

Between the Headlines

By Fleetwood Lawton

THIS "PHONY WAR"—Not so phony now are the innumerable grand sand quarterbacks who, until a few weeks ago, were denouncing the European war as a "phony." These parlor strategists can now read at a safe distance, of carnage and horror enough to satisfy even their bloodthirsty demands.

Now it Duce has led Italy over the cliff and into the abyss of war. All that he has achieved for his country, and it has unquestionably been much indeed, with all that might have been gained through the ways of peace, will be offered as hostage to hate, envy, and greed. For months Mussolini has been seated at the gaming table without making a bet, now he seems decided to risk everything on a single spin of the wheel.

In entering the war, Mussolini is gambling, not only on the eventual result of the war, but also on its duration. In all the world, no first class nation is less able than Italy to stand the strain of a long war. The Italian press has been full of boasts that eight million men will leap to arms at the command, but lack of leather will mean that fully half of them will leap beforefoot. Fascist leaders picture Italy as a steel guillotine, poised to sever Britain's lifeline, but no nation is more vulnerable to attack from aid and sea, and even Italian economists admit that after six months of war, Italy's position will have become desperate through lack of essential supplies. Most of the materials which the Rome end of the axis lacks are scarce at the Berlin end. From a psychological point of view, also, Italy is in a weak position. The Italian public knows far more of the causes and background of this war than do the Germans. The average Italian is definitely against the idea of going to war at all, but if he must fight he probably would prefer to fight for some other cause than Hitler's, alongside some other ally than Germany. Even today Germany and the Germans are far from popular south of the Brenner Pass.

Mussolini can force war on his people, but to make them like it, or even endure it, he must have a speedy string of flashy and not too expensive victories, and the war must be over before Italy's peak effort and through lack of supplies, that is, within six months. If the big German offensive against Paris fails to knock France out of action, then the war seems certain to settle down into a marathon, and Italy is strictly a sprinter. And even if complete victory over the allies is won, Italians are uneasy that it may be a wholly German victory, with Italy no more than the tail on the Nazi kite.

UNEASY NEIGHBORS—From Washington, D. C., eyes are turned southward to Latin America these days as the old Monroe doctrine becomes the new policy of hemisphere defense. General Marshall, the army chief, and other important personages, hint broadly that there are definite possibilities of unpleasant happenings below the Rio Grande. Undoubtedly, if he wishes to use them, Hitler has at his hand ready means for troublemaking in South America.

In area, Brazil is the largest nation in the southern half of this continent. Brazil has untold wealth of mineral resources, virtually undeveloped, she is agriculturally rich, and, as a strategic base, she could dominate South America. Add to this the fact that she is very thinly populated, and has experienced a decade or more of political instability, and you have from every point to view a prize to inspire the dreams of any ambitious dictator. And when Hitler dreams, he schemes to bring his dreams to reality.

Brazil's political weakness, which has led to two large scale civil wars and many rebellions or attempted rebellions in the past ten years, can be traced directly to the fact that the nation's political and financial center of gravity are apart both geographically and in interest. The capital of Brazil is Rio de Janeiro, but her financial capital is the city of Sao Paulo. It is the Sao Paulo that you will find the heart of the coffee industry, of the meat, the fruit, and of many other vital Brazilian industries.

The bulk of Brazil's tax collections are made, as a result of this state of affairs, in Sao Paulo and the other highly productive southern regions of the nation. Yet, politically, the comparatively poor (Continued on page 2)

He also congratulated the people of the city for their patience, adding that they had not harassed the company under a situation that they knew needed improvement. "We appreciate your tolerance," he said.

Millions Expended
MacKie called attention to the fact that the Santa Fe company had spent millions in improving its cars, engines and track during the period of lax business, pointing out that the equipment must be kept in shape to serve the public. He also advised his audience that the Santa Fe has constructed several new stations in southern California cities in recent years and the present plans call for a new depot in Pomona as well as Anaheim. Both stations will be erected simultaneously.

The assistant general manager did not mention the cost of new station to be erected here.

Life of Service Urged in Sermon

Graduating students of Anaheim union high school, their relatives and friends were urged to give lives to the service of God and man by Rev. H. G. Schmelzer, pastor of the Bethel Baptist church, when he spoke at the annual baccalaureate services at the high school auditorium Sunday evening. Service of one or the other alone is not enough, both must be served, the minister said.

Rev. Dymmel also pointed out to the graduates that each of them is an original creation and each has a specific place in life. The lowest workman is as important in life as the highest, he said. Special music was furnished by students during the services. The scripture lesson was read by Rev. A. C. Mamath, while the invocation was asked by Rev. Stanley Frederick George and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Don Earl Boatman.

Commencement exercises will be held at the city park amphitheater at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Old Friendships Renewed During Pioneer Reunion

Annual Picnic Attracts Many People from Southern California Cities

Former days in Anaheim were more important than present days when descendants of Pioneers and old-time residents of Anaheim assembled in the beautiful city park for their annual picnic reunion last Saturday noon. Although smaller in number than last year, due largely to the unpleasantness of the day, the group was as enthusiastic as ever in welcoming friends of many years standing many of whom are seen only at the annual reunions.

As is customary, approximately half of the assemblage came from outside of Anaheim. Many were from Fullerton, Placentia and Los Angeles, while others came from other southern California cities.

L. A. Lewis Officiates
As in the past many years, L. A. (Fayette) Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lewis, was master of ceremonies during the short, informal program which followed the picnic luncheon. He introduced Miss Elenora A. Parker, regent of Mother Colony chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, sponsors of the reunion, who said a brief word of welcome to the group.

Among those attending the reunion for the first time were Mrs. T. A. Darling of San Fernando and Mrs. Lillian Robinson Lawrence of Los Angeles. Mrs. Darling, who was Miss Adeline Agular, one of the belles of early times, married T. A. Darling, well-known railroad man, who for many years was Southern Pacific agent at West Anaheim, afterwards Los Angeles, during this time the old street car line on Center street connected the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe stations, meeting all trains on each line.

Miss Lillian Robinson was a belle of a later date. She married Will Lawrence, grandson of Dr. W. N. Hardin, pioneer physician of Anaheim, and for many years lived in Arizona. She now resides in Los Angeles.

Edward Bustamante of Los Angeles, who was born in Anaheim and is proud of it, also attended (Continued on page 3)

Negligence Found Cause of Mishap Saturday Evening

Operator of Motorcycle is Blamed by Coroner's Jury for Death

Negligence on the part of the operator of the motorcycle which crashed into the rear of an automobile driven by Charles A. Milam, 20, of 426 South Vine street, Anaheim, was found by a coroner's jury to be the cause of the accident which brought death to Ray O. Curry, 26, of 431 Cypress street, Laguna Beach, Saturday night. The jury was unable from the evidence to determine whether Curry or his companion, Harvard H. Walker, 24, owner of the motorcycle, was the operator at the time of the fatal accident. Walker was badly hurt and is in Orange county hospital. The inquest was conducted Tuesday morning at the chapel of Bucks-Terry & Campbell. The crash occurred Saturday night at 9:10 o'clock in the 800 block of South Los Angeles street.

Hit Rear of Car
According to testimony given at the inquest, the Laguna Beach men were travelling north on Los Angeles street when the motorcycle crashed into the rear of the automobile operated by Milam. Curry and Walker were thrown to the pavement by the impact and the former was believed to have been killed instantly. Milam had difficulty retaining control of his car following the crash, he told the jury.

C. C. Crew of Fullerton, who witnessed the accident, testified that he was driving about a block behind Milam and that the motorcycle passed him at a rapid rate of speed shortly before the crash. The broken speedometer on the motorcycle registered 82 miles an hour, but Wilfred R. Duarte of Laguna Beach, the identification witness, testified that the speedometer was out of order and that the needle had pointed to the same figure when he saw it at about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

An enthusiastic meeting of citizens interested in the establishment of a cannery and fruit dryer in Anaheim assembled at Kroeger's hall on Saturday afternoon last, in response to an invitation extended in these columns last week. The meeting was called in view of the prevalence of a report that Cook & Langley, the fruit-shipping firm, had purchased the Fullerton cannery, and that it was deemed advisable to have the business settled at this point. This report, however, was premature, but a discussion of the merits of a cannery and fruit dryer was entered into. Messrs. Sorenson, Keith, Rimpau, Zeyn, Littlefield, Porter, Henry, Carroll, Crowther and P. Davis spoke favorably upon the subject. Much of our fruit now going to waste could be utilized and other fruit now being shipped to Riverside where it is dried and placed upon the market with the Riverside label could be utilized here at home. Tim Carroll agreed to contribute a lot of land near the Southern Pacific depot with side track, free of charge, as a site for the establishment. Finally a motion prevailed that the meeting adjourn until next Saturday afternoon at the same place, there and then to perfect arrangements for the organization of a cannery and fruit dryer to elect officers and give attention to such other business as may properly come before the meeting. An invitation is extended to all fruit-growers in the valley to the present.

A petition is being circulated and numerous signed, to be presented to the city trustees, to have dirt streets abutting residence property sprinkled the entire distance. A new order has been given that sprinkling is to begin 50 feet from either side of all intervening paved streets. This leaves a strip of road that gets very dusty and full of chuck holes, greatly to the annoyance of residents. The petitioners ask that the water wagon traverse the entire distance over the dirt roads, as the dust from the unsprinkled strip is in many localities unbearable, especially in summer.

He was one of the leaders in the fight for the formation of Orange county and was a member of its first board of supervisors. He lived to see the town he founded grow to a city of 14,000.

northern states usually dominate the picture. So the Paulistas, feeling they lack a political voice in keeping with their financial importance, have frequently rebelled against northern-elected administrations.

So the rivalry between Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo has kept Brazil a nation divided, and wherever there is any such national dissunity, there you will find a fertile field for the fifth columns of Nazism, Fascism, Communism. Large and influential German populations in Sao Paulo and throughout the Brazilian southern states, Sao Paulo and Porto Alegre have often been described as virtually German cities, add to Hitler's opportunity. In the past the combination of a rich prize and the means to secure it have always meant action to the dictators. Washington obviously fears today that the old pattern may be in process of repetition as the United States uneasily watches her neighbors to the South.

MACHINE-AGE WAR — Reaches after the event are useless, but perhaps the process which led to Germany's present numerical superiority over the allies in the engines of modern warfare may serve as a warning elsewhere.

The fact of Germany's advantage is not, of itself, surprising since the entire German nation has been little else but a gigantic arms factory for years. "Guns not butter" has long been the Nazi watchword. But the extent, at least to one, of Germany's machine supremacy over the combined allies is startling. It is not the fault of the allies being unable to keep up with Germany's rate of production, for they could have outproduced her by far. It was that they just failed to make the effort. In 1938, when the Nazi factories were turning out the swarms of tanks and developing the planes which won the battle of Flanders, France was in the midst of the famous sit down strikes which all but paralyzed her industry. Britain was counting the cost of the armaments which probably would have been adequate insurance against war. Undoubtedly many of these men who were sit down strikers in pre-war France are now lying under the soil, their lives sacrificed by the lack of those weapons which they themselves failed to produce.

Prime minister Chamberlain made speeches when action was essential, and his words are now being paid for with young lives by the thousand. Germany produced tanks, the democracies produced only talk. Duff Cooper, now British minister of information, has revealed that, even after the Munich conference, when British lack of preparedness stood revealed for all the world to see, Chamberlain did not speed up rearmament.

It is estimated that the largest crowd ever within our gates, was in town on Thursday evening, when the new ornamental lights were turned on. All the downtown streets were packed with people from all over Orange county, and all available parking space for autos was occupied, extending to many outlying streets.

Robert Wilson has sold the City bakery to B. Jensen who takes possession of the place on Monday.

John Hanna was in town on Tuesday afternoon from his walnut ranch at Miraflores accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Emma M. Polhemus. Mr. Hanna is hale and hearty in his 85th year, and can tell many a story of reminiscences of his residence here during the past 45 years. He settled here first in 1870, purchasing several sections of land southwest of town. For a number of years he has resided at Miraflores, where he has one of the finest walnut groves in Southern California.

Miss Veda Walker left Friday for the north. She will spend a few weeks at California University before visiting her home in Iowa.

Johnny Fisher was a business visitor in Los Angeles Monday.

Two thousand people gathered at Newport Beach Sunday to enjoy the hospitality of the local Eagles. Ample provision had been made to feed the people. The special train from Anaheim left here at 9 o'clock. The Anaheim band accompanied the special and furnished excellent music during the day. Ron Joe Burke gave the address of welcome and Hon. Chas. Lyon of Los Angeles, state president, gave the address of the day.

Born—June 15, to the wife of Mason Squires, a boy.

In fact, the prime minister deliberately slowed up the pace of the British armament program. Apparently he was convinced that his talks with Hitler had ended the danger of war, for many years at least. It was not until Italy seized Albania and Germany invaded Bohemia and Moravia that high speed armament was attempted. Chamberlain admitted only that he had been mistaken.

In his most recent speech, Prime Minister Churchill said courage alone was not enough, since man could not stand up against the steel of machines. He described the battle of Flanders as a colossal military disaster. But he did not say what many must be thinking, that adequate supplies of planes and tanks probably would have averted that disaster, have saved Belgium, that the lack Investigating officers learned that Howry attempted to board a moving Santa Fe freight train, lost his grip and fell under the train. His leg was so badly crushed that amputation was necessary. Howry was taken to the Orange county hospital.

Log of Life

by

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

Thank you, "Orion" for your question which is repeated below for the benefit of the loggers. It's a good subject upon which to think and my comments come straight from people who are active in the movement to frustrate the mad attempts to destroy all culture and drive the people back into the prison of the work ages: "Last year, Mrs. Lindsey, you commented in your column on the picture, 'Lost Horizon,' and then told how, at a meeting in the Los Angeles University club you had heard of the work of a group who were spiriting out of the Asiatic war zones as many as possible of the agencies of culture and storing them in a great valley in western China. If you could tell me more of this effort or direct me to a place where I could secure this information I would appreciate it very much. O. H."

There were several hundred people at that luncheon, the guests of the Chinese consul at Los Angeles. Among them were world travelers, authors, physicians who had worked in hospitals and laboratories in China, teachers who had been bombed out of their places by the Japanese army, physical instructors, missionaries and editors. These people were and are the wise men and women of the twentieth century. They listened as I did, breathless, to the story of a modern flight into Egypt a flight with books and apparatus, formulas and instruments, the minimum of scientific knowledge, which they had been able to salvage from the Japanese bombs and to the Japanese army by Americans.

That flight is as real as the typewriter on which I am now working. The valley is a secret place deep in a Himalayan valley in southwestern China. The location is known only to those who have the venture in hand and it cannot be given out for fear of the loss of what the ages have yielded for the benefit of man. That is the story, I think it inspiring and thrilling and for it the whole world is debtor to China.

Q—I have many dogs and I hate dog tax. Can you tell me what zany started it?—Dog Lover. A—The zany who started it was one George Clark, a member of the British parliament in 1791. His bill was overwhelmingly defeated but other zany took up the idea and waited about the food consumed by "useless" dogs. The bill became law in 1796, fathered this time by a man named Dent. We've had it ever since. Our dog tax law was copied from the English law.

Q—Does a birth announcement mean a gift? I want my friends to know about our baby but do not wish them to send gifts.—M. H. A—There is no obligation to send a gift to every new baby. Such things devolve only on the families and very close friends. And their gifts would be voluntary.

Every man feels instinctively that all the beautiful sentiments in the world weigh less than a single lovely action.—James R. Lowell.

CLEAN OUT 'FIFTH COLUMN'

Californians were glad to hear Governor Olson's announcement of a few days ago that he was opposed to 'fifth column' activities in the United States, and particularly in California.

But, perhaps the people of this great state would be far more appreciative if immediate steps were taken by the governor, together with the present state administration, to rid the state of the known radicals and alien sympathizers who are presently working for the government of California.

The recent investigation by the legislature of the administration of relief in our state demonstrated the amazing lengths to which that department of government had embraced, downright un-American principles, and, in many instances, to which it had gone in hiring members of the Communist party themselves.

But it is not alone in that state department that the appointment of starry-eyed visionaries has taken place. It is true, of course, that the family on relief represents the most easily malleable group for the agitator to work upon, hence the agitator's desire for employment in that department. A person who is forced upon relief for his very livelihood is ripe for the unctuous drivel of the radical's tongue.

Take a look at the appointments which were announced a few days ago from the intelligence unit of the national guard. This is the part of our home defense which has to do with investigation, military intelligence, and confidential reports. When the names of the several individuals mentioned for that service were first made public, rather severe denunciations were heard; demands were made that the matter should be made the subject for investigation.

Yesterday, the governor announced that the appointments, or at least some of them, would not be made.

It may well be that none of the men suggested for appointment to the intelligence service are alien sympathizers at all. But it seems to many patriotic people of California that men who are suggested for that type of public service—particularly in these trying days—ought to be so uncompromisingly loyal to the nation and so fully known for their views and feelings in that regard, that no man or woman in all the state could even mildly suggest their unfitness—either on the basis of military experience, or on the more important basis of love to country.

No one should impugn the motives of any citizen, in or out of public life, in the absence of clear and convincing proof. But, in these days, or in any days, for that matter, men in the state government who are known to hold alien ideals, ought to be summarily removed by their department heads, or by or through the governor. And in the future, none such ought to be appointed to state positions.

AMAZING LABOR LAW

If anyone around here is still of the opinion that the federal labor laws don't need considerable overhauling, at once, the news out of Washington this week ought to settle, with finality, the imperative necessity of their immediate revamping.

What should an American employer do when he finds that among his employees, there are alien agitators of any kind or description? All Americans, particularly in view of the horrible hours through which Europe is now passing, would quickly say that such employees, when discovered, ought to be immediately discharged by the employer, and that, thereafter, they ought to be dealt with one way or the other by the government.

Any firm which continued to employ a foreign agent would rightly be termed either childishly foolish and weak, or un-American itself.

But a leading Washington writer this week confirms the dreary truth that there is only one course open, legally, for the employer of such a person. Nothing can be done!

It seems that an American aviation manufacturer has given the G-men of the federal department of justice free access to his plant for several months; some of them working there as employees. A few days ago, he received information, obtained by Allied agents abroad, giving the names of foreign agents working in his plant. Stunned, the manufacturer went to Washington to see what could be done.

The answer was: "nothing could be done." To discharge some of these men would cause a strike in his plant, and there is no law which permits a discharge for suspected political activities. If the FBI agents report that a certain employee is a communist, the matter ends there. Not until the communist commits some act of sabotage, can he be removed.

Perhaps congress would do well to take care of a few of the matters of this kind which have been brought to its attention before it thinks of adjourning and going home.

An important point, apparently overlooked by critics, is the very natural inquiry: Who or what organization paid for the radio time used by Charles Lindbergh, recently when he said "powerful elements" and "a small minority" are trying to push this nation into the European war. One thing certain, no broadcasting company gave Lindbergh the time on the air without pay. Such time is far too costly, and might, instead, have been used for the cultural entertainment provided by Charlie McCarthy for twelve-year olds.

Lindbergh is still a hero in the minds of many Americans, but they seem to have forgotten that his successful flight across the sea did not suddenly endow him with the wisdom needed to discuss our foreign policies. A year or so ago he addressed the nation airily dismissing the world's convulsions as none of our business. We admire Lindbergh, of course, as a fine example of American young manhood, but we must remember that, after all, he is not an oracle, he is simply a remarkably expert flier. And that is about all. His association with a great scientist in developing the "iron lung" shows him to be a serious-minded young man. But he is scarcely competent to advise a nation.

If you chance to be an average American to whom a hundred dollars is a very important matter; if it gives you a twist of the heart to read about the billions we are now spending, or soon will spend for defense; if, also, you fear the country may be bankrupted soon, it will give you a feeling of new courage to hear that in March, this year, the 5148 active national banks in the U. S., Alaska, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands had assets amounting to nearly 36 billion dollars, the highest ever reported in the national banking system. Deposits had jumped to nearly 32 billions, nearly four billions more than in March a year ago.

KEY! KEEP YOUR MIND ON OUR BUSINESS!

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

EDITOR'S NOTE: Crisis faces California; crisis faces the nation. With the rest of the world, rocking on its foundations, what can our country do to keep on an even keel and avert disaster? More particularly, what can the farmer do? What must he do, if he expects to stay in business, if he wants to be running his own farm—instead of working in a regimented society—ten years hence? These vital questions are discussed by Ralph H. Taylor, farm leader and veteran student of government, in a series of four challenging articles for this newspaper, of which this is the first.

In New York harbor, the Statue of Liberty still holds aloft its torch of freedom—lighting the port of entry to a nation where a man's religion, his political opinions and his choice of an occupation are his own private business, and not to be tampered with.

There is nothing news-worthy in that statement, you may remark; the Statue of Liberty has been there ever since we can remember. This is the United States of America.

But the subject can't be dismissed that easily. Finland was a democracy—a splendid, progressive democracy—just a few months ago. Demark has been a peaceful, inoffensive nation, troubling no one and untroubled by others, for many generations. In Holland, when disaster came, the fields were laden with the beauty of tulip-time, just as they had been in years before. And Belgium, ravished in the World War of 20 years ago, had done nothing to invite a new attack on her liberties, but Belgium, today, is the puppet state of Nazi Germany; her farmers working to feed those who despoiled them.

True, Hitler's legions—and, in the case of Finland, Stalin's communist comrades—blew out the torch of liberty in those countries. And there is at least no immediate likelihood, so far as we know, that either Hitler or Stalin is planning a frontal attack on America. Equally true, the United States is at last aroused and is preparing her national defense, so that if and when the totalitarian powers launch a blitzkrieg against us, we shall be able to match planes with planes, and tanks with tanks. But the war-torn countries of Europe had been "softened up" long before they were invaded, by treachery and poisonous propaganda; by an easy tolerance of "isms" and vicious terms, which weakened their foundations—and made them an easy prey to the invader.

The United States has been "softened up," too; California has been "softened up"; our whole economic and social system has been under constant attack for more than a decade. And it is time that we stopped deluding ourselves admitted the worst, and made preparations to see that it doesn't happen again—for this country, not yet through its crisis of depression, is now entering on a new crisis, in which billions will be spent for defense, and in which other billions may be wasted by power-drunk, bureaucratic officials, unless the American people refuse to be hoodwinked.

Every farmer, who has been amazed at the gradual encroachment of bureaucratic government on his business—who has been irked by constantly mounting restrictions of government bureaus and departments—needs to pause now, and take account of stock. Strong nations, like the United States, are not overthrown in a day; nor a month, nor a year; they are slowly gutted and emasculated. A bit of liberty is clipped here—for a promise of greater security there; a new tax is levied on top of other taxes, usually in the name of an emergency; then another tax, and another—and finally, perhaps, the farmer finds himself regimented, not by some foreign dictator, but by his constant caller, the tax collector.

There is no disposition on the part of this writer to decry or oppose the war taxes, or preparedness taxes, which are well on their way to enactment. This country must take out insurance against Europe's firebrands—adequate insurance. And California and the nation are prepared for sacrifice. But the economic depression, which started in 1929, and which still endures, has been used as an excuse for the most unbridled, unwarranted era of governmental extravagance in America's history. Because farmers and business men, home owners and workers, were stirred by the plight of their less fortunate countrymen, and were willing to give until it hurt, politics with human misery and conscienceless politicians played politics with human misery and spent money like drunken sailors—at a rate of ten cents for the needy, and 90 cents for the greedy. And the present threat of war—the present admitted need for national preparedness—may again be used as an excuse for a new period of squandering and governmental usurpation of the rights and privileges of the individual, unless the people who still believe in liberty think enough of it to crack down on every bureaucrat who seeks to abridge it. That is the reason for this series of articles, and in succeeding columns we hope to point out the dangers on the horizon.

A Woman Looks On

By MARY PATTERSON ROUTT
The resignation of Secretary Edison of the Navy Department, effective June 24, is a welcome event. It is to be hoped the vacancy will be filled by a bona fide appointment. The navy has had no real functioning head for years. Secretary Swanson's illness covering most of the period of his incumbency and, finally, his death left the duties of the office to be performed by subordinates. Mr. Edison's term of office has been merely a stepping stone for his personal ambitions—an inexcusable use for so important a post as the Secretaryship of the United States Navy.

Mr. Edison's resignation should be the signal for several other Cabinet retirements, voluntary or otherwise. This column has grieved for years over the weakness of the personnel of President Roosevelt's cabinet. Even in tranquil and easy going days, the official family of the United States government should be built from the strongest timber available in the nation. But now that days have come upon us which are anything but tranquil, the fact that the country's Cabinet is not equal to the terrific responsibilities which it must assume becomes a matter of concern to all American citizens.

At least three additional changes in the Cabinet should be made immediately, War, Commerce and Labor.

Since conditions have arisen which make it imperative that the War Department should function with one hundred percent efficiency and harmony, the situation which has existed in the war portfolio for more than two years should not be tolerated another day. Mr. Woodring's appointment was little more than a political reward in the first place and President Roosevelt himself never has regarded his war secretary as anything more important than a chair or a footstool in the War Department's office. The jealous feud which has existed between Mr. Woodring and the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Johnson, has become so bitter that the two "gentlemen" cannot tolerate each other's presence.

Harry Hopkins received his appointment as Secretary of Commerce as a Christmas present, December 24, 1938, when his health was so precarious that he was unable to be much more than a name for the department's office door. He has been ill most of the time since his appointment and his responsibilities have been shouldered by Under-secretary Edward J. Noble and other assistants.

Appointment of Frances Perkins as Secretary of Labor was a blunder and nothing she has done in her years of service has altered that fact. Miss Perkins appears to be changing her stubborn attitude toward subversive activities in this country, but the pardon comes too late. In the period ahead of us, when labor will be forced to take so significant and heavy a part in our defense preparations it is necessary that the Labor Department be managed by an exceedingly capable man.

Guidebook Path to Stretch Across Nation

Miss "Southern California," a Welcome to the All-Year Club, the community's youth organization, walks the path of guidebooks that will bring tourists to Southern California this year. The All-Year Club is printing more than 300,000 copies of guidebooks and trip planners. This is 4100 miles of pages of printed matter about Southern California. It could reach from here to New York with a side path to Florida.

Vocation Survey Forces Assemble

Miss Irene Case is Chairman of the Committee for Anaheim Area

Local chairmen this week assembled their forces for the first survey of occupations ever made in Orange county.

Miss Irene Case, heads the Anaheim committee, it was announced today by Genevieve Humiston, chairman of the Occupational Survey committee of Orange county. Every employer in this area will be contacted, and questions will be asked regarding each occupation in his business. A few samples of the questions follow: Whether the occupation is permanent, part-time, or temporary; age preference, experience required, training required and beginning and average wages. The peak and slack months of employment will be determined together with information regarding school subjects which are most important in the business. Employers will be asked from what principal sources they secure workers, whether from vocational schools, junior colleges, high schools; private employment agencies; public employment agencies; recommendation of friends; personal contact of applicant; unions; or other sources.

Miss Humiston stated that a recapitulation of this information will reveal to the schools and other interested public bodies just what the potential work opportunities are in Orange county. "As an example," Miss Humiston said, "if it is revealed that there are 300 actual stenographic and typist jobs available in Orange county, and the department of employment shows that there are 300 unemployed typists and stenographers and there are 150 of these classifications entering the labor market annually, the schools will be in a position to adjust their courses accordingly. On the other hand if it develops that there is a shortage of qualified workers in certain occupations, then the schools will be able to pass on this information to students and others so that these shortages may be corrected."

Several employers have requested that special courses of instruction be added to the school curriculum in order to better fit both students and adults for the employment in this county, it was said.

Miss Humiston again urges that employers cooperate in this important survey.

Jaysee's Yearbook Widely Acclaimed

Editor William O'Connor and other members of the staff of the Fullerton Junior college Annual Torch are receiving congratulations on the outstanding yearbook issued by the college last week.

The annual carries a color photo on its cover and has 160 pages with photos in a "candid" vein covering all student organizations and notables.

O'Connor was assisted in several months of intensive work by staff members and Wilbur Korsmeier, publicity man for the school. The result, according to experts, is definitely beyond the ordinary.

Walks, Talks With Nature

THE GHOST FLOWER—In the vegetable world there is a process known as photosynthesis, to which all plants owe their existence through the ability of their roots and green leaves to mix water from the soil and carbon dioxide from the atmosphere into nourishing liquids and solids to form the complex molecules of food substances.

True, this is the basic foundation upon which all life stands, for even the animal kingdom is dependant for its existence upon plants foods. Such is the law. But there is always an exception to prove the rule. In this instance it is the white ghostly plant known as the Indian Pipe.

The ghost flower, monotropa uniflora, certainly deserves special mention as one of the outstanding freaks in Mother Nature's old curiosity shop. Its white ghostly stems are uncanny to behold, yet handsome, when encountered in shadowy hollows in our deep pine and oak woods.

Almost a true parasite, the Indian Pipe does not manufacture its own food, but plunders the juices from the roots of its self-supporting neighbors. Evidence of its low estate is seen in its colorless bracts along its stem that once were green leaves of self-sustaining ancestors.

Yungbluth Marks Store Re-opening to Start Tomorrow to Fete Completion of Modernization

Tomorrow, F. A. Yungbluth's men's furnishings store celebrates the virtual completion of extensive modernization activity by opening a store-wide sale.

"Remodeling and decorating of the store is my way of expressing confidence in the future of Anaheim," Yungbluth said yesterday in an interview with a Gazette reporter. "We all know that conditions have been difficult during the past few years, but I have utmost faith in this community and I know we will soon again see the prosperity that has marked most of the history of Anaheim."

Modernization of the store was done thoroughly and completely. It includes a new marquee, new display windows, new or re-dressed show cases and cabinets, re-arrangement of merchandise to departments, complete fluorescent lighting of the store and windows and other minor improvements.

Sun-Tan Glass

Edging the plate glass of the display windows are sections of new sun-tan glass which add greatly to the appearance of the building. A special feature of the display windows is the specially constructed backs which provide separate and changeable sections in which to place the displays of merchandise.

Across the top of the marquee will be a large sign bearing the name "Yungbluth's" in steel letters fronted by fluorescent neon tubing. The sign will add considerable brightness to the appearance of Center street during the evenings, Yungbluth believes.

Installation of fluorescent lighting in the store was started some time ago. Its completion makes Yungbluth's one of the few stores so lighted. Principal feature of fluorescent lighting is that it gives a daytime-like light and displays the colors of merchandise exactly as they will appear in the sunlight.

Over 40 Years in Business

F. A. "Fritz" Yungbluth started in business in Anaheim more than 40 years ago with the firm conviction that, if Anaheim grew and prospered, his business would grow and prosper. With that conviction in mind, Yungbluth has worked steadily and earnestly for the betterment of this community.

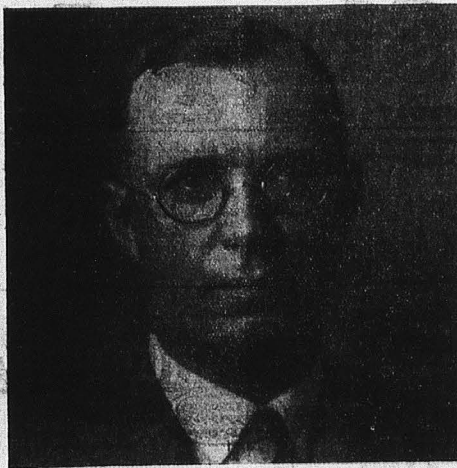

Yungbluth started his career in Anaheim as a youth, as apprentice to his uncle, Fred Crist, a merchant tailor. He later purchased the business upon the death of his uncle and established the present concern.

During the early part of 1902, Yungbluth and Louis Kroeger formed a partnership in a men's furnishings store, the former also continuing his tailoring business. After many years of successful partnership, Yungbluth and Kroeger foresaw that Anaheim was soon to grow large enough to support two men's furnishings stores and, as a result, they dissolved partnership and established separate businesses.

Tailoring First Love

In spite of the complete stock of nationally-known men's clothing now carried in the store, Yungbluth's first love still is tailoring. Men from far and near who desire the best in either domestic or imported materials come to Yungbluth to have their suits made.

Yungbluth migrated to the United States at the age of 15 years from his birthplace in Dier-dorf, near Coblenz, in Rhine province of Germany. He came directly to Anaheim and has continued to make his home here.

Many and varied are the activities he has engaged in for the civic betterment of Anaheim. As a youth he served for eight years with the California National Guard, rising to the rank of first sergeant. He saw active duty in San Francisco following the fire and earthquake there in 1906. Each year he gives a dinner to members of Co. K., 15th Infantry, before their departure for camp.

Booster Body Founder

He was one of the founders of the Anaheim Chamber of Commerce and has served as a director many terms and as its president several years.

Yungbluth was president of the California Valencia Orange Show in 1928.

The veteran merchant is now a member of the city council. He was appointed to the council in the fall of 1932 following the death of Mayor Fred Koesele. He completed that unexpired term and twice has been elected to succeed himself.

He takes pride in the fact that every bit of the modernization work done on his building during the past month was the work of Anaheim concerns wherever possible, with A. C. Vary the general contractor.

Large Sales Staff

Yungbluth's customers are served by a staff of five men in addition to the proprietor. Heading the list in the point of years service is Clayton Allen, secretary and bookkeeper, who has been with the firm since 1920. He is a member of the Lions club and Odd Fellows lodge and is active in other civic affairs.

Earl Crist, son of the man under whom Yungbluth learned the tailoring trade, has been with the firm most of the time during the past 15 years. He is a native of Anaheim and is widely and well known.

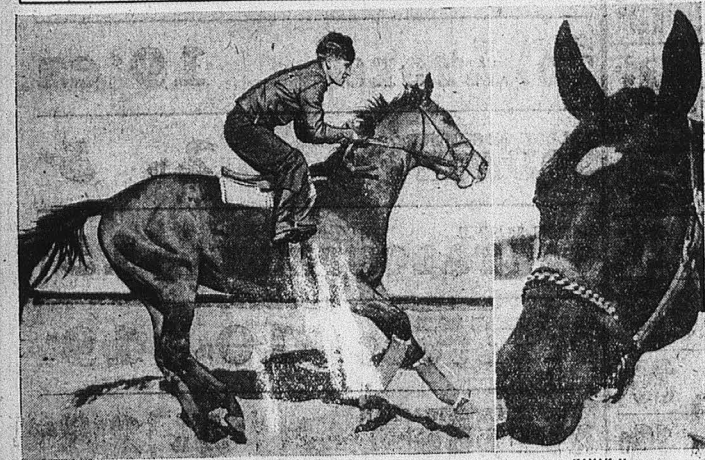

J. A. Rivers joined the sales staff last December, coming to Anaheim from Fullerton.

Edward Yungbluth, son of the proprietor, is also a valuable member of the staff.

Newest employee is Lee Treese, who joined the firm last Monday, coming to Anaheim from Huntington Park. He is an expert showman and advertising copy writer and window decorator and will also assist in the buying of merchandise.

Scientists say that 7 1/2 hours of sleep is plenty for a normal man or woman.

CHALLEON

KAYAK II

The two "Big Guns" of 1939 racing wars—Challeon and Kayak II—are likely to renew their turf feud next month at Hollywood Park in Inglewood, where a 47-day summer meeting is now underway. Both thoroughbreds, pictured above, are included in the long list of 49 nominations for the $50,000 added Gold Cup classic to be run on the Inglewood track July 27. Challeon rated as the Number One horse of 1939, with Kayak II runner-up.

Athletics Engage Chrysler Sunday

East Los Angeles Club Bows to Anaheim Last Sunday By Score of 7 to 0

Paul Holloway and his Chrysler Motors baseball club, comes to Anaheim's La Palma stadium next Sunday to tangle with Joe Huarte's Anaheim Athletics. The home-town crew took an easy 7 to 0 victory over East Los Angeles Merchants last Sunday afternoon, with Jim Glimpse, big left-hander Brea-Olinda high school hurler, doing the mound work.

Although he has added several new men to his line-up during the past few weeks, Huarte hasn't stopped trying to build up the best team available for the summer campaign. Two new players, Stew Lewis of Whittier and Ray Aming of Orange, both of whom played with the University of California varsity this spring, will probably join the club next Sunday. Lewis is the son of Fay Lewis and rates almost as an Anaheim boy.

Glimpse had no particular trouble with the East Los Angeles club last Sunday, allowing them only four hits. He loaded the bases in the ninth with two walks and a wild pitch, together with a defensive error, but got the side out without a run scoring.

After picking up single tallies in the second and sixth innings, the Athletics put the clincher on the contest with a five-run onslaught against Pitcher Hulchof in the eighth round. Catcher Bud McConnell and Glimpse rapped doubles during the big round, while Joe Heinz, Joe Klapper and Bud Stoffel each got singles. An error, walk and hit batsmen added Anaheim in its rally.

Ed Kragge's triple in the second inning was the longest blow of the day, and Kragge scored immediately afterwards on Klapper's infield out.

Everyone in the Anaheim line-up except Johnny Lan-Franco got at least one safety during the contest, with Heinz, Kragge and Glimpse hitting safely twice each.

Thefts Solved as Quartet Arrested

Arrest of four persons in Pomona cleared up several petty thefts in Anaheim, according to Police Chief James S. Bouldin. Those arrested were Robert W. Wilson and wife of Long Beach, and William Sanchez and wife, who gave their home as Anaheim. The property was recovered at the apartment occupied by the Wilsons.

The Long Beach man admitted to Pomona police the theft of a radio from the Fern Electric shop, an electric toaster and set of dishes from the Firestone Home and Auto Supply store, and an electric tiretool from the Larsen service station, Bouldin said.

The police chief said that he does not expect to prosecute the quartet here, as Pomona and Long Beach police departments are planning to prefer charges.

How Goes World?

By Austin Conover

OLD GLORY—Flag Day this year holds a more profound significance than it has done for many a decade. The steady and relentless sweep of dictatorship over vast sections of the earth is good cause for us to grieve ourselves anew to the American flag. As a free people in a liberty-loving nation, let us highly resolve to keep the flag flying and to hold to those principles for which it stands.

In the early colonial days, each state had a different flag. One of the most distinctive was that of South Carolina, emblazoned with the words, "Don't Tread on Me." In 1775 the Continental Congress considered the question of a single flag for the 13 states. Later it was first raised by John Paul Jones on the "Alfred," flagship of the U. S. Navy. For a while a stripe as well as a star was added to the flag for each state admitted to the Union. But in 1818 the original 13 stripes were re-established to remain unchanged.

Today, an every day throughout the year, Old Glory floats in silent majesty above our schoolhouses, public buildings and military barracks. It is a visible sign of our national unity. And we should honor it not only because it is the historic emblem of our freedom but because it is the symbol of our fair-play and square dealing among nations.

School to Offer Special Courses

Trustees of Fullerton union high school and junior college have authorized summer courses in three indispensable industries—aircraft sheet metal, machine shop and welding, it was announced yesterday.

Enrollment for the courses will begin at 8 o'clock next Monday morning. Classes will be held eight hours daily, five days a week, for eight weeks, it was said. The courses are designed to train men who are now out of employment to qualify for work in the industries. It is believed that everyone successfully taking the courses can be placed in private employment.

A flight training program, sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, was also authorized by the board. Theory courses will be given on the campus three evenings a week, with flying instruction to be given at the Fullerton airport. Eighty-six have applied for the course, but it is expected that only between 30 and 40 will be authorized by the CAA to take the course.

When a student becomes proficient an attempt will be made to get a placement in a packing house. This service meets with the approval of the various packing houses due to the fact that much time an effort has heretofore been wasted in teaching inexperienced persons.

Anaheim Officers Assist in Arrest

Long Beach Bandit Captured
In Orange Grove After
Exchange of Shots

A series of chases from downtown Long Beach to an orange grove in Orange county ended Tuesday afternoon when a fugitive bandit suspect, gun jammed, surrendered to peace officers near Placentia avenue and 101 highway. Defiant to the last, the prisoner, John R. Anderson, 27, alias William Hansen, is quoted by police as refusing to admit robberies attributed to him and expressing regret that he failed in an attempt to kill Detective L. R. Hall of Long Beach.

Two-way radio communication is credited with being the deciding factor in Anderson's arrest. Less than two minutes after he had been trapped at the edge of the orange grove, more than 25 police officers from Anaheim, Fullerton, Orange, Santa Ana, sheriff's office and California highway patrol were on the scene and closing in on the fugitive. The chase started in Long Beach when Hall and a fellow officer attempted to arrest Anderson and Granite W. Harrington, 25, while they were riding in an assertedly stolen automobile. Shots were exchanged before the suspects jumped from the car, and ran in different directions. Harrington was captured, but Anderson made his escape by stealing a second car and heading for Orange county.

Orange county roads quickly were blocked. On Garden Grove boulevard, Deputy Sheriffs Tom Murphine and Steve Dujart saw the fugitive but were outraced. They radioed the location and Deputies J. R. Ragan and Carl Pryor picked up the chase.

A farmer standing along side of Placentia avenue with a shovel in his hand fooled Anderson into thinking he was a police officer, and the fugitive attempted to turn around and back-track. His car, however, went into a ditch, with Ragan and Pryor in close pursuit. As the officers opened fire he disappeared in an orange grove.

Later, surrounded by officers and with his own gun jammed, he surrendered. Taken to Long Beach, he was booked for investigation of robbery, grand theft and assault with intent to commit murder.

Nine Anaheim officers participated in the chase and final capture. Officers on hand reported that Anderson attempted to shoot Highway Patrolman Jimmy Holcomb at close range, but that his gun jammed.

Grape Punch Base Being Introduced

Practically every store in Orange county is offering their patrons a new product this week end. The product is E. A. Silze's Citra-Gold Grape Punch Base, a small 6 ounce can of which will make one and a quarter quarts of grape punch.

Experts who have sampled the new drink are recommending it as one of the tastiest grape drinks on the market. Anaheim and vicinity housewives will have an opportunity to sample it at various stores this week-end.
