, are looking and doing well at this time, but the grower should not forget that if they are to look the same way next March the organic nitrogen and the soil humus should be built up at this season. From one to three pounds of nitrogen per acre and age of the trees. A cubic foot of manure will weigh from 25 to 26 pounds. Crock raddies are sold entirely by the ton.

Turkey Whips Snake
If you ever should be asked to bet on a fight between a turkey and a rattlesnake—bet on the turkey. Ritchie Hayden, rancher near Santa Rosa, came on the climax of a contest between these two strange adversaries. The snake had fastened its fangs in the quills at the base of the feathers. The turkey in attacking the assailant had pecked the reptile's head nearly off. Venom of the snake had failed to affect the hollow quill of the turkey.

Invading the North

Bring on your championship night indoor ball teams. The Atmos club of Chico, head of the Valencis basketball league in Pomona, is leaving for a trip to Crater Lake, Ore., August 15. As the 25 players will pass through the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys, they are anxious to schedule a few games of commerce of civic organization. Correspondence should be addressed to the Chico Chamber of Commerce.

The players will return home via the Redwood highway on the Coast Route.
